State funding increase sought

Lacey Burnette

The University of Missouri has asked the state of Missouri for a funding increase of over $29 million for general operations during the 1982-83 fiscal year. The fiscal year begins on July 1, 1982. This year the university was allocated $170.2 million by the state. The university is asking for $199.5 million for next year.

More than two-thirds of the requested increase is for inflation adjustment. Of the $29 million, $20 million is earmarked for inflation adjustment, $3 million for compensation improvements, and $6 million for program requirements. Included in the program requirements for

"...in times of economic difficulty, investment in the University should be of highest priority."

—UM President James C. Olson

UMSL is funding for the schools of Optometry and Nursing, library improvements, upgrading of the AOJ program, and improvements in the business education, MBA, studio art, and mass communications programs.

University President James C. Olson has designated adequate compensation for faculty and staff as the university's most critical need. In the president's message to the appropriations request, Olson said, "Because the university is not competitive in salaries and wages, it faces great difficulty in recruiting and retaining experienced and qualified people, both faculty and staff. And a university is only as good as its faculty and staff."

According to figures in the appropriations request, salaries for faculty, administrative, and professional personnel are 14.1 percent lower than the average salaries paid by comparable mid-western university systems. Salaries for service and support personnel are 35.6 percent below the average wage rates in St. Louis, Kansas City, and central Missouri. These figures do not reflect the four percent salary increases for faculty and seven percent wage increases for service and support personnel to be implemented Jan. 1 at UMSL.

A major consequence of inadequate compensation mentioned in the request was high employee turnover. According to information in the request, the current turnover rate in the service area is 42 percent and in the clerical area it is 37 percent.

In the request, personnel turnover is cited as, "...a self-defeating situation that affects efficiency and proves to be more expensive than if competitive salaries and wages had been paid."

Although the university was allocated $170.2 million for this year, it only received $153 million because of statewide ten percent budget reductions imposed by Governor Christopher S. Bond. The reductions were necessary, according to the governor, to maintain a balanced state budget as required by law.

'Matters of Mind' to be discussed by philosophers

Deborah Suchart

"Matters of the Mind," a philosophy conference featuring philosophers from Tufts, Indiana, Wellesley, Yale, Oxford and Princeton will be held at UMSL Oct. 28-30. Speakers at the interdisciplinary conference will talk about the impact of philosophy of mind on other areas of society, and will emphasize the implications for art, ethics and religion. The conference is being supported by a Weldon Springs grant.

"This conference is especially important to us now," said Paul Roth, an assistant professor of philosophy at UMSL. "Since the state of Missouri is under boycott by the American Philosophical Association (APA) for failure to pass the Equal Rights Amendment, APA has not held its conferences here. This will give us an opportunity to hear the latest from leaders in the field. That is important -- to have a sense that you know what is going on in your discipline."

"Matters of the Mind" will deal with issues in contemporary philosophy of mind. "One of the standard issues of philosophy of mind is the question of whether thought is something different from matter," Roth said. "How do we explain all the different things we are able to do with the mind? What is it that a psychologist is studying? Behavior, or something else? If so, what? Most people who work in this area know a lot of psychology."

Associate professor Robert M. Gordon, who teaches the philosophy of psychology course at UMSL, explained further, "The philosophy of mind examines the idea of a mind as we understand it in everyday conversation, when we speak of someone's feelings and desires and beliefs."

Philosophy of mind is concerned with how this concept is related to psychology and to studies of the brain," he said.

Daniel Dennett of Tufts University will open the conference at 1:30pm Wednesday in room 118 SSB with his talk, "How to Study Consciousness Empirically, or: Nothing Comes to See 'Philosophy,' page 3

Fallon teaching status uncertain

Jeff Kuchno

The status of Dennis J. Fallon, an UMSL physical education professor who was assigned no teaching duties before the fall semester, remains up in the air.

Fallon, who came to UMSL in 1971 as an assistant professor of physical education, was informed last May of the School of Education's decision not to give him teaching duties for the fall semester. Fallon is presently receiving full salary while not performing any university duties.

"I have no duties at all," Fallon said. "My golf game has improved, though, and my house is freshly painted."

Fallon's salary this year is $26,250. The Current was unable to obtain the salaries of the two part-time instructors hired.

Fallon was scheduled to teach two classes this semester, "Analysis and Teaching of Lifetime Sports" and "History and Philosophy of Sports." Two part-time instructors have been hired to teach the classes.

Another class Fallon has taught in the past, "Social Dance", was cancelled this semester due to failure to meet the minimum number of students required for a class. Only five students signed up for the class and 15 are required.

The decision to assign Fallon no teaching duties was strictly a personal matter that involved professional behaviors, according to William L. Franzen, dean of the School of Education.

"The decision was made in the best interest of the physical education program as judged by many people," said Franzen. "It wasn't an overnight decision, either. There were literally hundreds of hours of discussion before the decision was made."

Neither Franzen nor Fallon agreed to disclose the reasons for the decision, but both hope the matter is resolved soon.

Fallon came to UMSL after spending three years at the University of Illinois-Champaign as an assistant professor from 1969-71. He received his Ph.D. in education from the University of Minnesota in 1969.

Fallon was granted tenure and associate professorship at UMSL in 1975 and became the first chairperson of the physical education department in 1979. He resigned that post last January.

Among Fallon's major interests at UMSL in the past decade have been a gymnastics camp that was held here from 1978 to 1980 and several dance classes. Fallon is presently president-elect of the National Dance Association.

Fallon also was the first director of the youth sports program, which began in 1972 and is still in existence.

Writing course to be held

A course on technical writing will be offered by UMSL's Continuing Education-Extension from Nov. 3 to Nov. 24. Classes will meet on Tuesdays from 6:30-9pm in the J.C. Penney Building. The fee for the course is $75.

The course is designed for professionals who need guidance and practice in writing technical abstracts, executive summaries, reports, and proposals. Classes will deal with communicating complex technical material clearly and precisely.

The course will be taught by Sally Jackoway, an instructor at UMSL, who is currently teaching technical writing. Jackoway has been an editor of flight simulator manuals for pilots at McDonnell Douglas.

Additional information about the course can be obtained by calling Deborah Factory at 553-5961.

Computer seminar offered

A seminar on how to select a microcomputer will be offered Nov. 12 at UMSL. The class will meet from 8:30am-4:30pm in the J.C. Penney Building. The fee for the course is $65.

The purpose of the seminar is to take the "guesswork" out of selecting a microcomputer system. The program will cover hardware, software, selection and use of a system, as well as business and educational applications. Strong and weak points among the numerous systems on the market will be evaluated.

