Guard policy defended

London deputy commissioner says police are "taken for granted"

By RON THENHAUS
Current Staff Writer

Great Britain's "superb" system of criminal justice was exalted Monday by Robert Mark, Deputy Commissioner of the London Metropolitan Police.

Mark, who has spent the last 20 years working with the British police, commented, "Police are the most taken for granted and least understood of all the social professions."

"Police everywhere are being looked at more critically as their role becomes more difficult."

"There seems to be a 'no-asumption' of the police by the people in other professions as journalism, law and politics, according to Mark."

"In reality, the police are wonderful," he maintained.

The effectiveness of the British law enforcement personnel was noted in the skilled maintenance of order at political demonstrations. These and other demonstrations are handled without firearms or special clothing, unlike the handling of similar events in the U.S.

"Firearms and protective equipment are available to specially trained men in extraordinary circumstances," he said.

Primary duties of British police were cited as, "the detection and prosecution of criminals, the maintenance of public order and the control of traffic."

"Subordinate to very important duties under the primary ones were, "the assistance offered to people in distress and acting quickly and effectively in any emergency affecting the community."

"The term police force," he maintained, "as applying to a group of law enforcement personnel is misleading.

Since "forces" by the police needs the approval of courts and the community to determine its rightful direction, and the community's "community force" devoted to the maintenance of order, rather than just a "police force."

The accountability of police for their own deeds under the law was one of the primary issues stressed by Mark, who contended that this contributed to the effectiveness of the entire British system of justice.

"British police are as readily prosecuted and sentenced as anyone under British law," he said.

If the identification of a policeman who is a law violator cannot be established, the unit's Chief Officer is held liable.

Mark declared, "British Police are generally free of political influence which helps secure the public confidence."

"Being accountable only to their own police authorities and to the central government, the individual police unit is responsible to the community as a whole for what it does and does not do.

"The police units are maintained by their Chief Officers, "by elected administrators of the local community and by the Home Secretary."

"The local communities pay one-half of the price of the provincial forces while the remaining one-half is paid by the central government who sets up procedural standards but doesn't interfere in operational matters. If the central government decides that a unit is not promoting the preservation of freedom, including liberties of minorities, it will withhold its share of money assessed to the unit until the unit makes the needed adjustments."

"The central government," he added, "is thus a check on the police rather than a rigid controlling force."

"The operation of the 47 police units throughout Great Britain is so coordinated, that they take on the appearance of a national police service," he said.

Mark noted that the four factors which create the "collectiveness" of the British police forces are (1) a well distributed manpower force; (2) a well developed communications network; (3) the quick mobility of the police units; and (4) the law itself.

"The law being the most powerful unifying factors of the units, seeks to punish adverse conduct in society, prescribe rules for the defense of the accused, describe procedures for conviction and finally to define the punishment "which affects the willingness of juries to convict or acquit."

Referring to the judicial branch of British law enforcement, Mark commented, "The administration of justice in England are quick to condemn injustice."

He went on to explain that "one point in default" in a criminal trial is sufficient cause for a retrial.

Acknowledging that British police units contain only a very small fraction of non-white members he added, "The administration of justice is often an unpopular function of society. If such a task was difficult for the majority it would be much more difficult for the minority who have to face additional pressures from society that are unknown to the majority."

In praise of the British system of justice, Mark maintained, "The long experience in Great Britain shows that the maintenance of an able police force is the real hope for the future."

Dickerson: bookstore guards are necessary

By CARL HESS
Current Staff Writer

Guards are stationed in the Bookstore to prevent robbery and shoplifting, and to preserve order, according to George M. Dickerson, Bookstore manager.

Robbery, he maintained, is a very real threat. All areas of the University which make transactions in cash (Bookstore, cafeteria, guards for their protection.

"There have been robberies at other universities—for instance, at Washington U., and we don't want it to happen here," Dickerson explained.

He also estimated that the Bookstore loses about $12,000 every year through shoplifting.

