Learn about a wide variety of quality adolescent literature available for reading and study in middle school and high school classes.
Examine the theory and practice in reading and teaching adolescent literature with a focus on multicultural/multiethnic literature.

Participants will learn how to:
- Teach quality reader response to literature.
- Manage large-group and small-group discussions.
- Conduct small-group conferences.
- Select adolescent literature suitable for interdisciplinary studies as well as contemporary literature that complements the “classics.”
- Promote adolescent literature as extracurricular reading.
- Design lessons that integrate adolescent literature into the curriculum.
