University Senate Clears Faculty Senate, Council

A proposal to create a University Senate composed of 75 faculty, 25 student and eight ex officio administrative representatives was approved by both the Faculty Senate and the Central Council last week. If the proposal is to become reality it must now gain the approval of the University Faculty committee of the whole, then of University of Missouri President John C. Weaver and the Board of Curators.

The Central Council will meet Wednesday, February 25, and in accordance with Faculty By-Laws, the University Senate proposal will be read. At a second all-faculty meeting, which Chancellor Glen Driskill said would be about ten days after the first, the faculty will vote on the proposal. A simple majority is required for passage. If the plan is passed, an editing committee will be appointed to amend the Faculty By-Laws approved by the Faculty for the transition to the student-faculty University Senate. The amended By-laws must then be approved by President Weaver and the Curators.

The Faculty Senate approved the plan, in the form of an amended motion, Thursday, February 12. The original motion by Dr. Artur Shaffer, chairman of an ad hoc faculty-student committee, charged with studying means of increasing student representation in University governance, recommended seating 60 faculty and 20 students on a University Senate, which would be elected by the faculty and the student-faculty ratio of the Senate, an amendment by Dr. J. Neal Primm (History) altering the numbers to 75 faculty and 25 students was passed.

The Central Council voted unanimously to adopt the University Senate plan at its Sunday, February 15, meeting. The motion, offered by Council president Sam Bommarito, stated that, "...the Central Council endorses the action of the Faculty Senate in recommending that a University Senate of 75 students and 75 faculty members be formed." If it further resolved that the Faculty Senate make every effort to implement such a plan, and to

was former Chancellor James L. Bugg's proposal last March to make the University of Missouri a "romantic vision" or just a plot to make his outgoing administration look good to the students?

According to Dr. Arthur Shaffer, chairman of the ad hoc committee which studied the plans for student representation, Chancellor Bugg was not 'serious about it. I think his record proves that he was a man who was very hostile to the idea of a freely-elected government, as we know by student government.' Shaffer told the CURRENT that Bugg was involved in "bumping" the faculty last year, and "he threw this in, knowing he was going to leave, as a way of making the administration look good vis-a-vis the faculty.

Bugg, who left UMSL last May to assume the presidency of Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Virginia, told the CURRENT a few days before leaving that he felt that the idea of students, faculty and administrators working together instead of separate and conflicting factions was a "romantic vision."

He recalled the "Mickey Mouse nature of student government when he was teaching at the University of Missouri-Columbia, and

Students Organize to Combat Pollution

About 200 concerned UMSL students met last Monday afternoon to consider what action should be taken to fight pollution and to inform the public on April 22 about the dangers of environmental pollution.

The meeting was opened by a terse introduction to the cause and effects of pollution by Dr. Frank Moyer, philosophy. He said that the major cause of pollution is people. He added that with the present net gain of 2.4 persons per year, the population that this planet would be almost incapable of supporting life by the year 2000. The amount of additional pollution that would be generated.

While the pumping of buildings, a student union and a multi-purpose structure are now under construction on the UMSL campus, some of these will be completed well before the spring or summer of 1971. The University's budget request for 1970-71 was $95 million, a $14.5 million increase from last year's state authorization. Weaver called this increase an "operating minimum" which was only allow the University to maintain its present status. The best the University could expect, Weaver reported, is a bad government. Which began when the University of Missouri-Columbia, and Group Ready To Help Drug Users On A Bad Trip

A local organization has been started to help persons under the influence of drugs from a bad trip and to provide information on the effects of different drugs.

A spokesman for the Acid Rescue Squad said that the group is interested in helping people, not in speaking out in favor of or against drugs.

He said that information will be provided to all persons desiring to know the effects of a drug. The Squad, consisting of volunteers from medical and non-medical professions, keeps informed on the kinds of drugs being used locally. Telling how to come down off a bad trip, Emergency services in person or by telephone are available to persons directly or through friends. The organization has two phone numbers, 652-9274 and 652-2874, with a Squad member near the phone on an almost 24 hour basis.

The non-profit organization charges nothing for its services.

IUCF Notes

A series of lectures and discussions on the Intervarsity Christian Fellowship's Doctrinal Statement of Faith have been scheduled for the meetings in the next month.

Bible studies have been scheduled Wednesday mornings at 7 a.m. in room 206, Administration building, and on Monday afternoons at 2:30 in the ecumenical building directly across from campus. All interested persons are welcome to attend.

