Retention of Pass-Fail Option Urged

The committee recommended that additional information on the pass-fail option be included in the university bulletin and the semester class schedules and that students with a minimum of nine hours of regular grade courses per semester be eligible for honors receiving the "P" and "F" grades.

Of the schools and colleges, the College of Arts and Sciences had the largest percentage of grades on the pass-fail option, 6.3 percent. This compares with 4 percent for the College of Arts and Sciences in the previous semester.

The School of Education had the smallest percentage of pass-fail grades among the schools and colleges, 4.4 percent, down from 6.0 percent the previous semester. Only two courses in the school can be taken on pass-fail.

Modern Languages was the individual department with the largest percentage of grades on a pass-fail basis, 11.5 percent, an increase of from 8.1 percent the previous semester.

No Reserve Officers Training Corps courses were taken on pass-fail during the 1970 winter semester.

The percentage of grades taken on the pass-fail option increased from the fall semester of 1969 to the 1970 winter semester in all departments except Administration, Fine Arts, Physics, and ROTC.

Nearly 75 percent of the courses taken on pass-fail during the 1970 winter semester were freshmen and sophomore courses, those numbered 100 and lower. Only ten pass-fail grades were in junior-senior level classes, courses numbered 300 and above.

The pass-fail students taking courses on pass-fail during the winter semester of 1970 would have normally received: A, 5.5 percent; B, 21.3 percent; C, 50 percent; D, 15.6 percent; and F, 4.6 percent.

The remaining 3.3 percent received excused or delayed grades.

This compares with a grade distribution in regular graded courses of A, 18.5 percent; B, 31.7 percent; C, 36.5 percent; D, 7.9 percent; and F, 5.1 percent, with the remaining 6.3 percent excused or delayed grades.

Long Distance Science
Faculty Member Goes To Burma
For International Exhibition

By JIM GURNEY
Current Staff Writer

A person would probably feel extremely important to enter a foreign country for the first time and influence the local press in its position on an issue.

That was the situation of John S. Rigden, associate professor of physics and education, who conducted two four-hour seminars at Rangoon University during a recent visit to Burma, where his opinion on testing was endorsed by a Rangoon newspaper.

"Half of my audience were physics people and the other half were policy makers," Rigden said. "These policy makers are responsible for the academic life of the students."

"They were particularly interested in my views on testing procedures. I told them that I was against objective tests because they restrict the creativity of the student."

The Rangoon newspaper's endorsement appeared the next day in opposition to the rapid move towards objective testing.

He explained that the seminars had been arranged through the civilian head of Burma's military forces, who had introduced him to an important official in Burma's educational apparatus with whom he discussed details.

The visit led to an International Science Exhibition held in Rangoon. Rigden was invited to Burma in an official capacity. He spent two weeks there in late November.

"This was the first time in eight years that any person other than a tourist was allowed to enter Burma," he remarked. "I was invited to come back next summer by the man who had originally cut off these relationships."

The exhibition had been held in concurrence with a youth festival, officially underwritten in Burma.

"The military dictatorship in Burma has created a state of depression," according to Rigden. "These people welcome any form of diversion in their lives."

The show, with technical education as its theme, was expected to attract some 30,000 people. Some nations were asked to participate and requested to bring art works and displays.

Such nations as India, East and West Germany, Japan, Russia, Hungary, and the United States were represented.

"The countries were represented that don't even recognize each other," he said.

The United States displayed new equipment in the field of physics. West Germany went to the most elegant display, illustrating the chassis of automobiles.

Mum's The Word On Curator Recommendations To Hearnes

Student president Harry Kaufman has declined to announce the names of those nominated for the Board of Curators next year by the four university campus presidents and a representative from the women's student government in Columbia at a meeting with Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, Dec. 10.

Four curators will be appointed. Hearnes said that he would take the students' nominations into consideration.

Also attending the meeting were four members of the board: Pleas and Smith, William Billings, Doyle Patterson, and John Williamson.

Kaufman said that the members of the student group agreed not to release the names. In addition, he said he personally refused to name those nominated as a gesture of student integrity.

According to Kaufman, a university official has claimed that the reason students were not included on the recently organized search committee for a new university president is the history of nominees' names being "leaked" to the press when students have participated on search committees at other universities.

"The desire to show that students can maintain secrecy contributes to my personal reluctance to release the names," Kaufman said.