The instructor is Daniel C. St. Clair, associate professor of computer science at the University of Missouri-Rolla Graduate Engineering Center in St. Louis. The Center is co-sponsoring the course in cooperation with the mathematics department of Fontbonne College.

For information or registration, call UMSL Continuing Education-Extension, 553-5961.

Senior coordinators named

Audrey Easton and Joyce Pund have been named senior education coordinators for Continuing Education-Extension at UMSL. Easton will assess community needs and develop continuing education programs for the UMSL School of Business Administration. Pund will coordinate and help develop programs and conferences held in the J.C. Penney Building and off-campus.

Prior to joining UMSL, Easton was publications coordinator and administrative assistant for the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB), a national professional association of business schools. AACSB is also the government-recognized accrediting agency for colleges and schools of business. Easton coordinated publications for that organization, and worked with business school deans, corporate executives, and government officials. She also coordinated annual reports and the membership directory.

Joyce Pund was previously a program manager for Time Development Center, marketing professional development seminars in business management. She was formerly employed at UMSL as a research analyst for the School of Business-Extension to study handicapped employment under a special grant from the Department of Labor.

Granger receives award

Charles E. Granger, associate professor and chair-erson of the biology department at UMSL, will receive the 1981 Science Educator Award at the annual convention of the Science Teachers of Missouri to be held Nov. 5 at the Cervantes Convention Center.

The award is given annually to science educators in Missouri who have made outstanding contributions to the advance of education in the sciences and in science teaching through their leadership and activities.

Granger, who received his bachelor's degree from Iowa State University and his doctoral degree in plant physiology and science education from the University of Iowa, has developed five programs designed to encourage student interest in the sciences.

Charles E. Granger

He is past director of the Missouri Junior Academy of Science and current director of the Junior Science, Engineering and Humanities Symposium.

He originated the Biology Honor Student Program, Summer Science Research Institute and the Biology Teacher Development Scholarship which is designed to encourage students to enter science teaching as a career.

Garage panels to be repaired

Sharon Kubatzky

Schuster Engineering Company of Webster Groves has been awarded a contract by the Board of Curators to make facade panel improvements to the four parking garages at UMSL. Schuster submitted the low bid of $148,760 for the job.

Vice Chancellor for Administrative Services John P. Perry said that safety is a primary reason for the project. "The panels are heavy, and we want to make sure they are safely anchored," he said.

Perry said that work on the garages will begin in two to four weeks. "Work will begin as soon as the contract is approved and the insurance papers are in," he said. Although parking will be restricted in some areas of the garages, the garages will not be closed.

The contractor will replace missing panels and anchor and brace all of the panels.

Perry said some panels were cracked by movement of the garages. "The structures are built so that they move," he stated. "If the panels are not properly attached, they will break." He added that because the garages were built by different companies at different times, there was a difference in the number of panels and the way in which they were attached. "You can't really say that one way is better than another," he said. "It's an engineering thing." All of the garages were built before 1975.

The panels have been damaged by being hit by cars and by snow removal. During snow removal, on the top levels of the garages, snow was pushed up against the panels.

The procedure for snow removal on the garages will not be altered, according to Perry.

"The past few years we've closed down the top levels of the structures so there would be no hurry on snow removal," Perry said. "Then we've very carefully removed the snow. That is what we'll continue to do."

Schuster will have 180 days to complete the work.

Course credit offered for legislative internships

Barb DePalma

Students interested in learning about the operations of the Missouri legislature can do so through the State Legislature Internship Program (SLIP) at UMSL.

The internship program is designed for juniors, seniors or graduate students who are interested in understanding the processes of the Missouri legislature. The students spend one day a week in Jefferson City working directly with the legislature. Students who participate in the program are allowed to observe and take direct participation in the legislature by researching current legislation, lobbying bills, dealing with constituent matters and attending the General Assembly. By participating in the internship program, the students receive six political science credit hours.

"The program is open to any student on campus," said Rodney Wright, project development specialist and adjunct professor of political science. "The only requirement for students is that they must have at least a 2.5 GPA. It is also helpful if they have a little political science background, but this is not mandatory. We have students from the economics, business and social work departments in the program. It is also helpful for students to have good communication and research skills."

Interested students must fill out a two-part application. The first part asks general questions about each student's experience, skills, school background, and reasons for participating in the program.

The second portion asks questions such as particular party affiliation and political areas of interest so as to allow for better placement in Jefferson City.

The deadline for turning in applications is Nov. 13. Applications can be picked up in room 408 Tower.

"Sixteen positions are available to students," said Wright. "Last year we did not have a lot of participation in the program, so this year we sent a letter to all faculty members on campus. We want to make people more aware of the program."

Student participants are each assigned to work with a specific legislator. They are placed through Jack Buechner, a state representative from Kirkwood who works directly with UMSL. He receives the information from student applications and makes the actual placement.

"He has a good feel for which legislators have dealt successfully with interns," said Wright. "The people in Jefferson City are responsible for the survival of this university. We want to send good representatives from UMSL to Jefferson City."

The transportation to Jefferson

City is provided by student carpools, but is paid for by UMSL. Students are paid 20 cents per mile or 50 dollars round trip. Wright said the 50 dollars provides an incentive that makes students want to drive so there is no problem with transportation.

"The program is beneficial in that anyone interested in the legislative processes would certainly learn a lot," said Wright. "If a student does good work, he makes good contacts for the future. In order to understand the legislative processes, there is no way of learning it as well as watching it in progress."

The State Legislature Internship Program is directly related to an internship program offered every semester at UMSL, which places students in government offices or agencies. Some students are even allowed to work for congressmen.

"We try to match students' academic or career plans with a particular position," said Wright. "Most students in UMSL's internship program are not student legislative interns."

mind." "Dennett has made philosophers aware of the relationship between problems about the mind and recent work in psychology and computer science," Gordon said. Dennett's book, "Brainstorms," attempts to show how it is possible for a physical object like the human brain to do the work of a mind.

Douglas Hofstadter of Indiana University will speak from 3:30-5:30pm Wednesday in room 118 SSB on "Holism, Goalism, Soulism." Hofstadter won a Pulitzer Prize for his book, "Godel, Escher, Bach: an Eternal Golden Braid," in which he explores some implications of work being done in the computer field for the philosophy of mind. The book brings together the philosophy of mind, studies in artificial intelligence and work in music and the visual arts.