IUCF is now seeking a faculty sponsor. Any interested parties should leave notice in the club's mailbox, room 117, Administration building.

and the University receives a raise of $1.3 million, the entire increase will be needed to provide power and maintenance for 22 new buildings ($760,000) and for the last two months of an annual rate increase in salaries ($500,000).

Dr. John Weaver, University President

"I do not attribute this difficulty to a lack of understanding of our problem in Jefferson City," Dr. Weaver said in summary, "It's just as the Governor said a few days ago: the state is broke."

In other action the Curators failed to approve the calendar recommended by the University Faculty. This calendar provides for the beginning of the fall semester, 1971, in August, with the semester ending before Christmas. The winter semester will start in January and finish in May.

The Curators also approved the calendar recommended by the University faculty, but it does not have the power to choose the calendar itself.

secure student input as to the actions of selection and powers of the 25 proposed student members."

The motion adopted by the Faculty Senate and endorsed by the Central Council is not specifically delineated; it only proposes the creation of a faculty-student government and the numbers of faculty and students to comprise that government. This vagueness was intended, Shaffer told the Senate.

"We did not want to spell out every detail that would be included if this proposal were adopted," he said. Another member of the ad hoc committee on student representation, Dr. Joseph McKenza (Economics) said, "Our intention is to get a discussion of the principles involved."

Faculty By-laws require that the details of implementing the University Senate proposal will be the responsibility of an editing committee appointed by the University Faculty. These details include devising a method of selecting or electing student representatives, determining the basis for both student and faculty representation, and amending the pertinent by-laws.

The University Faculty at its second meeting may issue specific directions to the editing committee.

University?

The calendar issue will remain stated, however, at least until the Columbia faculty approves a new calendar. By-laws grant the power to approve or take such action as they wish in regard to a calendar recommended by a committee of deans. The Board of Curators has the power to approve or disapprove the calendar chosen by the Columbia faculty, but it does not have the power to choose the calendar itself.

Executive committee meeting
March 10, 1989

Even the way in which Bugg introduced the plan to the Executive Committee then is a matter of controversy. Bugg said that the committee had "generally agreed" that student representatives from five different groups of students on campus should be seated on the Faculty Senate or at least have an ad hoc committee to advise the Senate. Some faculty members feel that Bugg went too far in his recommendations on the student participation in the Senate, while others believe that Bugg was trying to expand the role of student representation beyond what is constitutionally permitted.

Bugg sent a four-point proposal to the Faculty Senate last April 13 advocating the inclusion of up to 60 faculty members and 30 students; 2) election of some student government officers as ex-officio members; 3) a change in the composition of Senate committees to reflect the student membership in the Senate; 4) an ad hoc committee for the feasibility of student representation in the Senate.

Shaffer said that the Chancellor's plan was not "a way Bugg conducted himself but a business of just ramrodding something through. Because I know many people who were very much in favor of the idea of students being seated in the Faculty Senate. They felt that Bugg had conducted himself improperly." He added, "So as soon as he left, then, of course, the Senate was more than willing to take up the matter again."

By the time of Bugg's departure, sentiment among faculty members had begun to crystallize on the issue. The committee received responses from fifty faculty members to a questionnaire which had been sent over the spring break.

The survey revealed that only 15% were against any form of student representation in the Faculty Senate. All the other respondents favored various plans which would seat from 10 to 30 students. Only 22%, however, favored Bugg's proposal of 30 students with full voting powers.

Written answers from the respondents against students being seated on the Senate are interesting. One faculty member wrote, "The Faculty Senate has only the authority to advise the administration. Students can better represent their interests independent of the Senate," to mix student council votes would perhaps defeat the main purpose of the Senate."

Another professor wrote, "You will be disappointed in this proposal. Your problem is that you think someone has power and you wish to share it. In fact, no such a seat of power exists."

Most faculty members, however, favored student representation and in the May 8 meeting of the Faculty Senate an ad hoc committee was created to investigate the feasibility of broadening representation in University governance at UMBL.

The committee, headed by Dr. Shaffer, included Dr. Joseph McKenna (Economics), Dr. John Boswell (Psychology), Dr. David Straus (Psychology), Dr. Monroe Strickberger (Biology), and the Central Council to serve on the committee. Sam Donnmarlo, Dave Singer, Graydon Gwinn, Herb Rittner, John Helmanas, and Barry Kaufman were members of the Central Council, besides supplying the student members on the ad hoc committee, did not represent students on the plans until three days after the Faculty Senate had passed the 75-25-8 representation scheme February 12. A Council vote on the plan in January was tabled, as was the debate in the Faculty Senate postponed because of a lack of a quorum.

