New president already planning for coming year

By MARY GLYNN  Current Staff Writer

Projects for the coming school year are already underway, according to student president-elect Bob Lamberg.

He explained that measures advocated in Phase II, his campaign platform, were chosen mainly from the complaints of students.

"Through the Grievance Committee and our own contacts, we were made aware of what the students wanted," Lamberg said. "We have already started investigating possibilities for change and reform."

A large number of complaints had centered around high bookstore prices, which prompted Phase II to send representatives to Southern Illinois University to investigate the book rental program there, to determine the feasibility of instituting such a program on this campus.

Complaints over counseling and advisement have led to an effort to set up a more efficient program for undergraduates. The Senate Admissions Board is being consulted on this matter.

He listed greater student employment on campus as one of the main goals.

"Dr. Boswell of the Senate Athletic Committee and Bill Edwards, director of the Student Union, have both agreed to hire as many student employees as possible," Lamberg stated. "They will seek outside help only after students have filled as many positions as possible."

Another major objective is continuation of the course evaluation next year.

"Course evaluation went very well," he said, "although a few improvements will be needed. We can only see how good it is after it is used this fall."

"What we also plan to do," he added, in reference to his ideas to beautify the campus by decorating the interiors of buildings, "is change the look of the buildings by hanging posters and pictures in them."

"The University Program Board has been funded to do this and we hope they receive funds again next year."

"To add to present funds, the Central Council will sponsor its first fund-raiser."

Lamberg also felt the council would work with the newly-created University Senate.

"Although they are autonomous bodies," he explained, "they (the council and the senate) can work together on common programs. We need the council because the students are greatly outnumbered on the senate."

While Lamberg has given consideration to the measures advocated by his opponent, John Oleksi, he remarked, "if the students on this campus had wanted John Oleksi's platform, they would have voted for him."

He discounted the value of seeking moderation of the 13-hour foreign language requirement, because it had been pushed before without inducing the department of modern languages to alter its position to a significant degree.

The council can better serve the interests of the students by pursuing other programs, he said.

Commenting on another Oleksi plan, a deferred tuition payment program, Lamberg remarked, "The only drawback to this is that the school loses a lot of interest money if payments are spread out."

He also commented on Oleksi's idea to suspend Roberts' Rules of Order and strict parliamentary procedure.

"They (Roberts' Rules) will not be suspended, but some alterations pertaining to quorums, discussions, and motions will be made," Lamberg said.

Since implementation of programs is governed by scarcity of funds, Phase II will tend to concentrate on programs that do not require a great deal of money, but will benefit the students.

Black motivation to be assessed

An achievement motivation program for black students, sponsored by UMSL and the University Foundation, is being organized for June 6-10 at the Trout Lodge, the YMCA camp in Potosi, Missouri.

The program, open to any black students (male or female) who have had one or more years of college work, is limited, however, to fifteen students and the group will be formed on a "first-come-first-served" basis.

Research has indicated that, as a group, black persons score significantly lower on the achievement dimension of motivation than do comparable groups of the general population.

Transportation from St. Louis to Potosi and back, all room, board, materials and training will be provided. There will be no cost for the participating student.

For reservations, interested students should contact Douglas Benedict, 213 B, Administration Building, or call 453-5881, or 843-6985.

Council to meet

The newly elected Central Council will hold its first meeting on Sunday, May 23, in room 208, Administration building, at 1:30 p.m.

Committee chairmen will be elected at the meeting; treasurer and secretary will also be appointed.

Students interested in serving on the curriculum, grievances, rules, appointments and elections, or publicity committees should contact Bob Lamberg, c/o the Central Council, room 117, Administration building.

We will return next fall

Budget proposals made

An accent on "student services" was reflected in funding proposed by the Student Affairs Budgeting Committee for the coming year, in regard to student organizations.

In a departure from the practice of previous years, this year's proposal did not provide for consideration of direct funding of all campus organizations.

This switch was explained by the growing number of applications at UMSL (over 70), which made the process increasingly cumbersome and inequitable, since the available funds cannot adequately meet the needs of all organizations.