Derek Parfit of Oxford University, who UMSL assistant professor of philosophy Stephanie A. Ross describes as "one of the world's recognized authorities on personal identity," is flying here just for the conference. Parfit will open Thursday's program with his talk, "Personal Identity and Rationality," at 10am in room 216 SSB.

From 2-4pm Thursday, in room 118 SSB, Harry Frankfurt of Yale University will talk on "What We Care About."

Alasdair MacIntyre of Wellesley College will close Thursday's program at 4pm in room 118 SSB with his talk, "Moral Ghosts: Identity, Character, and Accountability." MacIntyre has written several books on the interrelationship between ethics, psychology and politics. His latest book, "Beyond Virtue," was featured in a recent issue of "Newsweek."

"The program on Thursday will be concerned with issues of personal identity," Ross said. "MacIntyre, Frankfurt and Parfit are especially interested in the kinds of goals we pursue, how our interest in things helps determine our identity and in how the ways our mind works affect our personal values."

The three-day conference will close with a talk by Richard Rorty of Princeton University on "Contemporary Philosophy of Mind," from 10am-noon, Friday, in room 222 J.C. Penney. Rorty's book, "Philosophy and the Mirror of Nature," explores recent developments in philosophy.

Commentators for the program will be Guy Steele of Carnegie-Mellon University, Gerald Dworkin of the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle, Annette Baier of Pittsburgh, and Donald Regan of the University of Michigan. Rorty, Frankfurt, MacIntyre, and Dennett will also serve as commentators.

Registration for the conference and a buffet luncheon will be held from 11:30am-1:30pm Wednesday, Oct. 28 in University House, 7956 Natural Bridge Road. A buffet luncheon will also be served Thursday from noon-2pm. The cost of each luncheon is about $3.

Cocktails will be served Wednesday from 5:30-7:30pm in University House. Thursday's program will be followed by a banquet at 7pm at the Chase-Park Plaza Hotel, 212 N. Kingshighway Blvd. The cost of the banquet is approximately $12. It is not necessary to send money for the luncheons or banquet.

A YEAR OUT OF COLLEGE, ANDA STRAUSS IS MAKING AVIATION HISTORY IN THE ARMY.

"I'm being assigned to a Chinook helicopter unit in Germany as a test pilot and maintenance officer, and I'm proud that I'll be the first woman to have that assignment over there. It's a real thrill for me.

"So was learning how to fly a helicopter. It takes a lot more skill than an airplane. If you think college is demanding, flight school is even tougher. It's not only academically demanding, it's really mentally demanding as well as physically.

"In Germany, I'll have a chance to use some of the leadership and management techniques I learned in ROTC. It's going to be a real challenge having command responsibilities.

2nd Lt. Anda Strauss was a political science major at Wake Forest and a member of Army ROTC.

"I got into ROTC really just to see what it was all about. For me, it all couldn't have worked out better."

Army ROTC got Anda Strauss off to a good start. Maybe it can do the same for you. To find out, stop by your Army ROTC office on campus.

'Underground' may open soon

Maybe. Maybe not. But hopefully, UMSL's new cafeteria, the "Underground," will open next week, according to University Center Director Charlotte A. McClure. The "Underground" will be inspected today, and if everything is approved, the university will start moving the furniture in.

After the "Underground" is opened, the snack bar will be closed for renovation. McClure said that they hope to have the snack bar reopened as a lounge and vending area by the beginning of the winter semester.

editorials

Yes, Christopher

There is a University of Missouri

Dear Governor Bond,

This is just a reminder to let you know that the University of Missouri still exists. We have not closed our doors in the face of your budget cuts and general lack of support for public higher education. In fact, the university has even experienced an increase in enrollment this fall despite these hardened conditions.

We are making it, but you haven't made it very easy on us.

The university will suffer if it does not receive the support it needs from you. Sure, we have made the necessary sacrifices this year in order to stay within our given budget. Library hours have been cut drastically on the UMSL campus, faculty and staff did not receive adequate compensation this semester, positions have remained vacant and services have been eliminated. Yes, we were able to do it this year, but what about next year and future years? How much more can we really afford to cut?

Oh well, c'est la vie. Maybe we should forget about the budget problems for awhile.

We do have another question for you, though. When, Governor Bond, are we going to see the appointment of three new curators for the University of Missouri Board of Curators? It's not that we don't like the present board. They are a dedicated group of individuals. But the terms of C.R. Johnston, Wallace R. Stacey, and Rex Z. Williams ended Jan. 1, 1981. That's been over nine months ago!

We realize there could be a related problem concerning redistricting the ten present congressional districts to nine districts. According to Missouri statutes: "The board of curators of the university of the state of Missouri shall hereafter consist of nine members, who shall be appointed by the governor, by and with the advice and consent of the senate; provided that not more than one person shall be appointed upon said board from the same congressional district."

Yes, it would be awkward for you to have to remove a member from the board. But how much longer can we afford to wait for your decision?

Nine curators sit on the board and every two years three curators are either re-appointed or replaced. That means that on Jan. 1, 1983, Daniel L. Brenner, Robert A. Dempster and William T. Doak will end their six year term.

Unless "new blood," as you've put it before, is selected soon, we could see six relatively new curators sitting on the board. That would leave only three veterans who would be well versed in university operations and procedures. Maybe we're just sentimental old fools but we don't want to see too much "new blood" making important university decisions.

As it is now, the three persons who will replace Johnston, Stacey and Williams will serve a little over five years, provided you make the appointments within the near future. After they serve a full year and get to know the university system they should have at least a good three or four years left to settle in.

Maybe when it comes time to make new appointments for 1983 you'll find a need to hold off a little then too. After that we won't worry because of course you only have until 1984 before your term ends too.

It'll be a long three years for the university, Governor Bond.

Response to Cornerstone controversy

Dear Editor:

THANK YOU VERY MUCH!!!
The fair coverage, and positive viewpoint shown in the two articles regarding the Cornerstone vs. UMKC in the October 15, 1981 issue of the Current, is greatly appreciated!

It is a very controversial issue, to say the least, and for someone who is not directly involved with it, and yet willing to speak up, is very commendable.

It is an example of the essence of what our country stands for—FREEDOM!

I hope the "powers that be"

do not ever try to shut the door of the printed word, as they have done and are still trying to do to those involved with any kind of "Christian" or "religious" activity.

THANKS AGAIN!

Office of Graduate Studies

'Wednesday Noon Live'—round 4

Dear Editor:

We are writing in response to Patricia Harkins' letter to the editor published in the Thursday, Oct. 1, issue of the Current. Her last two letters show an amazing lack of knowledge, total misconception, and should put her head and shoulders above all others for the Zippy The Pinhead Award.