The committee advocated the adoption of Plan I. The members of the committee felt that it was their duty to present alternatives; that was their charge," Shaffer said. "But everyone felt that the only really viable plan was to have students and faculty in the same body."

The final recommendation of the committee was that a University Senate, consisting of 60 faculty students, be created.

Why do men who are going places become Jesuits?

Because we are a team of men serving Christ in the world. In today's complex society, Jesuits have chosen various direct and indirect means of service. Some of our current involvements are:

We are involved in research, education, missionaries, pastors, researchers, social workers, spiritual counselors and writers. Jesuits can use almost any skill you may have.

We have been in action for four hundred and thirty years--ever since an ex-Spanish soldier named Ignatius Loyola, with a few friends began the Society of Jesus in 1540. Today, we are 34,000, in almost every nation in the world--8,000 American Jesuits, working in many countries. Now, as then, our primary goal is to serve Jesus Christ in a unique community of men for service to people--anywhere, and job--in and through the Catholic Church.

Jesuits have been asked to provide leadership service to people in need, both in the Church and in the world. A reflection of this commitment is the Second Vatican Council, where Jesuits, We publish America magazine, the Jesuits are organizing Catholic radio and television programs in Latin America and Asia. We operate hundreds of high schools, colleges and universities. We man the Cambridge Massachusettes Guthrie Center for Social Research. We have Jesuit painters, poets, novelists, sculptors, and musicians. Others are concerned with business ethics (everything from the corner store to international banks and corporations). We are helping the Church find ways to mobilize its economic and institutional power for alleviating poverty, stabilizing wages and stopping the education for the poor.

These are a few of our activities. As we become involved in helping others and the world, we will live the Jesuit life for two years before deciding whether or not you wish to become a Jesuit.

NDC Convention in Chicago Stresses Grassroots Politics

John Oleski, president of the Students for Political Action, Judy Daygott, student government president, and Kristi Kincaid, teaching assistant, and Jim Butler, undergraduate, represented UMSL at the First National Conference of the New Democratic Coalition held in Chicago on February 15-15. The three acted both as members of the Conference's Student Caucus and as voting delegates from Missouri.

The Conference was opened Friday, February 13, with a speech by Iowa Senator Harold Hughes, who nominated Eugene McCarthy for President at the 1968 Democratic National Convention and who has himself been mentioned as a "dark horse" for the 1972 Democratic nomination. Hughes spoke of the program of political reform apparently being carried on by the Nixon administration in such cases as the Chicago Conspiracy trial, the Black Panther raids, and the move by Attorney-General John Mitchell to subjoin film and notes belonging to the news media.

Highlight of the conference's scheduled events was the Saturday evening address by New York Congressman Aliard Lowenstein, originator of the "Dump Johnson" movement in 1968 and a founder of the NDC. Emphasizing that the issues of liberal Democrats, such as Vietnam, poverty, and an overall reordering of national priorities, have been usurped by the Nixon administration, Lowenstein called for a continued political effort and public education as the best means for reversing liberals and opening a new political future—that is affecting the nation in solving its problems.

Coincidence of the NDC Conference with the ending of the Chicago Conspiracy trial provided opportunity for a focus on the problem of Constitutional rights, Mrs. David Dellinger, whose husband is one of the "Conspiracy Seven," who was featured speaker at the Conference's Saturday night gala; and the unexpected appearance immediately after Lowenstein's speech of Conspiracy Defense Attorney William Kunstler, who has been sentenced to 48 months in jail for contempt of court, was impedes for a demonstration march by NDC members the following day in support of the Conspiracy Seven. A liaison committee between the NDC and the conspiracy organization was also established.

Resolutions were adopted by the Student Caucus pertaining this problem and to the need for financial assistance for students and other poor people to attend such meetings as the NDC National Conference.

The Conference closed with a business meeting Sunday, February 15, at which St. Louisan Marvin Madeson was elected National Chairman. Madeson is Chairman of the Missouri NDC and was elected at the Metropolitan St. Louis NDC. He is also a member of the Missouri McGovern Commission for Democracy Party Reform.