Kaufman asserted that the selection of the new curators would be based on political considerations.

"Appointing someone more in line with student perspectives will take a long time," he said. "It will end up because of political realities."

"The governor receives political pressure from many sides. This effort will help to put pressure on him from our side.""According to Kaufman, Hearnes urged the curators to help students determine when local campus administrators, not the curators, are responsible for conditions unfavorable to students and to dispel the antagonism between the board and students.

Search Group Named

All ten members of the university presidential search and screening committee have now been chosen.

The announcement was made at last Friday’s meeting of the Board of Curators.

UMSL is represented by Robert S. Sullivan, dean of the graduate school, and Robert L. Allen, professor of economics.

Members from the Columbia campuses are Elmer R. Kiehl, dean of the college of agriculture and director of the agricultural experiment station, and George W. Preckshot, professor of chemical engineering.

Members from the Rolla campus are Theodore J. Plante, dean of the school of mines and metallurgy, and William J. James, professor of chemistry and director of the graduate center for materials research.

Members from the Kansas City campus include Jack D. Heyringer, dean of the school of administration; Shirley A. Hill, professor of mathematics and education; and Elmer L. Horseman, professor of law.

Carl J. Mariefeld, director of the environmental health surveillance center, has been selected as university-wide representative.

The search and screening committee will be expected to complete the list of possibilities by late August and fifteen candidates, with a complete file of information of each.

This list will be turned over to a second committee of five members, which will conduct investigations and interviews to reduce the list to between twelve and fifteen names which, unlike the first list, will be ranked in order of preference.

This ranked list will be submitted to the Board of Curators, who will make the final decision.

The committee of five will consist of three curators, an alumnus, and the elected chairman of the search and screening committee.

Since this committee has no immediate function, its establishment will be delayed until early in 1971.

Library Cooperation

Library cooperation among the four campus libraries continues.

The university-wide library council must approve expenditures of library improvement funds; to avoid duplication and to make the appropriate placement.

The university-wide library council must approve expenditures of library improvement funds; to avoid duplication and to make the appropriate placement.

Other proposed methods of cooperation include sharing of all duplicate volumes received by any library as gifts, and utilizing the resources of the Center for Research Libraries (Chicago) more fully.

The university’s membership in the Center allows free borrowing by all four campus libraries.

No Quorum

The Faculty Senate will not hold another meeting before the Christmas break.

Their next meeting will probably be held “about the middle of January,” according to Dr. Thomas Jordan, chairman of the senate.

The senate’s scheduled meeting last Thursday was postponed because there was no quorum.

Dr. Monroe Strickberger (biology) had intended to introduce a proposal that at meeting calling for the formation of a committee to discuss with the Board of Curators three previously approved resolutions opposing their decision to penalize Strickberger and three other faculty members.

Strickberger Motion Stalled

The other three faculty members who cancelled classes during last May’s strike.

The other three faculty members who cancelled classes during last May’s strike.

They are to expect a hearing by their actions were Lyle Dorsett (history), Jonathan Cohen (mathematics), and Daniel Fireside (English).

In related action, board president Pleasant Smith has requested that university financial officers inform him if any effort is being made to reimburse the penalized faculty members.

Smith made the request to R. H. Beznai, vice president for finance and comptroller, in an executive session before the curators’ Oct. 3 meeting.

The Maneater, the student newspaper at Columbia, reported that Beznai said the board’s directive did not apply specifically to out-right reimbursement of the faculty members, but involved compensation for extension division work and other services. Smith’s directive also applied to seven Columbia sociology faculty members.

The show will be highlighted by poetry readings and rock music.

There will also be several speakers on the program.

Physics Taught To Burmese

Before returning to the United States, Higid spent five days in Malaysia, where he was consulted on the feasibility of constructing a technical high school.

Describing the conviction for such an undertaking, he said, “The country consists of three ethnic groups—Malaysian, Chinese, and Indian.

The Chinese and the Indians were imported to do the work of the bureaucracy. They hope to bring the Malaysians to the level of the other two groups by encouraging more of them to pursue engineering and science.

He discussed the problem of training Malaysian students. His purpose had been the postponement of plans for building the technical high school in May.

“They want this high school but they haven’t made any plans,” Rigden explained. “I gave them a reasonable approach to complete the school in three years.”