(1) You Do Not speak for the majority of the UMSL students on any issue you have mentioned. The demand for entertaining activities on the UMSL campus has been constantly growing since approximately 1974. All student activity fees are spent to benefit the maximum number of students, Wednesday Noon Live included. The money spent on Wednesday Noon Live could not be spent to keep the library open, because it comes from a totally different source. Don't blame Ron Edwards for reducing library hours—blame Governor Bond.

(2) Where the hell do you get off assessing the needs and wants of UMSL students? Every student who comes here doesn't work or leave immediately after classes, and just to set the record straight, fraternities and sororities are not for everyone. They currently comprise less than 1/4 of all recognized student organizations.

(3) Your method of surveying, walking by and looking, would do other rating services such as Arbitron, Nielson, George Gallup proud. Having attended every performance this fall, our estimations seem to differ from yours. At each and every performance this fall, our estimations seem to average of 250-300 persons in attendance. In case you haven't noticed long ago and far away someone discovered that they didn't have to watch musicians play to hear them! If you choose to stick by your patented method of surveying, why don't you use it to count the heads gazing into drink or ignoring you as you play in a particular Laclede Landing establishment? Hmm? doubt you'll find a handful!

(4) In case you still feel you're forced to listen to these band while in the library, every building on campus is equipped with a study lounge or area. We recommend you try Mark Twain or the Marillac campus. (Or perhaps Weldon Springs.)

(5) Your alleged points of validity are for the most part MORONIC!!! Entertainment on the UMSL campus is a low priority—as evidenced by its meager funding. In this current fiscal year, Wednesday Noon Live receives approximately 4% of the total Student Activities budget. If you consider the fact that at least 1,000 students pass by that point within the band two hour set, and multiply that times 19 scheduled acts. By simple division of their budget it turns out that it cost less than three cents per person. This has to be considered one of the most successful programs on campus. Where's your validity now???

P.S. We were going to open this letter with "Patricia, You Ignorant S#$%", but you weren't worth it.

Yours Truly

[Editor's note: The above letter was signed by 46 students. The list of students is available in the Current office.]

Mystique of Far East holds audience captive

Many of us have been enticed by the mystique of the Far East, but few of us are afforded the chance to view the customs and culture firsthand. Last Tuesday the students at UMSL were given the opportunity, when the Youth Goodwill Mission from Taiwan presented "An Adventure in Chinese Songs and Dance."

During September and October the dancers, sponsored by Taiwan Television Company, will be visiting over 15 U.S. cities during this, their seventh United States tour. The 14 dancing members of the group are students selected from 104 leading universities in Taiwan. As the name implies, they are here to familiarize the people of the United States with some of the unique customs of the Republic of China.

The program opened with Ch'uan, a combination of martial arts and dance steps. Chuan incorporates the movements of animals into a series of uniform motions which combine style and grace with skill and power.

The second part of the program featured the Highlights of Chinese Classical and Folk Dance, five newly choreographed dances, using costumes and movements to reflect feelings toward nature.

Third on the agenda was "Taiwan the Beautiful," which depicted an Autumn day starting with men and women working the fields, singing and dancing. The dance celebrates an abundant harvest and features the dancers flying kites and playing flutes.

Practically everything onstage provided an insight into the Chinese culture. The tremendous discipline was evident in the precision of the dancer's moves. Their love of beauty showed through in the richly ornamented costumes, and their affinity for the art of dancing was evident from the obvious pleasure they received from the performance.

The audience, a fairly large one, was captivated by the brilliant array of color in motion. The words used to describe the performance included "wonderful," "excellent" and "just plain great," but the best description came from a professional dramatist. "I've seen all sorts of performances, but this is the only one I've seen in America that really captures what it is to be Chinese."

UMSLFEST tries again

The 1981 UMSLFEST which was scheduled for the end of September has been rescheduled for the end of this month. The event, which was canceled because of overcrowded schedules, will take place on Oct. 26-Nov. 6.

The sponsored events include a creeper race by Pi Sigma Epsilon, a treasure hunt by Alpha Pi Omega, tug-o-war by the Delta Zetas, and musical chairs by Zeta Tau Alpha. Major Robert Christiansen of Army ROTC will sponsor the frisbee golf tournament, the Baptist Student Union will sponsor the "Simon Sez," and the intramural department will sponsor the obstacle race.

The relay races and table-games are still in need of sponsors.

The highlight of the fest will be the UMMSL rendition of The Gong Show. Any person or group may enter the show. No one should fear the sound of the gong because, "Only those acts who obviously want to be gonged will 'get it!'" said Ginnie Bowie of Student Activities. The Gong Show will take place Wednesday, Nov. 4 from 12-1pm in the University Center Lounge.

Trophies and participation awards will be given out at the intermission of "Wednesday Noon Live" on Nov. 11.

All of the activities are geared to bring fun, relaxation, and enjoyment to participants and audiences alike. Anyone interested in getting involved in The Gong Show, or any of the other events should contact Bowie at the Student Life Offices at 553-5536.

Beaux Arts Trio returns as refreshing as ever

Pressler, Cohen and Greenhouse continue to make beautiful music

Daniel C. Flanakin

The Beaux Arts Trio played in the J.C. Penney Auditorium last Wednesday. It has been several years since the group has appeared in St. Louis and it was a welcome return.

Pianist Menahem Pressler, violinist Isidore Cohen, and cellist Bernard Greenhouse have been together for over 25 years as the Beaux Arts Trio. Playing together for so long has allowed the group to refine their work to an artful craft, but they have not allowed themselves to go stale. Their music is as refreshing as ever.

The trio opened the evening's program with Mozart's Trio in E Major, K.542. Mozart wrote this trio during his stay in Vienna. The score is expressive, yet natural in the sense of being free of needless technical complications.

Mozart's work is known for its gracefully charming melodies. The contrapuntal texture, which is ever present in works from this period of Mozart's life, was played down by the trio, which is exactly how Mozart meant it to be. The trio had no problem bringing Mozart's melodies to life.

Intonation and balance were no problem either and the group's use of dynamics and the rich, warm texture was extraordinary. But then, you would not expect less than that from three musicians who have been universally acclaimed as the number one trio in the business.

The trio followed that with Ives' Trio, the only piece he wrote for piano, violin, and cello. Ives was the first important distinctively American composer.

Ives' work revolves around chromaticism, complex and unorthodox chords, national folk songs, and modality. The trio made the most out of the dynamics and the motion within the piece. These, along with the tension and relaxation which the trio brought out with a flair, are what gives Ives' work any shape, since the work has no tonal center.