BY RUTH KAAN
CURRENT STAFF REPORTER

When the Danforth Foundation was offering financial support to schools with inventive ideas in curricular and extracurricular activities in the fall of 1966, Donald Arnatt of UMSL's Fine Arts Department when the playwright-rector of Mary Institute, submitted a proposal to write an opera which students at the secondary level would find appealing.

At that time Arnatt was unaware not only that he would receive a grant, but that this move would eventually lead to an association with playwright Christopher Fry, Fry's "Boy with a Cart," and the "Lady's Not for Beast, Bar," will be presented at UMSL by the University Players in April.

After hearing the grant, Arnatt, a professional composer, began searching for an appropriate libretto (the text of an opera). Arnatt recognized a dialogue communication of the performance. "There was much more involved in this job than simply finding a play with an interesting plot," said Arnatt. "Because we spoken dialogue is transformed into operatic lyric, the musical element greatly lengthens the duration of the performance."

When he finally encountered Fry's "The Boy with a Cart," Arnatt recognized a dialogue composed of succinct, vivid verse, and a plot communicating a philosophical message through a miraculous event. Having reached part of his goal, Arnatt's next step was that of discussing his plans with Fry.

In the fall of 1967, while on a recital tour in England, Arnatt spent a day visiting Fry at his home in East Dean, a small village in West Sussex. The two British gentlewomen (Arnatt had once attended a concert in London) sipped tea and chatted. The warm, informal, country atmosphere of The Toft, Fry's cottage, composed as a reflection of Fry's personality in the eyes of Arnatt. "Neither the man nor his home are anything titanious qualities," Arnatt observed, Arnatt reported that for his study, Fry, a genuine countryman, had chosen a room in The Toft overlooking the countryside.

Fry, regarded by Arnatt as a very hospitable host, treated his guest on a tour through the village. As they walked along, Arnatt found that Fry, a true villager by his nature, was accepted as a village member rather than as a celebrity. When they got down to the business of discussing the problem, Arnatt was keyed up for a big battle, which to his amazement, never even came to take place.

As he approached the subject of trimming down the text in certain parts of the play, Arnatt was relieved when Fry readily accepted his suggestions, and he was astonished at how much latitude he had been granted by his collaborators to where the text could be trimmed further! Fry revealed to him, said Arnatt, that he had privately considered the potentialities of "The Boy with a Cart" for presentation as an opera long before his visit.

Because of this they both worked with mutual enthusiasm. When asked for a description of Christopher Fry, Arnatt recalled his strong sense of humor, his genuine warmth, and his cooperative spirit. Arnatt also recollected that Fry, in spite of his many achievements, made no attempt to "play his role" as a "great man," and demonstrated no signs conveying feelings of self-importance. "It could hardly believe that this was the accomplished playwright whom I had admired for so long," said Arnatt.

Tax Increase Necessary
But Insufficient

In his report to the Board of Curators last week, University of Missouri President John C.
Weaver described the bleak financial prospects of the University.
The day, appropriately, was Friday 13.

Weaver told the Board and the press that under no foreseeable circumstances would the University receive its $5 million "operating minimum" budget request from the state. The University, he said, cannot continue at present levels: it must eat back. If the state tax increase referendum is not approved by the voters of Missouri in April, the budget will be for $25 million; if it is approved, the budget may go as high as $45 million. Neither possibility is pleasant.

The problem, stated simply, is that the State of Missouri is broke.
Until this situation is rectified,
higher education in Missouri will have to accommodate itself to a bare subsistence level; expansion and improvements are unrealistic illusions. The consequences of such existence are frightening:
The University may not be able to accept qualified students because of space limitations, or faculty may drift to other, better paying institutions, lowering the quality of education here. Such consequences are blows to any university; they are particularly threatening at UMSL, an academic fledgling.

So, then, is the solution? Or is there a solution? Money must come from somewhere, and few Missourians want to be anywhere than to their inflation-torted wallets. Yet this is our only recourse.
Moreover, we are advocates of quality in higher education, must actively support the tax increase referendum this year, then seek to expand this financial support in the future, until such necessary but insufficient tax increases take place as we vote in April become instruments of improvement, and not the stuff of survival.

A General Upheaval

Down to Earth Benefits of Space Program

Over the past couple of decades, the liberals in this country have found anathemas in ready abundance whenever they've needed something to blame the troubles of the times upon.