A Christmas Dance for...
GM To Be Challenged On Consumer Responsibility

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Campaign GM is back for Round II in its battle to make General Motors' directors responsible.

Campaign GM, the offshoot of the Project Corporate Responsibility (PCR) devoted to haunting the corporation until it becomes responsive to those it affects, has announced plans to take to GM Board of Directors.

Maintaining that corporate shareholders, consumers, dealers and employees have no effective voice in corporate decisions or directions that directly affect them, Round II will focus on restructuring the decision-making processes presently locked in the secret sanctums of GM’s isolated Board of Directors.

Phillip Moore, Campaign GM coordinator, presented three proposals, already on their way to processes presently locked in the form of a proxy statement.

They fill in the blanks and send it back in. As Moore put it, “There is no debate, no campaign, no contest.”

Proposal No. 1 would force GM to list both management and consumers to participate in the election of three of the company’s General Motors executives (employees, dealers and consumers) to participate in the election of three of the company’s directors. Each constituency would be as it has been in the past. Nominations by shareholders would be by petition. As few as 10 shareholders could submit nominations for management and these names would be by petition. As few as 100 shareholders could submit nominations for management and these names would be listed along with GM nominees, alphabetically, on the ballot. The Project On Corporate Responsibility owns 12 shares of GM stock.

Proposal No. 2 would permit GM’s 794,000 employees as well as countless dealers and consumers to participate in the selection of three of the company’s directors. Each constituency would hold a special election, in which it would select one director, subject to shareholder ratification. At present these constituencies have virtually no participatory role in GM decision-making, other than building their $221.2 million annual revenues.

Proposal No. 3 requires GM to publish in its annual report hard statistics of concern to both shareholders and the public: air pollution control, automobile safety and minority hiring. In the past the firm has refused to make public this information.

Campaign GM has as yet had no direct contact with GM directors about their proposals. Moore said, however, that they do not expect GM to reform itself. It is for this reason that they are taking their proposals to individual and institutional shareholders with whom they have had success in the past, and from whom they expect support.

They need 3 per cent of shareholders voting to get shareholder nominations in the proxy statement for this year’s May election. Last year will be the last time that shareholders had a say in the election of GM’s directors.

Last year, the Campaign for Corporate Responsibility concentrated on universities such as universities which both hold GM stock and contain the next generation of the corporate elite.

According to Moore, “What was once a profession is now a common pattern. At Harvard, MIT, Stanford, Yale, Pennsylvania and Michigan, to name a few, new policies are being developed to ensure socially responsible investments. New courses, too, on corporate responsibility are being offered, and soon there will be a new generation of managers and technicians who will ultimately redefine the corporations of the nation.”

If, however, they do not succeed, GM is compelled to include the proposals - as submitted by shareholder Project On Corporate Responsibility, in the May proxy statement. Should GM reject the proposals, Moore said, PCR would take them before the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Proposals one and two could conceivably be implemented this year. Because, however, the implementation of two involves a re-definition of the present corporate structure, it is not even anticipated as a possibility until the election of 1973.

Though attempts in Round I to broaden the perspective of GM Board of Directors failed, Moore describes it as an “immense victory.”

Our purpose then was to awaken the public, so we raised issues. Now we are suggesting specific areas of reform, for which there is a new consciousness among institutional shareholders.”

Last year, the Campaign for Corporate Responsibility concentrated on universities. This year, say its officials, the corporation is more receptive. At Harvard, MIT, Stanford, Yale, Pennsylvania and Michigan, to name a few, new policies are being developed to ensure socially responsible investments. New courses, too, on corporate responsibility are being offered, and soon there will be a new generation of managers and technicians who will ultimately redefine the corporations of the nation.

Mattingly Heads 1971 Current

Harold E. “Matt” Mattingly Jr., has been designated as editor-in-chief for the 1971 Current by the Student Publications Committee. His term of office will commence at the start of the winter semester and conclude at the end of the winter semester in early 1971.

Mattingly, a junior with a double major in English and history, is a 1968 graduate of McBride High School. His previous journalistic experience includes movie reviewer for the McBride Colonnade, and staff writer and circulation director of the Current since the fall of 1968.

Mattingly announced that his editorialship will emphasize “continuity.”

“This year’s editor will have the added responsibility of re-organizing the staff so as to prepare new staff members to operate the Current after the graduation of this year’s juniors, like myself, who constitute the majority of the staff at present,” he said.