Ives plays games with his listeners by perverting some familiar tunes. Beaux Arts played that to the hilt, much to the audience's enjoyment. Although the Ives is an unusual piece, it turned out to be the highlight of a great evening.

After a rather lengthy intermission, the trio performed Dvorak's Trio in E minor, Opus 90, nicknamed "Dumpy." This is a difficult piece to perform, but of course, the Beaux Arts Trio had no problems.

The group's use of dynamics and their supreme sense of balance were impressive, but their tempo changes were absolutely incredible. The transitions (both from fast to slow and from slow to fast) were played with a precision that defied reality. That's what comes from playing together for 26 years.

Each of the three musicians is at the top of his field. Pressler has appeared as a soloist with the New York Philharmonic, the Philadelphia and Cleveland Orchestras, and the Indianapolis Symphony. He is an animated player and he is fun to watch. But you can't be fooled. He is a superb musician. He doesn't just read the notes off the page, he actually makes himself a part of the music.

Cohen and Greenhouse are equally good. Their intonation is simply superb and their joint attacks and articulation (especially on the pianissimo section on the second movement of the Ives) are nothing short of brilliant. On the Dvorak, in particular, they show, both individually and together, the ability to take simple melodies and mold them, through phrasing, interpretation, and a rich tone quality, into breathtakingly beautiful lyric passages.

The trio definitely was superb in every way. It's really too bad that UMSL students can't (or won't) appreciate a group like Beaux Arts Trio. It's a real pleasure to hear music of this quality at UMSL.

Organization befriends music

"UMSL Friends of Music" has been formed in order to better publicize the music department's programs to the St. Louis Community. Evelyn Mitchell, associate professor of music at UMSL, and vice-president of the group said she "has long felt that the UMSL community and the St. Louis community needs to become aware of the music we have to offer." The purpose of the group is also to aid and promote the interests of the music department and to provide volunteer assistance to its programs. The group was formed this past summer by Leonard Ott, music department chairperson, and Alice Stowell, a community leader.

The group is structured similarly to one on the UMC campus. "Their group is a larger one than ours and they are able to provide monetary support whereas we can only offer personal support. Fund-raising is far off in the future for us," said Stowell. Columbia's group is so large because the town is a college town and the university provides many of the cultural programs for the community.

Membership for the group is open to anyone who has an interest in the UMSL music department.

The board consists of 17 members. The officers are Stowell, president; Ott, ex-officio member; Mitchell, vice-president; and Mary Edwards, secretary.

Edwards is program director for KWMU and a graduate of UMSL's music department. There are seven UMSL alumni on the board. In addition to Edwards they are, Roger Lee, Sharon Rose, Madeline Croskell, Dorothy Bacon, Jack Austin, and Gary Brandeis.

According to Stowell, one of the main goals of the group is to publicize Kammergild, UMSL's orchestra in residence. The "Friends" are planning a reception for it at the Chancellor's residence. They are also planning a reception following the dedication of the Music Building.

Project presents "Butley"

The Theatre Project Company will present Simon Gray's "Butley" in the J.C. Penney auditorium from Oct. 29-Nov. 1.

"Butley" is a witty and poignant portrait of a University of London professor and his former star pupil.

Ben Butley, played by R.W. Miller, is a brilliant, attractive, pitiable, and self-destructive professor of English literature who loves T.S. Eliot and Beatrix Potter and hates teaching.

This will be Miller's fifth season in the Project's resident acting company. Last spring he played Prospero in "The Tempest" and Brick in "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof."

Doyle Reynolds plays Butley's protege Joey. Wayne Salmon, Susie Wall, and Ray Fanning are also among the cast. The production will be directed by Fontaine Syer, the Theatre Project Company's artist director and UMSL's artist-in-residence.

Tickets for UMSL's faculty, staff and students is $4.50 for Thursday and Sunday's performances and $5.50 on Friday and Saturday. General admission is a dollar more.

Curtain time is 8pm for all performances except for Sunday's matinee which is at 2pm.

For more information call the Theatre Project Company at 531-1301.

University Orchestra to perform

The University Orchestra will present a concert, free of charge, on Nov. 1 at 8pm. The concert will be held on the Marillac campus.

The Symphony is under the direction of James Richards, assistant professor of music. The evening's program will include Rossini's Overture to "Italian Girl in Algiers," Britten's Courtly Dances from "Gloriana," Stamitz's Concerto for Clarinet and Bassoon, and Beethoven's German Dances.

UMSL soccer squads rated second in polls

Rivermen win two on road

Ronn Tipton

The UMSL men's soccer team came off its longest road trip of the season this past weekend with two victories to raise its record to 10-1. The Rivermen posted victories against Xavier University and Dayton University.

The Rivermen beat Xavier 2-0 on goals by Scott Chase and Mike Bess. The first half of the game was kind of sluggish for the Rivermen. Coach Don Dallas explained "Their field was hard and small. It was uneven too; there were a lot of bumps and raises in it."

The second half was a different story for the Rivermen though, because almost immediately into the half, Scott Chase scored to put the Rivermen up 1-0. The kickers dominated to rest of the game and at 81:47 into the game, senior forward Mike Bess hit the back of the net for his ninth goal of the season and the clincher. Ed Weis got the shutout and Bob Fuentes and Tim Murphy got the assists on the goals.

Half of the road trip was now over and Dallas was a little relieved. "I was really worried about this game. I didn't know how we'd respond. Xavier has been tough the last few years, and we were playing them on their Homecoming."

The second half of the trip was easier for the kickers as they defeated Dayton 3-1. Jim Kohlschreiber got his first goal of the year off of a first half throw in that was deflected in. The first half ended with the Rivermen holding onto their slim 1-0 lead.

TWO ISN'T BAD: Rivermen Forward Bret Gove (12) leads the attack against Xavier last weekend. David Houlihan (14) gets into position as Gove sets up the scoring attack [photo courtesy of Bill Lyons].

About three minutes into the second half, Dayton evened the game up at 1-1. Dallas said, "I thought we were in trouble, but we weathered the storm." And they did, literally. "The weather turned really bad," said Dallas.

Bess' total is up to 10 goals for the season to put him fourth on the all-time season scoring list. He needs five more goals in five remaining games to break the record held by Dan Musenflechter, who now plays indoor soccer for the Steamers.

The Rivermen are now 10-1 and ranked second in the NCAA Division II soccer poll. They appear to be rolling again like they were before they lost to SUI-Edwardsville. However, they still have five games remaining, and they do play some tough teams.