In the Fifties, they had Joe Mc-Carthy to show them how relatively good they were. In the Sixties, the targets were more abundant. The war in Vietnam, ROTC on campus, the "military-industrial complex", big business, Godwater, Agnew, and in general, anybody
in the right of Jacob Javits were gigantically eschewed.

THE UMSL CURRENT

The feats of Apollo 11 and 12 have brought a new target into view, one which will undoubtedly be a favorite in the 1970's: the space program. "We should now spend our money on earthly problems rather than space technology" is a line we will hear with depressing regularity. But if one will ignore the liberal fatalities for a moment (for all time would be even better) and lake another look at the space program, one will see that the space program's technological spin-off has very extensive dependent applications.

That the aerospace industry has grown by leaps and bounds over the past ten years is obvious to everyone. What is not so obvious to most of us is that the aerospace industry has grown more rapidly than even they themselves expected.

In order to keep pace with this expansion, the firms contracted by NASA have had to develop highly effective methods of training people for complex jobs in a relatively short period of time. The expertise gained from developing these new educational methods is immediately applicable to all sorts of earth-bound problems. For one thing, the chance that the hard-core unemployed will learn a well-paying, technical skill is improved a hundred-fold.

In the field of medicine, monitoring and measuring devices developed by the space program are providing doctors with information previously unattainable. Nurses are now able to care for twenty-five patients at one time because of these devices.

In addition, the medical spin-off has been so impressive that NASA now has space programs at each medical institute and universities on the possibilities.

For all you ecology buffs out there, the space program has something for you, too. In the area of waste disposal, the aerospace

Furthermore, such courses alongside courses in black litera-poetry—not to “segregate” those poets from the rest of the 19th century, but rather to allow ade- quate time and opportunity for the close examination of a group of writers whom we believe have certain things (other than three and one-half decades) in common. And just as one would not consider dissolving our Romantic poetry course on the ground that the period is included in the survey of English literature, so the intellectual value of American Literature 270 would in no way be jeopardized by the integration of any of our general surveys of American Literature.

There is, however, one harsh reality none of us can afford to lose sight of: most of the black authors studied in the course would be totally excluded from the study of literature on this campus if there were no American Literature 270.

Authority’s Morality

Dear Editor:
The article in the Jan. 12 issue of this paper concerning the “inter- visitation conflict” at Mizzou-Col- umbia is a gas! This is by far the most witty, biting piece of social satire that has ever appeared in the UMSL paper.

The literary style of the article, I believe, is a classic example of hyperbole—carrying an event to such an extreme that it appears as a ridiculous fantasy (fantastic). Man is the animal that laughs and cries. In these troubled and bitter times, college inhabitants (a more inclusive word than “students”) need to be able to laugh at themselves and at their fun-loving administrator.

I’m glad I brought that up—ADMINISTRATORS. Did anyone ever say that the philosopher-king could not exist in a far-flung in- stitution of higher learning? I am really tickled by the paragraph where:

Schwa-da said he took action against the fraternities contrary to the Curators’ decision because he had received new information concerning immoral activity and drug usage in the Greek houses during inter- visitation.

He also immortalizes! Alas drugs! Inhabitants! Try to understand the administration of Flazo’s Republic on Earth. The City of God has been created again in this article! The action taken in this fantasy by a new mythological hero, Schwa-da, is the result. Philosophers have searched—may, philosophers, as- tronomers, theologians, supreme court justices, social (and, yes, perhaps even “natural”) scientists and even the students and inhabi- tants of colleges universities throughout the ages have searched for an answer to what is moral and immoral—and then for a method to institute philosopher- kingship.

It is unfortunate that the events described herein are not real. It is unfortunate that the system described cannot exist in a democratic system where every individual knows what is “good” only for himself.

I believe that if such an idea as expressed in this article could be brought about—instead of the troublesome, chaotic democracy—Jesus would walk the Earth—the sinners would be sent to their fate. God and Schwa-da (the divine mentor of morality) would be in his heaven and all would be right with the world.

Destroy democracy! ADMINISTRATORS have the potential for finding morality for all of us! Give for the creation of the new folk-hero, Schwa-da. Such a philsopher-king could certainly arise from the ashes of chaos—to begin the sovereignty of morals and druglessness.

I laugh with the article—its quality of unreality and its hyperbolic derision of the will of immoral, petty individuals. Simultaneously, I weep for mankind. The answer to his age-old search is before his eyes—ADMINISTRATION—and he cannot see. The voice cries in the wilderness—those who come before the Messiah: Wall-ass the prophet, Ag-new the Baptist, Nixon the Holy Roman Emperor.