Regarding his editorial policy, Mattingly described his approach as “pragmatic without deference to ideological considerations.”

“I don’t have stock in either the Left or the Right,” he stated. Mattingly mentioned that the staff has several openings for news, feature and sports writers, and photographers, as well as general newspaper production personnel.

We welcomed all interested students to contact him or other members of the editorial staff in the Current office, room 218 of the Administration Building, as soon as possible.

Selecting A President--A Job For All

The argument advanced by an un­ students were not placed on the search committee for a new president because they are too irresponsible, is pat­

the position, requires, for the umpteenth

Basically, the argument boils down to a statement that students are not as responsible, or mature, as mem­ erors, and administrators. As a result, they are not able to resist the temptation to reveal the identities of the nominees, causing em­ candidates.

Dear Editor,

Friday of this week will mark the beginning of the 16-day holiday period. One cannot help but look forward to this break with eagerness and anticipation. Hence, it comes as no surprise that everyone will be more than a little keyed-up by the end of the week.

May I encourage each of you to exercise judgement, prudence, discretion, and good sense in observing the holiday season. While I do not normally interpret my role as one of quoting rules and regulations, I would perhaps be remiss were I not to remind you of that rule which prohibits the possession or consumption of alcoholic beverages on university property. This rule exists and is one with which we must live. I ask your cooperation in seeing to it that it is not abused.

May I take this opportunity to extend to you sincere good wishes for a very happy, safe and sane holiday season and for a happy, healthy, and rewarding 1971.

Re-election Results Not Released Yet

The official results of last week's re-election of day school representatives to the Central Council will not be released until Friday, according to George Wilhelm, chairman of the council's election subcommittee.

Wilhelm said that he is withholding the results on the advice of John Heithaus, chairman of the Appointments and Elections Committee of the council. He indicated that the results would be announced after being approved by the entire committee at a meeting scheduled for Friday.

Wilhelm did add, however, that every candidate had received at least one vote and would presumably assume office. Only eleven candidates filed for the eleven positions to be filled.

Candidates in the election included incumbents Bob Haushalter and Keith Kramer. The committee publishes the monthly activity calendar and prepares a comprehensive student handbook.

Five alternate and regular seats on the court will become vacant at the end of this semester. Any student who is not a member of the Central Council is eligible to participate.

Students are also needed to serve on three council committees. These are the Curriculum Committee, chaired by Paul Wilhelm, needs workers for the proposed course evaluation project of the council.

Applications for positions on the Student Court are now being accepted, according to John Heithaus, chairman of the Central Council Appointments and Elections Committee.

The Student Court is now being appointed to fill the seats vacated last spring in the regular and alternate positions. These positions can contact Heithaus, Wilhelm, Kramer, or Miss Schnabel through the campus mail box in room 117, Administration building.

Keith Kramer, the committee publishes the monthly activity calendar and prepares a comprehensive student handbook.

We wish to thank everyone at the University of Missouri-St. Louis for asking us to come and take registrations from the students. We felt that all of the young men and women were courteous and a credit to their school.

We feel they should be allowed to vote, and we would feel safe in their decisions. Our country need never worry if it were put in the hands of the students at UMSL.

Frustrated by the large number of unshelved books on the fifth level of the library, a group of students gathered the books from one area onto a table to illustrate the problem. A count taken by the Current Sunday afternoon turned up 2800 unsheleved books and magazines on the fourth and fifth levels.

Book Reshelving In Library Snarled

By MIKE JONES
Current Associate Editor

The lack of funds for additional student help is resulting in delays in the reshelving of books in the library, according to Miss Susan Freegard, head librarian.

"We're really quite concerned about the situation," Miss Freegard said.

A number of students have complained in the last week to Miss Freegard and the Current that an unusually large number of books were lying on tables in the library, waiting to be shelved. The complainers said that the unsheleved books prevented many students from finding and using needed books.

A count taken by the Current Sunday afternoon revealed that 1,783 books and bound periodicals and 417 unbound periodicals were lying unused on tables on the fourth and fifth levels of the library.

The problem of reshelving is most serious on weekends because fewer people work in the library then, Miss Freegard stated.

"We have smaller shifts working on weekends," she explained. "It takes two people to man the circulation desk. If there are only two people on the shift, there is none available for reshelving."