They played Washington University last night, and have to play fifth ranked Eastern Illinois University Friday night at 7:30 at home. After that, the kickers play perennial MIAA power Quincy College, Brigham Young University, and their constant rivals, St. Louis University to close their regular season play.

Dallas summed it up by explaining, "Anything can happen now, so we're just going to play it one game at a time. We can't afford to lose again because they're all big tests from here on out. The rankings don't mean that much now."

"It got windy and rainy, and the temperature dropped a lot too."

That didn't bother the Rivermen as Mike Bess scored off of an assist from Tim Murphy, and Pat McVey scored to ice the game for the Rivermen.

Intramural football down to final four

The UMSL intramural program is in the midst of transition as one sport ends and another begins. Intramural football will conclude next week with the championship game slated for Tuesday, Oct. 27 at 3:00pm. Intramural volleyball is now just two weeks old.

The intramural football season is coming to an exciting close with the playoffs beginning last Tuesday on the intramural football field.

The first round of the playoffs featured an undefeated Pike team going against TKE team that boasted a 2-2 mark. The game was full of hard hitting and aggressive play by both teams. Unfortunately for the TKE's, the Pike team took a tough 8-0 victory and advanced to the quarter-finals of the playoffs against the No Names.

intramural report

The Pike's scored on a Bruce Short pass to Lloyd Bollinger who made a fantastic catch. Later in the contest, Chris O'Dell sacked the TKE quarterback for a two point safety to end the scoring.

The No Names won the honor of playing the Pikes by winning 15-2 against the Jets. The Jets had a season mark of 4-1 while the No Names won the League II Division with a 3-1 mark.

In other playoff action, Sig Tau defeated the Papal Bulls by a score of 10-8. Sig Tau boasted an overall league record of 3-1 and the Papal Bulls, who finish-

This past weekend, the Riverwomen kickers traveled to Wisconsin where they defeated the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and the University of Wisconsin-Madison. The UMSL squad currently is ranked second in the nation according to the national polls. Their record stands at 12-0.

Saturday, the Riverwomen took on Milwaukee and downed them by a score of 3-0. Mid-fielder Joan Gettemeyer led the scoring attack when she booted one in off a corner kick. Gettemeyer currently has 13 goals for the year.

Then junior mid-fielder Sue McLaughlin took honors on the second goal when she took an air ball pass from halfback Peggy Keough, and connected it with the Milwaukee net.

Freshmen back Jeannine Basile rounded out the scoring with a goal on a free kick. The goal was Basile's first of the year.

"We played outstanding Saturday considering the weather conditions," Coach Ken Hudson stated. "We had about four goals that the water stopped."

ed second behind the No Names in League II, had a 2-1-1 record.

In the first round playoff game last Tuesday, the 1-2-1 Grave Diggers team took on the League I leading NFCT team who held a perfect 5-0 season mark.

The final score of this presumed mismatch was 22-20 with NCFT barely advancing to the quarter-finals. NCFT was powered by three Chris Anagnos touchdown passes.

Quarter-final play begins today at 3:00pm on the intramural field. The first game will feature the Pikes playing the No Names. The second game will begin at 4:00pm. It has Sig Tau going against NCFT.

The intramural football final is scheduled for next Tuesday, Oct. 27.

Intramural Volleyball began action last week with many exciting games by the 21 participating teams.

The winners from last Monday's matches were: Tennis Team, who won two matches, the Nons, Phi Zappa Krappa, also winning two matches, and The Alliance Jetsons and the Pikes I, who each recorded one win.

The winners from last Wednesday were Le Sabre, The Alliance, Oates & Oatettes, No Names, Racquetball Club Spikes, P.E.K. and the Bible Study.

Ed Weis: A brick wall in front of the Rivermen's soccer net

Jeff Kuchno

Ed Weis remembers the feeling he got two years ago as a freshman goalkeeper when he was told, just prior to the season opener against powerful St. Louis U., that the starting assignment was his.

"I was really excited but I was also nervous," he said. "Coach (Don) Dallas told me right before the game that I was starting and then I thought about how good St. Louis U. was. I was a bit scared."

It would have been difficult to come up with a tougher baptism for the tall net-minder from Roosevelt High School. The high-powered Bills scored three goals off Weis in that game, but UMSL followers had to be impressed with the manner in which the rookie guarded the nets.

Since that day, Weis has steadily established himself as one of the top goalies in UMSL history. In fact, he is already the school record-holder for most shutouts in a career with 15, and he still has the remainder of this season and next season to add to that total.

Weis, however, believes his shutout record isn't really a true indication of his ability.

"It's nice to have the record but a shutout should be credited to the defense and not just the goalie," he said. "It would be difficult to get a lot of shutouts without a good defense. Our defense has been playing well in the three years I've been here."

Weis, who was named to the All-Midwest team in 1979, started the majority of the games in his freshman year and registered five shutouts. Last year, he blanked the opposition six times, giving him a total of 11 shutouts coming into his junior year.

As the 1981 season approached, Weis was aware that he was only one shutout behind Frank Tusinski, who previously held the record with 12. And it was just a matter of time before the record fell.

In the season opener against Benedictine, Weis held the Ravens off the scoreboard in a 1-0 win, which tied Tusinski's mark. A few weeks later, Weis was in goal as UMSL downed Missouri Southern, 3-0, and the record was his.

"It was a good feeling when I broke the record but I really wasn't tested that much," Weis said. "I think Missouri Southern only had about four shots the whole games."

When asked if he would rather be forced to handle many shots than just a few, Weis opted for the former. A busy goalie is better than a lonely one," Weis said.

"I'd rather have some action than just stand around," he said. "A goalie needs a lot of action because it keeps you in the game. If I'm not concentrating on the game because I'm not getting many shots at me, there's always the chance the other team could come down and surprise me with a goal."

And without a well coordinated defense, a goalkeeper is in big trouble. Weis knows this better than anyone.

"A goalie has to be able to communicate with his players," he said. "I can usually see everything that is happening in front of me and I have to make sure the players are where I want them."

Weis played behind a defense that stayed fairly intact in his first two years at UMSL. But due to graduation and other reasons, there were those who felt it would take time for Weis to get accustomed to his new set of backliners for the 1981 season.

"It really wasn't a big adjustment, though," Weis explained. "Rags (starting sweeper Randy Ragsdale) played here two years ago and (Tony) Pusateri and (Greg) Schlake saw a lot of action last year. (Bob) Fuentes is the only new guy back there."

