No one can stop Davis' struggle

By RITA SIMON

The Fair Trial for Angela Davis Committee held a rally in the Physics Annex March 30. An estimated 100 students and instructors were present at the rally, which featured a film and panel discussion.

The film, Like It Is, contained an exclusive interview with Angela Davis, conducted at the New York Women's House of Detention. Cameras were barred from the jail but the entire interview was taped.

"There is nothing they can do to stop my struggling for an end to the oppression of my people," Miss Davis stated in the interview.

She asserted that a complete overthrow of the government would be necessary if there was ever to be hope for the liberation of blacks.

Miss Davis is that she is "a beautiful woman gone wrong.

She maintained that this was definitely not the case, and that the presence of surveillance existing in our society today, "The prejudice in this country was just a symptom of disease," Miss Rober said. "The disease is fear because people cannot face the world."

She added, "Prejudice is useful to those who wish to control others."

The next speaker, Waterford, stressed the importance of the ability to be able to communicate to all kinds of people. He felt it was imperative to the unification of all people.

Dubinks, the concluding speaker, cited various examples of support which Miss Davis had received, and emphasized the importance of this support to her cause.

"St. Louis is the most backward city in the United States," the former Black Panther main­tained. "You're not treated in Mississippi like you're treated in St. Louis."

After the panel discussion, an open question-and-answer session was permitted, which stirred widespread participation.

The rally, which lasted over two hours, was held in the hope that those present would sympathize with Miss Davis' ease and similar issues.

Those interested in further information were invited to address their queries to Fair Trial For Angela Davis Committee. Miss Davis is that she is "a beautiful woman gone wrong."

The real problem in the Middle East, according to Colonel Meir Pa'il, lies in the unwillingness of the Arab states to recognize the State of Israel.

"The United States is considered Israel's only real friend. Regarding the communication between the U.S. and Egypt, Pa'il remarked, "I am disappointed. We hope the U.S. will give backing to Israel."

"Now, the U.S. is showing signs of giving in without receiving the political prices Israel demands from the Arab states," he continued.

"We don't want to conquer the whole Arab nation. In the military sphere, we can't conquer the whole world and make them recognize us by military means. We want to achieve the idea of political recognition."

"Pa'il denied that war in Israel's national pastime."

"In the future," he said, "Will be able to concentrate our resources to some more important things for our society. I would like peace now, but being realistic it will take time. It must come slowly."

Can Johnnie ever come home?

Two weeks ago, Johnnie Sims, an UMSL custodian who daily cleaned the cafeteria in the basement of the Administration Building, was transferred against his wishes to the Library and Clark Hall. This action has brought complaint from students who normally use the cafeteria.

Mike Logan, heading a group of concerned students who want Sims back, presented a petition to John Perry, business manager, containing 200 signatures. The petition asks that Sims be re-transferred to the cafeteria.

Perry told the Current that Sims will not be sent back to the cafeteria.

In a telephone interview, Perry said that it is the University's prerogative to use its employees in any function that it pleases. He stated that since the cafeteria will be closed at the end of this year, and the lounges moved to the University Center to be opened, Sims will stay where he is.

In a letter that Perry sent to Logan March 23, he stated, "I have again re-checked the situation regarding Johnnie Sims and my investigation indicates that Mr. Sims asked to be transferred to the Library and Clark Hall after working there on a temporary basis. Shortly after the permanent transfer was made, Mr. Sims then indicated that he wanted to come back to the cafeteria."

Sims, upon later seeing the letter, requested that he be re-transferred to the cafeteria. Perry then was transferred to work with the custodian back to work, Sims expected to be moved back to the cafeteria. However, Don Weaver, Custodian foreman and Sims' immediate superior, said that he was to stay at Clark.

"I knew what he was trying to do," said Sims. "He was trying to get me to say that I wouldn't be transferred. Then he would tell Mr. Perry that I wasn't willing to work, and that would give Perry reason to fire me. So I told him (Weaver) that I didn't want to work over there, that I wanted to come back to the cafeteria, but that he was the boss, and if he told me to work in Clark, that's where I'd work."

"But," Sims continued, "I swear on a stack of Bibles from here to heaven that I never told him to be moved to Clark Hall."

Weaver said that there is little chance that Sims will be transferred back.