One justification which was cited asserted that a large percentage of the 1976-77 budget allocated to organizations last spring on the basis of their proposed projects is still unspent at date.

Campus organizations were encouraged to co-operate with the Office of Programming in order to insure a balanced, total program for the university program. Travel and Publication requests would not be considered.

Areas for funding based on the unique and essential nature of their contributions to the university community, and the extent to which their projects will provide visibility to the university, include the projects of the office of the Dean of Student Affairs, the Office of Programming, Forensics, Choir and Band, Drama, Central Council, and Publications.

The distribution of the $24.56 Student Activity fees earmarks $12.50 for bond retirement—$2.50 for the Multipurpose building and $10 for the Student Center—$7 for athletics and $5 for student services.

The projected revenue for student services for the 1971-72 year amounts to $91,500. The budget requests received totaled $135,028.32.

The proposed allocations for student services are still subject to review and approval by the University Student Affairs Committee, after which recommendations will be made to the Chancellor. Until then, student opinion is welcomed.

Ultimate approval rests with the Board of Curators.

An appeal for the steaming multitude

The opening of the university swimming pool has been deferred until June 19, having been informed. Nevertheless, the pool has been filled, and looks deliciously inviting, even tantalizing to students paddling warily in the heat of late spring.

This denial, with the attraction so brilliantly display, smacks to the sadistic in attitude. While conceding that there may be cause to defer admitting students until the Summer Session commences, we feel that even more compelling reasons exist for opening it.

On hot, humid day, this amounts to a matter of life and death. The presence of the pool heightens the afflication of the heat and humidity. This, to us, has the makings of an intolerable situation.

One reason put forth to justify deferring the opening asserts that there would not be enough students on campus during the interim between the end of final examinations and the beginning of the Summer Session to justify opening the pool early. Perhaps those who cite this argument would discover how many might be attracted on campus by the appeal of the pool.

But that is simply conjecture. What is obviously needed, it seems, is for the pool to open at the same time as most other swimming pools (excluding private pools)--after Memorial Day.

We see no incontrovertible reason why students should be denied the solace of a cool pool during the heat of finals. In fact, there may be more demand for the pool during finals than for the next two weeks. The suggestion that final examinations could be a motivation for some students to enter the pool without the intention of emerging again is unacceptable.

We give college students credit for more intelligence than to attempt such desperate measures--especially with the great likelihood that someone might pull them out. For the majority, however, the pool could provide a place to relax before/after examinations.

Opening the pool early would seem to be a laudatory method of displaying sympathy with students' problems.

LETTERS

Coulter's farewell

Dear Editor,

I am addressing this to the editor of the Current but I am writing to the entire student body. I am leaving UMSL in a week or so to take another college teaching job, but before I go, I wanted to share some feelings I have had with you. While, at the tender age of 25, I do not envision myself as a very sentimental individual, I do have some rather general, purely personal observations about UMSL students.

First, I am impressed by you. Now, I know UMSL is supposed to be a commuter school that high school graduates attend only when they cannot afford a private or more distant school. I have heard all about the apathy that encompasses our student body and about the problems that we have in maintaining any sort of university atmosphere. And yet, in the face of those real problems, I remain impressed by the mental acuteness of the average UMSL undergrad. I do not think I make this observation from an isolated perspective. Within the past few years as debate coach, I have travelled to schools like Harvard and the University of Chicago and have been able to interact with the students and faculty of a number of other fine schools as well. And in spite of the reputation of schools of that timbre, I find minds every bit as sharp in my UMSL classes.

I guess the reason I emphasize your aptitudes and abilities is my feeling that you do not know how much on the ball you are. If anything, I have noted again and again how short a lot of you sell yourselves. And the first thought I want to leave with you is that you should simply tilt your chin a little higher, so to speak. You are a damn fine bunch of students, and I think you should expect more of yourselves.

The second thought I leave with you is really another challenge. I feel like maybe you should help make this a stimulating university by involving yourselves more in ideas than you do. Maybe when we talk about the "high school" atmosphere that sometimes seems to grip us, we are talking about the fact that school and education still mean an 8 to 3 shift.