The arrival of fellow goalkeeper Ken Bayless from Florissant Valley Community College also shed a new light on the 1981 season for Weis. In fact, the starting spot was up for grabs as the start of the season and Bayless has continued to pressure the incumbent.

"The competition has really made me work harder," Weis said. "I don't know if it's made me a better goalie, though."

It probably has. Not only does Weis work hard at thwarting the opposition, but his experience on a relatively young squad has been a major reason for UMSL's success. The Rivermen were 10-1 going into last night's game against Washington U.

"I guess I'm playing sort of a leadership role," Weis said. "Other than that, I don't feel any different about this year than the first two. We've had a good team every year."

Weis' main goal is to see the Rivermen capture the national championship before his college career is over. But even if UMSL fails to go all the way, Weis realizes there are more important things.

"It's important just to have a good time," he said. "As long as you're enjoying what you're doing, that's all that matters."

Of course, it doesn't hurt to win. And to be sure, Weis knows a lot about that.

MAURICE BUCHANAN TURNED DOWN A BASKETBALL SCHOLARSHIP FOR AN ARMY ROTC SCHOLARSHIP.

"I knew I needed to go to college. I needed to get that ticket punched to be successful," says Maurice. "Why did I select an Army ROTC scholarship over a basketball scholarship? Because I knew I'd have a job after graduation. And that's more than a lot of my peers could say."

"I may stay in the military. But if I decide to get out, I've got the best job reference in the world—a commission in the United States Army."

Army ROTC can do the same for you.

Qualify, and you can win an ROTC scholarship, as Maurice did. Each scholarship covers tuition, books, and more.

Capt. Maurice Buchanan was a math major at the University of Georgia and a member of Army ROTC.

But even if you don't win one, as an ROTC cadet, you'll still receive financial assistance. Up to $1,000 a year for your last two years of ROTC.

If you'd like a job waiting for you after college, do what Maurice Buchanan did.

UMSL spikers play mental game; win

Jim Schnurbusch

The women's volleyball team was on a climb toward the .500 level until last week. If they had pulled together victories against McKendree College, and then three successive wins in the Evansville Tourney, a round-robin event that featured the University of Evansville, Franklin College and a relatively unknown Belarmino College, the Riverwomen could have kept their winning stint in tact.

But, the Riverwomen couldn't overcome a tough McKendree team on their home courts a week ago Tuesday and lost the match. With that loss, the women's record fell to 6-9.

Traveling to Evansville last weekend, the women's volleyball squad had hopes of redeeming themselves by winning a round-robin tournament. They played three matches against three very strong opponents. According to volleyball coach Cindy Rech, they were "teams they could have beat."

Actually, as it turns out, there was only one team in the tourney "they could have beat."

Playing all of their games on Saturday in Evansville, the women spikers opened the round-robin action against the University of Evansville, the host team. They lost their opening action 10-15, 7-15 and 10-15.

Their next opponent was Franklin University. They too gave UMSL a struggle and finally walked away with a 9-15, 12-15 and 7-15 win.

The women were determined not to leave Evansville without showing how they had improved their seasonal record after such a sluggish showing earlier in the year.

"We beat ourselves," lamented Rech, referring to the two losses against Evansville and Franklin. "It's not that we played bad, things just didn't go right and we weren't consistent."

The women put the loses in the tourney behind them as they went onto their final match against Belarmino.

In the four game match, the Riverwomen got back on the winning track with a 15-8, 13-15, 15-9 and 15-5 win.

Not only did they play impressively in the match, but the women may have given themselves the emotional lift they needed to face two very tough opponents last Tuesday night.

In addition to the win, Rech was able to play everyone on the team which could prove to play an important factor as the season progresses and ultimately turns into the regionals.

Do you know Mark Ryan?

It's almost the same routine every time the UMSL men's soccer squad practices. After various monotonous drills, the team usually splits up for an intrasquad game. During the scrimmage, it's inevitable that at least one player will come down the field with the ball and blast a shot so high and wide of the goal that it appears to be headed for Lambert Airport. And then, as the players regroup for another rush, a voice from across the field is heard loud and clear:

"Mark... go get the ball."

The young man who answers to that command is Mark Ryan, team manager for the soccer Rivermen the last three years. And although most followers of UMSL soccer don't see it, Ryan does more than just chase down soccer balls.

Ryan's job entails watering and lining the field, putting the nets, corner flags, moving equipment (i.e. tables and chairs), keeping track of the balls, keeping track of the uniforms on road trips, taking down the nets after a game and making sure all the equipment is packed away securely. Whew!

Why would anyone want to hold down such a low-paying blue collar job that doesn't include a lot of recognition?

"Because I like it," said Ryan. "I would like to make a career out of it."

Fair enough Mark, but what is so enjoyable about being a team manager?

"I like the travelling," he said. "It's also kind of nice to have a lot of responsibilities. It's an important job."

There's no doubt about that. Ryan's job is similar to that of any organization, group or team. Not everything can be fun and someone has to do the so-called "dirty" work. On the UMSL soccer team, that distinction is given to Ryan.

"On the day of a game or practice, I'm usually the first one to get here and the last one to leave," Ryan said. "Believe me, it's a lot of work."

But Ryan admits he doesn't mind. In fact, it would be hard to find someone else (with the exception of the baseball Cardinal's distinguished Butch Yatkeman), who is more dedicated to being a team manager.

kuchno's korner

Ryan began his career as a team manager his freshman year in high school at Rosary. He served similar capacities in football, basketball and baseball as he does now. After four years of service at Rosary, Ryan went to Florissant Valley Community College, where he was manager of the soccer team for two years. He is now in his third year as team manager at UMSL.

"I've been doing this for almost 10 years," Ryan said proudly. "I'm the only person I know who has stuck with something like this for this long."

Although not a very good athlete, Ryan makes a point to stay in top-notch condition. An avid runner, Ryan ran about 15 miles a day over the summer and has been known to run to and from school after practice. And he doesn't live just around the corner.

"I like to stay in shape, because my job requires a lot of work," he explained. "It's a job that is physically demanding."

Perhaps that is why Ryan enjoys away games so much. He admits there isn't as much work involved in away games and being with the players on the road can be fun. In fact, Ryan's famed "wolf call" was one of the highlights of the bus ride back from a trip to Rolla earlier this year.

The job of team manager is one that many people can't handle. Fame and glory usually isn't the reward. Personal satisfaction is.

So, the next time you hear "Mark... where are the balls," you'll know who they're talking about.

Unknown orienteering now becoming popular sport

Jim Schnurbusch

Some sports are destined to media coverage—most often, too much media coverage. As a sports enthusiast, one can be overwhelmed with football, baseball, and basketball and many other sports.