He explained, "We make a policy of moving men periodically. We have a number of reasons for doing this. One is that, in Sim's case, the cafeteria will soon be closed. Second, it's beneficial to the men. They learn more about different areas, and that's beneficial to them in terms of being promoted to head man. We have openings for one, and maybe more, head man when the University Center opens next fall."

In his letter, Perry told Logan that Sims would request the students to "Forget about their petition, if that was what he was willing to remain in Clark Hall."

"I never said that," said Sims. "I never told them I would request that the young people forget about their petition. All I told them was that I would appreciate anything they could do to get me back in the cafeteria."

Political recognition
Key to Israeli peace

Health center staffed

The Student Health Service, located in the Administration Building, has two new part-time physicians, Dr. F. J. Shahanab, M.D., a graduate of St. Louis University and Dr. Charles R. Lewis, M.D., a graduate of Washington University. Both men are engaged in private practice besides sharing duties on campus.

"I want to emphasize that we are available to any full-time student free of charge," Dr. Shahanab explained. "We are strictly an out-patient service which means that we do not keep a patient here."

Appointments are necessary. "A student is better off to make an appointment to see one of us when we have hours on campus," remarked Shahanab, "because our time is limited."

A registered nurse is available whenever either doctor is not on campus. Johnnie Sims

SLUM goes to blazes

by ERIC CLAUDIN

A five-alarm fire of mysterious origin was responsible for the destruction of the SLUM Administration Building early this morning. The unoccupied building and its contents were assessed as a total loss by security chief Jane Nelson.

The first alarm was turned in at approximately 3 a.m. by security officers Roy Hertz and Tom Fetch-it, returning to campus from the Blue Bird Tavern in Bel-Ridge. The other four alarms were turned in by arriving fire companies, including those of Bel-Nor, Bellerive, and a little old lady with a seltzer bottle.

"We noticed an unusual orange glow in the sky over the SLUM campus when we left the Blue Bird," commented officer Hertz, "but we thought the Central Council was sacrificing the.school, or something. When we arrived on campus, the whole damn thing was burning like a house aflame."

The holocaust gutted the three-story wooden structure despite the valiant efforts of local firemen.

The arson squad announced this morning that the tragic fire appears to have started in the vicinity of room 117.

Captain Barry K. Hotpantz announced in a statement that the only substantial evidence discovered was the charred remains of five cases of Ripple Wine found in the wreckage next to a steam radiator in room 117. The squad is presently investigating the possibility of criminal negligence as a contributing factor in the fire's origin.

When asked to comment on Hotpantz' statement, programming director Stephanie Crist screamed: "I didn't have a thing to do with it, and I'm simply just taken back with your thoughtless allegations."

Miss Crist had to be sedated by the SLUM physician, after he arrived the day before, when she was informed of the loss of her four-year collection of Musclerian magazine. She is now recuperating in the Bel-Nor Hospital, and requests that contributions be made in her name to the Salvation Army in lieu of flowers.

It looks like a cheeseburger, it tastes like one, but it isn't

By MARGARET JENSEN
Clearance Staff Writer

A new and baffling object has made its appearance on campus and has given SLUM national fame.

"What is it?" ask the hundreds of scientists who have examined the apparently unprecedented organic material.

"I've certainly never seen anything like it," claims Dr. Strong-Arms, head of SLUM's chemistry department.

The strange object appeared last week when sophomore Tom Tomaine put his money into the canteen in the Administration Building for what he thought was his usual dogwood sandwich. Instead of the delicacy he anticipated, when he slid back the door he found a yellow-gray blob. At first he thought it was a slightly rancid cheeseburger and angrily went to find an assistant.

"This cheeseburger was marked 'dogwood,'" he told the assistant, and demanded to have the latter. After closer inspection, however, it became apparent to both that the blob was not a cheeseburger, or even a pizzaburger.

Interested spectators began to raise the question of what the object really was.

Tomaine, and several other students, who were no curious they actually stopped playing cards, proceeded to the biology department.

The biology staff examined it intensely, but had no idea what it was. They then checked their laboratory specimens to make sure none were missing.

"Sorry we can't be of help," one biology professor apologized. "We're still trying to solve the mystery of who stole our bag of birth control devices we were displaying on the Hill." Tomaine then took the object to the chemistry department. The staff examined it carefully and attempted to analyze the material. One taster, a little of it, and found it to be very flat, with a slightly foul taste.

"Are you sure this isn't a cheeseburger?" asked the professor.

The staff finally confessed that they were at a loss to identify it.

