Hi! I'm Roxanne Miller, Civic Communications Specialist with University of Missouri Extension and Co-Chair of the 2006 Midwest Research-to-Practice conference. You will be listening to Dr. John Henschke, Extension Continuing Education Specialist and Associate Professor, University of Missouri-St. Louis.

John Henschke

I'm John Henschke, University of Missouri-St. Louis, and I want to say that this is the third time that we have had the privilege of having the Midwest Research-to-Practice conference here in adult continuing education at the University of Missouri-St. Louis. We had it in '89 and '99 and 2006 and we are even more excited than what we were those other times of having the group here this time because of the new innovations that we are trying in the technology advances that have taken place between the last conferences and this particular one.

University of Missouri-St. Louis

I want to say something about my excitement is not just because you're coming here but it's an excitement that I find each time that I go to one of these conferences - and this is my 24th one, although I missed the first one that we had - I want to go home each time with at least one or two ideas. And I feel like a conference is successful if I can do that and go home and take and use that idea.

And so, there are others that are going to be on this welcoming and one of the others is Joe Levine, who has been with us, maybe not quite as many times as I have but just about, and he's going to be our keynote speaker. We're excited about the fact that he's going to be doing that.