We are thinking of education as a series of hours and distances from a degree rather than as something exciting in its own right. Now I can imagine how much my idealistic trip turns you off, but think about it. Why do you get your degree? To find a role in society? To make money? And what do you do with the money? You probably buy what you need and spend the rest on things that make you happy. This is well and good.

But consider another fact: that involving yourselves in ideas in another form of happiness that does not preclude the material gains of education. That appreciating a fine painting, a good speech, the complexity of our environment, or the patterns of history are forms of pleasure in themselves once you get in the groove.

It is amazing to me how many wealthy people try desperately to purchase things or people or activities that will make them happy or fulfilled. Yet, many less wealthy people glean that elusive satisfaction because they can appreciate and understand their surroundings without dominating them or controlling them.

I feel like that is one of the real benefits of education--the study of ideas--it helps us gain the most, perceive the most in whatever situation we find ourselves. I hope you catch the excitement.

Well, this ranting has gone on long enough. I want you to know that in any case this has been a good two years for me. People may generalize what they will about you, but I have known you and I like you.

Sincerely,

MATT MATTLINGLY

Why strike failed

Dear Editor,

Undoubtedly, the recent campus strike failed; however, the reason the strike failed is the critical issue. It didn't fail because classes were held. The strike failed because the war, the draft, racism, repression and apathy continue to thrive.

Mastering the Draft

Copyright 1971 by John Striker and Andrew Shapiro

"You are about to be inducted into the Armed Forces of the United States. . . . You will take one step forward as your name and service are called and such step will constitute your induction into the Armed Forces indicated." With the step forward, a young man becomes a young soldier. An increasing number of men are refusing to take the symbolic step forward. Apparently they agree with the poster depicting Father Daniel Berrigan, S.J., with the words: "Don't just do something, stand there."

These men will have a chance to contest the validity of their induction orders. They will be prosecuted for refusing induction. As a defense, they can claim that their induction order was illegal. They cannot be convicted of refusing to obey an illegal order.

Aside from refusing induction, getting into court to contest the validity of a registrant's draft status has not, and still is not, easy. The courts are not immediately available to remedy any injustice. The basis for this limitation is found in the Constitution itself. Congress legislated that "no judicial review shall be made of the classification or processing of any registrant by local boards, appeal boards, or the President, except as a defense to a criminal prosecution . . . after the registrant has responded to the affirmatively or negatively to an order to report for induction." In other words, if the words of Congress are to be taken literally, the only way to contest your draft status is by refusing induction. If you are right, you will be found innocent. If you are wrong, you will be found guilty and may spend up to five years in prison. Needless to say, Congress tried to discourage use of the courts by making such use a big gamble.

The courts, however, have not read Congress' language literally. A number of years ago they decided that a young man who had been inducted into the Armed Forces could contest his induction through the use of what is called the writ of habeas corpus. Through this use of a new course of procedure, a young man in the Armed Forces can challenge his commanding officer's right to hold him in military service. If the young man's induction was illegal, his commanding officer has no right to hold him in military service.

Though the writ of habeas corpus allowed men to get into court without refusing induction, the risks were still high. Instead of putting five years in prison on the line, the young man who uses the writ runs the risk of losing his case and spending two years in the Army.

For a number of years, refusing induction and the writ of habeas corpus remained as the only two avenues for getting into court. Recently, however, a new avenue has opened. Though only available under exceptional circumstances, this new avenue allows a young man to have a court review his case even before he has received an induction order. This form of court review is called pre-induction judicial review. Its advantage is that a young man can get into court without risking five years in prison or two years in the Army.

Pre-induction judicial review is not available in every case. As a general rule, it is available only if a local or appeal board has acted in a blatantly lawless manner. The case of Oesterreich v. Selective Service System brought pre-induction judicial review to full bloom and provided either the best explanation of when it is available to a registrant.