The physics department was no help either, and Tomaine even took it to the astronomy department, thinking possibly it came from outerspace.

The students finally brought it to the Dean, who suggested that scientists around the country be invited to try to solve the mystery.

So far none of the hundreds of scientists have been able to determine the ingredients.

SLUM has received national fame, and people are coming from miles around to view the unidentified object. A special building is being erected, with completion expected in ten years, to house the sample and the tomes of research records regarding the object.

When asked to comment on his discovery, Tomaine merely complained, "Canteen still owes me a dogwood sandwich."

Student Center dedication set

The Student Center, delayed by countless construction setbacks, will finally become a reality as it opens Friday at noon with a ribbon-cutting ceremony and inaugural luncheon.

Participating in the opening ceremonies will be University dignitaries, administration officials, student leaders, and a variety of impromptu guest appearances by assorted toasters from the cafeteria and the second floor of the Thomas Jefferson Library.

As scheduled, the ribbon-cutting will be followed by a lavish buffet luncheon, catered by the Normandy Cafe and Dogey Towers.

The keynote speakers of the luncheon will be Clearance feature editor Carl Doty and business manager Jerry Vinhy discussing "The Role of Machiavellianism in Contemporary Collegiate Extra-Curricular Activities."

At 3 p.m., a tour of the new Student Center facilities will be given by Peter Von Hothouse, big-man-on-campus and heir apparent to the student presidency.

Von Hothouse will be happy to answer any questions his prospective subjects have concerning the center's two Olympic-size indoor swimming pools, 48 lanes of bowling, one half-mile motorcycle scramble track, ice rink, 400-seat convention hall, and six floors of offices for the student organizations on campus.

Smithe out for season

By Orville Fabulous

Coach Choke Smithe, also known to his friends and players as the "Grand Ranger," will be relieved of his administrative duties at SLUM to enable him to take a sabatical leave.

Smithe, the varsity basketball coach and athletic director, will make an in-depth study of the merits of "Affection-training of College athletes as Contrasted to the Traditional Practice of Payola."

For his research, Coach Smithe has been provided with a $25,000 grant from the George Wallace Center for Contemporary Studies at the University of Alabama.

In Smithe's absence, the coaching duties will be assumed by varsity star Sherdick Bell III.

CORDOBA, SPAIN (SPECIAL)

After six weeks of shooting, the long-awaited Titus and Ronicus is nearing completion. Based on a recently-discovered Shakespearean manuscript—supposedly unearthed in a pizzeria in Sobot—the film is rapidly gaining notoriety as a monument to cinematic violence and sexual perversion.

“Titus and Ronicus are really no trouble adapting a play written during the sixteenth century in England, set in ancient Rome, to an Italian western filmed in Spain and scripted by a French heroin-addict," he explained.

Presumably, much of the discrepancy in costuming will be offset by a preponderance of nude scenes.

Pierre D’Orny, author of the screenplay, is reportedly re-examining his exertions at an exclusive rest-home in Marbella, serving a ten-year sentence for drug abuse, petty larceny, and spitting on the sidewalk.

His previous credits include the screenplays for Carousing, Yellow and Horny. He also collaborated with Montanas Williams on the hit play Sex on the Sidewalk.

A Volkswagen Named Contradiction.

Retired Shakespearean actor Lance Bedford, now 45, enticed from his fifteen-year seclusion to play one of the title roles, said he enjoyed working with co-star, Luciana Lollapalooza, touted as the latest Italian sex-bomb.

“I’m just dedicated to artistic excellence,” she explained between scenes.

Bedford portrays Titus, heir to the Moroni clan, which is engaged in a blood-feud with the Imbecilli, a merciless band which turns on and massacres both clans.

Noted Spanish character actor Juan del Riancho, veteran of such masterpieces as The Virgin’s Doubt and The Nasty, is cast as the malcontent, double-dealing servant boy called Ronicus. Titus Moroni (Bedford) disguises himself as a woman, while Ve­roneson Imbecilli (Miss Lollapalooza) assumes the identity of a servant boy called Ronicus. Titus and Ronicus, each unaware of the other’s real sex, struggle against a mutual attraction complicated by the homosexual implications.

Farsi denied that the entire five-hour film will focus on the main plot.

“Like everything Shakespeare produced, Titus and Ronicus will feature numerous sub-plots—mainly orgies, seductions, rape scenes, torture scenes and other sadistic delights, numerous killings, that sort of thing,” he said.