Eleven students work part-time in the circulation department of the library. This is far short of the number needed, Miss Freegard declared.

"We don't have extra funds to hire more students, but we still don't have enough," she said.

A special report published by the Library Committee of the Faculty Senate in May, 1969, recommended that 61 student assistants be employed in the library for the present academic year, based on estimated enrollment and the size of the library's collection. It recommended that 20-25 students be employed in the circulation department.

Miss Freegard said that she hoped to have the reshelving backlog solved by the end of the Christmas vacation.

"We hope to have this problem straightened out by the Spring semester," she added.

Stenner Headlines Alumni Squad

Jack Stenner, Chuck Henson and Terry Reiter will return to UMSL basketball action Saturday night at 6 p.m. when the alumni takes on a faculty team in the annual Alumni Night battle. The game will take place at Viking Hall and precede UMSL's game with Northeast Missouri State.

Stenner, UMSL's all-time leading scorer with a three-year total of 1,258 points, is currently ing for the government in D.C. He graduated in 1969. Henson, fourth on the all-time list with 519 points in two years, graduated in 1970, and is now a junior high teacher and coach in southeast Missouri.

Reiter, at 6'8" the tallest player ever to wear the Rivermen uniform, recently returned from active duty with the Army in Germany. Terry scored 327 points in two years of action of the first two UMSL intercollegiate teams. The faculty-alumni battle, won last year by the alums, is part of the festivities at Alumni Night.

"Ron is an aggressive player," said Smith, "so he's going to pick up fouls.
"Everytime Ron leaves the game," he said again, "we get hurt.
"The Cardinal outside shooting didn't help, either. In keeping with the season, the Rivermen got decked by Holley. Gary Holley, that is.
"The senior guard is described in the Jewell press guide as a "5' 10" package of potential dynamite."

He explored from the outside and sank the visitors with consistently accurate shooting.
"On Monday, the Rivermen came home to take that first small step toward Smith's proposed "long winning streak."

In so doing, they stepped over the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, 76-68, in a game which was disappointing to both teams.
"I was very much disappointed in the performance of, actually, both ball clubs," said Panther coach Charles Parsley.
"From what I've been told, St. Louis was a better ball club than what they showed tonight," the UWM coach added.

Parsley was not alone in his opinion of the UMSL performance. Carkhum stated flatly, "We just didn't play a good game. We should have beaten them by about, I'd say, at least twenty points.

"Our defense could have been better," the UMSL forward added.
But it was the UWM defense that got the most attention. Unlike UMSL's last four opponents, Milwaukee did not throw a press at all.

"We're going to have to get 70 percent or better if we're going to win these closer games," said guard Smith.

And what did Smith say after the UWM game about that winning streak he spoke of a day ago?
"We figure on three this week, at least." That's how many games the Red and Gold will have before taking to the road against Arkansas and Memphis State next week.

"Careless" JV Drops Defense And Two Games In Week

The junior Rivermen dropped an action, sustaining losses to the McKendree Jayvees and the Boys' Cardinals of William Jewell, hit 27 percent of their charity tosses.

"We're hitting well from the free throw line," said Copeland. "There's no question about that."

Copeland blamed the loss to McKendree on bad ball handling and poor defense, the two aspects of team play with which he is least pleased. Due to the poor defense, two McKendree guards combined for a walloping 47 points.

"Ball handling and defense are mental things," said Copeland. "Defense is very definitely psychological. I expect to see game-by-game improvement."

"We're good on the boards, we hit well from the field and from the free throw line, but we're careless with the ball."

Defense again let the fledgling cagers down at Boys' Club Tuesday night.

Despite fine performances on the offensive end of the court, including a 21 point contribution from Bill Harris and 17 from Jim Steitz, the Rivermen dropped a 160-94 decision.

"I don't know what's wrong," said Copeland after the game. "Maybe all the talent is offensive."

The junior varsity will have plenty of time to work on their defense. "They don't play again until they meet William Jewell in a rematch Jan. 4 at Viking Hall."

Sheddell Bell moves past Wisconsin's Mike Ewing during the second half of the UMSL victory over the Panthers. Jim Buford (51) sets a pick for Bell.

Since his brilliant performance in the season opening victory over Southern Illinois, Riverman opponents have keyed on pivot Jim Buford. Here Buford hooks in two in the loss to McKendree.