Their message is clear—accept it, my poor foolish comrades—

Take off your shackles of the free- dom of action—know that you are free only in the context of morality—know that it takes the wisdom of a divinity to be moral—know that the divinity exists or can exist—follow him and be free.

It is in the best interest of all students that Chancellor Driscoll stressed the importance of not “watering” the school’s standards for the purpose of providing a col- lege education for the “disadvan- taged” who desire it. I don’t think that even he would sincerely wel- come the idea. This would certainly be a mistake because a student wants the best education possible from his university. However, I also agree that these students wishing to attend should be found, encouraged, and motivated to be- come competent citizens of UMSL.

Debaters Make Clean Sweep

The UMSL debaters achieved a 9-0 record at the Gateway Invitational Tournament, Feb. 13-14, at St. Louis University. Debaters Mike Beatty and Hubert F. Felber defeated Washington University, Iowa State (they were the only team to beat ISU), Wheaton College, Winona College, Princip­ple College, and Northwestern College in the elimination rounds.

Theylewaged Wheaton, Vanderbilt and Coe in the final round.

The superior award and first-place trophy they won represented the sixteenth and seventeenth awards the team has won this year. They now have a cumulative record of 52-43, with over 50% of their performances considered perfect.

They will travel to DePaul University this weekend for their next tournament. Also, they have earned invitations to prestigious tournaments next year at the University of Indiana and Vanderbilt.

Hawks Win 101-81

In spite of their lack of height and although they were outmanned under the boards, the Rivermen managed to play the Hawks even for a period and a half. As Coach Chuck Smith said, "a small team like ours is likely to run out of steam about midway through the second half." Indeed, the Rivermen were in the half game until about nine minutes remained in the contest. With 9:04 left the Rivermen trailed by only six when a Rockhurst turnover gave the ball to the Rivermen, who then failed to capitalize on the opportunity. Two fouls later, UMSL was down by eleven and the game was out of reach.

Early foul trouble hampered the UMSL attack as Dodoxy Rolphinkus up his third foul with 12:33 left in the first half and the team as a whole had nine personals before the period was ten minutes old. Further complications set in during the second half when Caldwell, Mark Bernsen and Henson each was charged with his fourth personal foul, within a one minute span.

Despite the foul difficulties, UMSL led throughout the first half, holding a 32-23 lead at one point. Rockhurst came right back to take a 37-33 lead with 6:40 left. The game remained close throughout the rest of the half with UMSL leading 49-48 at intermission. Henson and Caldwell dominated first half scoring with 21 and 12 respectively.

Jim Schaeffer's basket with 18:30 left in the game gave Rockhurst a lead they held throughout. Despite Henson and Caldwell combining for 38 points in the next five minutes, Rockhurst opened up a ten point lead. A free throw by Joe Luskemper with 7:17 left cut the Hawks' margin to 90-71, that was as close as UMSL could come, however, as the Rivermen saw the game and their playoff chances disappear into the snowy Kansas City night.

Rockhurst's Cari Cook scored 16 second half points to lead the home team with 24 while Jim Schaeffer added 23.

Smith Berates Cagers After Ragged Victory

by Bryan Burns, Current Staff Reporter

The Rivermen gained a victory and a lecture February 11 when they slipped by SIU-Edwardsville 84-72 at Viking Hall. Although winning, UMSL outdistanced the visitors 32-16 and did not look good. Head Coach Chuck Smith lectured his charges behind a closed lockeroom door for fifteen minutes after the game.

In Current's postgame following the game and lecture, Smith expressed his displeasure with the performance of his team. "Lately, we haven't been the same," he said. "We played well at the time of LSU-New Orleans' visit to St. Louis, but we haven't been the same since." Smith praised the efforts of his two sophomores, Mark Bernsen and Glen "Dooky" Rohn but was concerned with the rest of his team's consistency, saying, "It's a matter of judgment and the exact things we work on in practice for two days prior to a game we haven't been able to execute in a game situation."