But the real plaudits must go to make-up man Angelo Amon­tilado, who rose to prominence for his efforts in connection with the science-fiction hit, Galaxy of the Moronis.

“It was easy making the actors look like jacksasses, compared to this,” he maintained. “It is impossible to make Luciana convincing as a boy, it wasn’t too bad getting the female make-up on Signor Bedford. What was tough, was making him look like a man.”

Haywood signs letter of intent to play for SLUM

SLUM athletic director Choke Smith announced today that former Detroit University star Spencer Haywood had signed a letter of intent to take the ABA next year.

“There’s been such a hassle over my playing pro ball without finishing college that I decided to come to SLUM to play out my eligibility,” Haywood told the Clearance, and Howyoad told the Clearance, “and besides, the pay’s just as good here.”

Smithie was elated about the event, pointing out that Haywood had signed under the little used “hardship clause” of the NCAA.

“After the season we just had,” Smithie said, “nobody in his right mind could say that SLUM is not a hardship case.”

Haywood has most recently played for the Denver Rockets of the ABA and theSubmit Soni in the NBA.

“We just may be the big man we’ve been looking for,” said Smithie.

“Again, again,” pointed out information director Eddie Munster, “maybe he isn’t.”

“We’ve thought we’ve had that big man in the past,” added former information director Munster.

SLUM athletic director Choke Smith announced today that former Detroit University star Spencer Haywood had signed a letter of intent to take the ABA next year.

The River Rats will play an upgraded schedule next season, taking on such old rivals as Mississippi State, Tulane and Temple University of Misery—Bell-Knarr.

Racetack golf coach Larry M. Barest announced last week his efforts to bring the GAC Invitational golf tournament to St. Louis next year.

The GAC is the best known of all intercollegiate tournaments. It pits the forty top college teams against each other in 72-hole competition.

The tourney has always been held in Cape Coral, Florida, during the Easter break.

“‘That’s simply a bad time of the year to be away from friends and family,” Barest told the Clearance, “I’m sure the players would prefer to spend their money in St. Louis rather than Florida.”

If SLUM is invited to participate, the competition will take place on the Holiday Hills links. “I’m sure the course will be sufficient,” Barest said, “and we can always heighten interest by throwing the outsho to the fourth fairway out of whack. That will really give the tournament a little excitement.”

Unfortunately, Barest will not be around to see the fruits of his efforts.

He was found dancing from the ceiling of his office Monday morning by all nine members of the golf team at 8:30 a.m. The team members reported the incident to campus police at 10:30, Tuesday.

Teammate Ron Brewegy has been brought in to fill in the wake of the disaster. He showed great interest in following up Barest’s work concerning the GAC.

“We’re definitely going to have to do something about that,” he said.

Joe Muich, meanwhile, did the job at the plate, going two for five and driving in four runs.

At an impromptu press conference following the game, Muich held forth for the benefit of his teammates on the value of “timely hitting.” The Riverman first baseman received a warm round of applause for his remarks from members of the squad who had gathered around.

Copeland looks to this sort of spirit to carry the team throughout the year; “the players are more aware of the team, we have fewer individual players.”

Rivermen survive comedy of errors

The UMSL and Greenville College baseball teams have met twice and abolishing Rick Zweifel has been on the winning side each time. Zweifel hammered the Rivermen in the season opener two years ago in UMSL’s first game ever on the wind-blown Panther field as his Greenville teammates walked on the Red and Gold, 18-9.

This Tuesday he took a shot at his former squad, going one for three and drawing three walks. “He set a record as a freshman hitter,” said the Greenville coach, “we wanted him to come back.” Fortunately for the Rivermen he didn’t.

So, it’s now two in a row for both Zweifel and the Rivermen. The 11-5 Greenville victory marked the second consecutive season opening victory for the Red and Gold.

Rivermen third baseman Tom Fleming (10) drills a fastball down the left field line for a sixth inning RBI double. The run was UMSL’s eighth enroute to an 11-5 route of the Greenville Panthers in the season opener at Frestwood Field.

Rivermen survive comedy of errors

Surprise Greenville, 11-5

The UMSL and Greenville College baseball teams have met twice and abolishing Rick Zweifel has been on the winning side each time. Zweifel hammered the Rivermen in the season opener two years ago in UMSL’s first game ever on the wind-blown Panther field as his Greenville teammates walked on the Red and Gold, 18-9.