Oesterreich returned his draft card to his local board. His IV-D ministerial student exemption was revoked. Before his induction, he sought help in the courts. The case finally reached the United States Supreme Court. The United States Attorney argued that Oesterreich must either refuse induction or seek the writ of habeas corpus in order to get into court. The Supreme Court disagreed:

"We deal here with conduct of a local Board that is basically lawless. It is no different in constitutional implications from a case where induction of an ordained minister or other clearly exempt person is ordered (a) to retaliate against the person because of his political views or (b) to bear down on him for his religious views or his racial attitudes or (c) to get him out of town so that the amorous interests of a Board member might be better served. . . . In such instances, as in the present one, there is no exercise of discretion by a Board in evaluating evidence and in determining whether a claimed exemption is deserved. The case we decide today involves a clear departure by the Board from its statutory mandate. To hold that a person deprived of his statutory exemption in such a blatantly lawless manner must either be induced and raise his protest through (a) habeas corpus (proceeding) or (b) de facto and defend his refusal in a criminal prosecution is to construe the Draft Law with unnecessary harshness."

This language is vague. What is the difference between lawless conduct and blatantly lawless conduct? The only reasonable answer can be provided by an attorney who is familiar with all the cases which have followed in the footsteps of Oesterreich. Though pre-induction judicial review is only available under exceptional circumstances, don't hesitate to seek aid if you think your case may qualify. The alternative forms of getting into court are gambles with extremely high stakes.

COMMUNITY UNIVERSITY

Classes for Community University, a "free university" at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, will begin the fourth week of June. Community University is located in the University Center at UMKC, 816/376-1429. It has been in operation for the past school year, serving students at the university and members of the community of the Kansas City metropolitan area.

A brochure outlining the course offerings will be available by the second week of June.

You've got a new car.

Our new car gasoline helps fight pollution.

This year over 75,000 college students will own a '71 car. And most of those new cars have been designed to get top power and performance from gasoline made with no lead. Most owner's manuals recommend lead-free.

So we made a lead-free gasoline: Lead-Free Amoco. It also works fine in many of the 2 million college students' older cars that don't require a premium gasoline.

Now you can use a gasoline in your car and know that you're not putting lead pollution in the air. And you'll be helping your car, too. Because there won't be lead deposits to foul your spark plugs or leak fluids to clog your exhaust system. Fuel will last at least twice as long.

Your new car... our new car gasoline. They're made for each other.

You expect more from Standard and you get it.
Golfers wait for bid

All that’s left for the Rivermen golf team to do now is to sit back and wait.

They’re waiting for a bid to the NCAA post-season tourney, a bid they’re expecting to get on the basis of a 15-2 season.

The season ended last Friday.

Netmen close best season

The Rivermen tennis team finished their 1971 season Thursday with a 2-5 loss to the Principia Indians. As usual, Tom January registered a singles victory for the Rivermen, ousting his opponent 6-1, 6-1.

The other Rivermen victory also involved January. He and doubles partner Dave Laudel took their match 7-5, 3-6, 6-3.

The netmen closed out their season with a 7-5 record, one that satisfies the goals set before the season by both coach Gene Williams and the team members. If one were to pick one player and name him Most Valuable, he would have to pick freshman January.

January posted an overall record of 15-2, with both losses coming to the Washington University Bears, a team that through the years has been tough in tennis. Right behind January is team captain Ron Williams, who posted an overall record of 11-4.

Following the pair are Ray Ruby at 8-6, Les Cornelius, 4-11, and another freshman, Dave Laudel, at 3-11.

Looking at the doubles record, we find that the winningest team was the January-Laudel combination, with a record of 8-3. Ron Williams and Ray Ruby posted a 9-6 doubles record.

To say the team is an improvement over last year’s team would be the understatement of the year. Last year’s team posted a pitiful 2-8 record, and the best previous record was 2-7.

However, the outlook is much brighter for the future. There are no seniors on the team, so everyone, barring accident, should be back. Both January and Laudel have three good years ahead of them, and, in addition, there are some players coming in next year who had to sit out a year and will give the Rivermen additional depth.

Rivermen left holding blank hand, lose two

By DARRELL SHOULTS

In poker, a pair of eights won't beat much, but it was good enough to beat the Rivermen baseball team last Thursday.