In the early going it looked as if the Cougars could run across the river were going to break the box that the Rivermen, now 4-0 against SIU-Edwardsville 5-2, have had on them. However, with UMSL up by one, 13-12, with five minutes gone, the Rivermen capitalized on SIU mistakes and jumped to a nine point bulge, 37-28, with 6:29 left in the opening period. The Cougars came storming back and during a three minute period in which they held the Rivermen scoreless, Harry Gallatin's boys stormed back to tie the score on Dennis Henson's basket with 7:21 left cut the Hawk lead. A free throw by Joe Luskemper with 7:17 left cut the Hawks' margin to 90-71, that was as close as UMSL could come, however, as the Rivermen saw the game and their playoff chances disappear into the snowy Kansas City night.

Rockhurst's Cari Cook scored 16 second half points to lead the home team with 24 while Jim Schaeffer added 23.

Southern Comfort

For Spring Sports

UMSL's spring schedule will get off to a swinging start when the baseball and golf teams travel south to prepare themselves for expanded schedules.

The baseball Rivermen under the able leadership of UMSL's own E. Copeland will make stops in Memphis, Little Rock and Fayetteville before starting their St. Louis schedule. They open the season March 21 by playing three games in the C.B.C. classic in Memphis. The Rivermen will face Bellarmine, Western Illinois and host Christian Brothers. They play a double header at Southwestern of Memphis March 28, two at Little Rock U. March 30, a twinbill at Memphis State March 31 and two at Central Methodist April 4 before returning to beautiful Forestwood Park to host St. Louis U. April 7.

In order to prepare his team for their southern ordeal, Coach Copeland, already acknowledged as the best baseball coach in UMSL history, has called a meeting for Wednesday February 25 in room 208 of the Administration Building at 4:00 p.m. Anyone interested in trying out for the team should attend.

Larry Berres' golf team will spend a week in Cape Coral, Florida taking part in the Gulf American Classic from March 30-April 4. Following that, the Rivermen golfers will meet SIU-Edwardsville April 7 before hosting Illinois College and Culver-Stockton at Normandie Golf Club April 8.

Berres has also called a meeting for next week to be held next Tuesday, February 24, at 4:00 p.m. in the conference room of the blue metal office building at the back of campus.

Riverman of the Week
by Marty Hendin, Associate Sports Editor

What is it like to be 6’4” tall and play center in college basketball against opponents like 6-7 NKU’s Waarsznki, 6-7 Paul, 6-6 Jim Schafer of Rockhurst and 6-11 Steve Schmitt of USA? “I prefer playing against big men,” says UMSL’s 6-4 center Chuck Henson. “They’re slower and usually weak on defense. Also, playing a man-to-man defense they don’t come out to get me and I guess they forget about me.”

So far this season, tall opposing centers have “forgotten” about Henson enough to allow him to come up with a game high 25 points and 12 rebounds against South Alabama and a college career high 27 points against Rockhurst College last Saturday.

Chuck hasn’t confined his scoring to games against tall opponents. He is currently averaging 15.1 points per game and 7.6 rebounds to rank second on the team in each department. He has been UMSL’s leading scorer in six games and has hit double figures in scoring in 11 of UMSL’s 19 games, with six of these being 20 point efforts. Such heroics have earned for Chuck his third “Riverman of the Week” selection this week and second in a row, making him the first UMSLan to be so honored in both categories.

Chuck was born in California and moved to Piedmont, Missouri at age four. He attended Clearwater High School in Piedmont, where he averaged 24 points per game his junior year and 21 his senior year. He hit a high of 51 points during a game in his senior year at Clearwater.

Following graduation from high school, Chuck attended Mineral Area Junior College in Flat River, where he averaged 10 points per game, both seasons. While at Mineral Area, Chuck met and married the former Ardith Jean Provance. He and Ardith are now the proud parents of two year old Shawna Kay who “reads” through the Rivermen game program at each home game looking for pictures of her daddy.

Chuck enrolled at UMSL in September, 1968 and contributed much to UMSL’s District championship team last year. Playing both at forward and center, Henson averaged 7.7 points per game while doing a fine job defensively. He entered the third playoff game with Drury at the start of the second half and hit three quick baskets to give UMSL needed momentum. He rates the district title and national tournament participation as his top basketball thrill.

Recently elected Steamers Club officers will assume office at the next Steamers meeting to be held Monday, March 2 at 7:00 in room 208 of the Administration Building.

Hoppo were chosen as secretary and treasurer respectively, replacing Roy Brickey and Mike Checkett. Checkett was elected sergeant-at-arms and Gerry Beus was elected as next year’s Riverman mascot, replacing Neil Friedman.