There is one sport however, that doesn't get nationwide coverage. As a sport that has been "kept in the woods" for a long time in the United States, orienteering is rapidly increasing its popularity across the country.

This weekend, a St. Louis orienteering group and some of its members will be a major participant in a national orienteering meet in Buffalo, NY. There will be six UMSL students competing in the meet which will attract 700 people.

Orienteering is the "Thinking man's sport," according to Bill Comfort, an UMSL student and Buffalo-bound orienteer.

Orienteering began in Europe long ago and continues to be one of the most popular sports there. Orienteering boasts the single largest sporting event in the world, the O'Ringen Meet held in Sweden, which attracts some 15,000 participants.

The sport relies on the use of a map and a compass to navigate an unmarked course through an unknown area of mostly wooded, hilly terrain.

According to Comfort, "The course can also be walked at a non-competitive level. These participants are called wayfarers."

The orienteer finds each control marker in sequence and uses a punch attached to it to mark a control card he or she carries. In addition to the control card, the orienteer is given a clue sheet which gives brief descriptions of the terrain where the marker will be found. The objective of the orienteer is to tour the course in the shortest period of time.

The orienteering course is indicated on the map by several control points, usually ranging from 4 to 12, which are represented on the actual course by orange and white nylon markers.

Because of the nature of the sport, it is relatively inexpensive. Participants are required to have a compass, which can usually be borrowed from meet organizers. Other than a compass, the only thing needed is the desire to take a scenic trip through an unpathed area in the woods.

Orienteering is broken into levels of competition so that everyone can compete at a competitive level. Each meet is divided into several event categories which make use of three to five courses of varying difficulty. The three variables that define the categories are age, sex and experience.

There are also female and male categories broken into eight age groups and three levels of skill. Most meets will actually have 15 to 20 categories depending on the number of participants. Usually there is a non-competitive, novice "wayfarers" category.

The courses used are designated white, yellow, orange, red and blue in the increasing order of difficulty and range from two to 10 kilometers.

Comfort, who won the intramural orienteering meet on campus, relates the sport to a "treasure hunt." He explains, "Orienteering is a rugged sport. A good orienteer doesn't use his map or compass, but rather finds the markers on pure determination."

Joining Comfort for the trip to Buffalo will be UMSL students, Bruce Bollinger, Cathy De Shies, Linda Belford, Dan Meenehan and Beth Skelton.

Both Meenehan and Skelton are premier orienteers in the class throughout the country.

Meenehan is one of the top 10 male orienteers in the nation and Skelton is ranked among the top five female orienteer competitors. Skelton is also a member of the United States Orienteer team.

Anyone can compete in an orienteering meet. Usually there is a small entry fee of $1 or $2. In addition to running various meets, there is a St. Louis Orienteering Club that offers yearly memberships.

Wet track; Harriers lose

Mike Dvorak

The UMSL Harriers cross country team had to perform more like Rivermen last weekend at the rain-drenched Washington Invitational meet.

A steady rain, intermixed with heavy downpours and lightning, were the elements the Harriers and the other 12 teams took on as they competed in this race at Forest Park.

Central College of Iowa took first place in the meet, followed by Harding College in Arkansas and Washington University. Roger Dougherty of Maryville College as the first runner to finish the five mile course, breaking the tape at 26:11.

Of the five runners for UMSL who started the race, four finished. Mike Cole was the first Harrier to finish, coming in with a 29:32. Jim Arnold, Bentley Ritchie and Frank Cumingham were the other finishers.

The race course was more fashioned for steeplechase running rather than cross country running. Long stretches of mud, slanted loose terrain and puddles up to six inches deep were some of the obstacles the runners endured on the course. Frank Cunningham of UMSL admitted that the course was wet.

McLaughlin scored a pretty goal. Everybody played well."

"Hickle wasn't really tested," (referring to goalie Cindy Hickle) he added. "They had a good defense but no offense. We were ready to play.

The Riverwomen then traveled to Madison where they played a close game, winning with a margin of 2-1.

"We weren't up for the game," Hudson continued. "It was cold and windy, and the fields were damp and slippery. We weren't moving the ball well or marking their players well."

Nevertheless, the Riverwomen did win, highlighted by a two-goal performance from forward Karen Lombardo. Her first goal came during the first half of play, when she was set up in front of the net by Joan Gettemeyer.

"She hit a rocket," Hudson said. "It was a cannon."

She scored her next goal during the second half, when she was assisted by forward Jan Gettemeyer. Gettemeyer is the team leader in assists, with a total of 13. Madison's only goal came during the second half.

"We were lucky to win," Hudson said. "Our passing was awful."

Earlier in the year, the Riverwomen defeated Madison in the championship game of the St. Louis National Women's College Budweiser Soccer Tournament. Although the women kickers dominated the game with a score of 6-1, the Madison ball team was the first opponent to put a goal in the UMSL net.

"We should be 15-0 by the end of the season," Hudson said. "We're going to work hard. We're definitely going to be the favorite in the regionals."

The Riverwomen have outscored their opposition 69-6, but their last few games have been low scoring compared to their record earlier in the season.

"We've been a little lax lately," Hudson said. "But we're winning."

The Riverwomen's next game is slated for this Friday when they take on Eastern Illinois University. The game, which is scheduled for 5:30pm, will be played at UMSL.

Volleyball

Rech felt that both junior Pat Maleas and freshman Cheri Versemann played extremely well in their supporting performances.

"I did manage to play everyone. I was extremely impressed with the play of the girls who have been sitting on the bench through the first part of the season," explained Rech.

With just one senior on the team, the opportunity for the younger members to play this year will prove beneficial for the 1982 squad.

Letting the starters rest also allows for another important element.

According to Rech, "With some of the starters sitting on the bench, they saw some things that went wrong."

Still, the main weakness is not in the fundamentals of volleyball.

"Our biggest problem is mental. The skill is there, we just need to work on the mental skills," concluded Rech.

Riverwomen Notes: The UMSL Womens' Volleyball team won two more matches Tuesday night.

The spikers won the first match by taking three out of five games from the Southeast Missouri State team. The scores of the games were 10-15, 15-11, 12-15, 15-5, and 15-5.

In the second match, they beat William Woods College 2-1. The spikers won the first and third games 15-11 and 15-5 while losing the second 5-15.

Head Coach Cindy Rech said of the first match, "This will mess up the seedings for the regionals because of our split contests with SEMO."

The first win over William Woods was partly due to the tough play of Sue Durrer, a junior out of Roosevelt High School in St. Louis.