UMLS's crosstown rival, St. Louis University, scored eight runs in the eighth inning to trump the Rivermen, 10-4.

The day before, Concordia Seminary left the Rivermen holding a losing hand, as the Preachers edged the Red and Gold, 4-3.

Against St. Louis, Rivermen hurler Dennis Spitzer seemed to be holding all the aces until the eighth. Spitz was breezing with a 4-2 lead until someone dealt the Billiken's a full house.

The eighth saw 12 Bills parade to the plate, and most of them paraded on around the bases as well.

Here's how it happened:

Lead-off man John McDermott singled, and took a second when Frank Mana followed suit. Both advanced on a passed ball, and McDermott scored when Rivermen first baseman Ray Finke, booted Steve Dux's ground ball. Catcher Charlie Frank then singled, chasing home Mana.

But all of that was accounted for only two runs. Spitzer hit the next batter, Marv Schweizer, loading the bases. Mark Steiner, the Billiken's third baseman, then delivered the crucial blow, a single that emptied the bases.

So, with the score 7-4, Spitzer was replaced by hot-dog eating Dale Westerholt. West was wild at first, allowing a wild pitch that moved Steiner to third, and a passed ball, on which Steiner scored.

By now, it's 8 to 4, and everyone is wondering if maybe the Bills aren't playing with a stacked deck. Ed Degrohoney singled before Westerholt got the first two outs of the inning.

The top of the order was up again, and McDermott reached base on a second time, on a walk. Mana then reached on one of Tom Fleming's three errors of the afternoon, and Degrohoney scored. Dick Kinealy then relived Westerholt and promptly gave up a single to Duz that scored McDermott. Kinealy then got the next batter on a pop-up to short for the third (out) at last.

No one could believe it, but after going into the inning leading by two, the Rivermen came out losing by six.

The loss to Concordia the day before was even more of a heartbreaker. The Preachers handed Bill Binsbacher his second loss of the year, scoring four unearned runs in the first. Binsbacher walked two and committed an error to hurt his own cause.

After the first, the Rivermen ace was down only one run, being taken out for a pinch-hitter (Joe Muth) in the fourth. Mike Usser relieved and got the next, a single in the seventh, over four innings. Hubert pitched one-two-three ninth, but all the pitching was wasted as the Rivermen came up empty three runs.

It was that lack of timely hitting that coach Arnold Copeland feels was the low spot of the season.

"My reaction about this season is one of utter disbelief," said Copeland. "Last year we had a 17-9 record. We have the same team this year, and even had some additional help. But we could only get a 14-16 record."

Copeland blamed a lack of enthusiasm and desire for the subpar season. He cited as evidence the two losses to Concordia, one of the poorest teams the Rivermen played this year.

"If you're a real competitor, you don't lose the easy ones," That's what we did," said Copeland unhappily.

"I'd have to say that our pitching was on the bright side of the picture," Copeland said. "A 3-65 ERA is very good." Bill Binsbacher topped all pitchers with an impressive 1.38 ERA, setting a new school record.

As for individual highlights, Copeland spoke of Binsbacher's no-hitter against MacMurray and a sweep of a double-header from Arkansas.

But they accounted for only three runs.

Maybe it just wasn't in the cards this season for the Rivermen.

Athletes honored tomorrow

Athletes from six intercollegiate and a dozen intramural teams will be honored at the fourth annual all-sports banquet to be held at 6:30 p.m., Friday, May 21 at the Ben Franklin Motel, 4635 North Lindbergh. A special film production of Rivermen teams in action throughout the 1976-71 season will highlight this year's banquet.

Three prep Cagers sign

Head basketball coach Chuck Smith announced last week that three high school players have signed letters of intent to enroll here next fall. The prep cagers are James Peleckch, Mark Springhorn and Dave Bazelli.

An all-conference center, the 6'7" Peleckch is a two-year letterman from Regina High School in Iowa City, la. He averaged 21 points and 14 rebounds per game this past season, shooting 65 per cent from the field and 80 per cent from the free-throw line.