"We lose from two to three thousand dollars worth of pens alone in a year," Dickerson said.

There have been 25 reports of persons being caught in the act of shoplifting in the Bookstore this semester.

"Besides," he added, "Famous Hall and all the other bookstores have security staff circulating."

Dickerson contended that the requirement that all personal books and packages must be left in the aisles before the person can enter, is a necessity.

There are two main reasons for this:

People could hide stolen material between their books and walk off with it.

Cashiers can discern which items are being purchased and which are not.

"As far as I know," Dickerson explained, "almost all university bookstores have check procedures of one sort or another for students' accounts."

He admitted that there are basic inadequacies in the present system of storing books in open stalls.

"Book thefts from the Bookstore are nominal when compared to the losses to students all over the campus," he said, "wherever a student must leave his books—in here, in the cafeteria, in classrooms, anywhere."

"We are now in the process of ordering at least 100 of the coin-operated stalls of the type that were outside the old Bookstore."

However, there were abuses of that precaution as well.

"Some students would use them to deposit excess books or ones they didn't need that day, and then go around campus," Dickerson maintained.

He emphasized that it is a general policy, wherever a sizable amount of money is involved, for the guards to carry firearms to protect the cash and people involved against robbers.

Weapons would be used only in case of danger to the guard or to one of the staff.

However, guns are carried only in the first few weeks of each semester, when the Bookstore handles large sums of money.

"After this week," Dickerson added, "no arms will be carried in the Bookstore during the winter semester, and only for the first four or five weeks of any semester."

The guard is not intended to hamper anyone's freedom of movement.

"I'm only here to keep order in the Bookstore," guard Calvin Jackson contended.

The presence of a guard does not discourage many students from browsing every day.

The Bookstore staff feels that the guard system is not an attempt at restraint, but a practical means of insuring the safety and security of all concerned.

It's about time to give credit where credit is due

We think the student-teachers’ grievances appear on page six have a valid claim to increased credit hours for the work they do. Student teaching has traditionally been a decried endurance test representing a major hurdle in the senior year of prospective teachers, holding no promise of future success, particularly for those in, say, history or English – those areas being notorious for their surplus of teaching hopefuls.

Nevertheless, they must undertake the Herculean task required of them; not only that, but other courses as well. We are not denying the necessity for diligence in acquiring the teaching arts, but let us be justified in thinking that his work should merit compensation (rewards?) commensurate with their efforts.

Therefore, it seems reasonable that sufficient hours should be granted for student teaching so as to allow a lightening of the burden this group is doomed to bear.

Why not give credit where credit is due?

Letters: Facing the music

Dear Editor,
I, as one female, am addressing myself to the two or more females on the UMSL campus who are, (guarding the sexual association), “turning on” to Women’s Lib. My gripe is that the film on Women’s Liberation Thursday night in the J.C. Penney Building was one of the last of its kind of propaganda I have seen. My major dislikes were: (1) the on-the-spot interviews with “real”, live oppressed women, (2) the “we’re all (i.e., ancient and gentle, well-off and welfare, skinny and stout, educated and uneducated) sisters talk,” and (3) the Joni Mitchell voice imitator who sang, “Now we know who we hate. Now we know who to fight.” These elements piled on top of another, form a dunghill of hate propaganda. If this is what UMSL Women’s Lib is proposing—-that is, a unanimous hatred against the American male—-I advise them to listen once more to the opening song in the movie. In case they’ve forgotten, the song was Andrea Franklin’s “I Can’t Get No Satisfaction” and what she’s saying about not only male hatred but sexual love. That song’s theme, (the inability to reach the saturation point of multiple orgasms—-in other words, hardcore sex), women’s lib, hardly coincided with the film’s message.
Hatred is a dangerous emotion to arouse in any person. As women, we have legitimate grumbles; however, it is a person’s reason that should be appealed to and not restrained hatred.

Dear Editor,

As a student of this university and a member of the human race— I come around and how and why the issues this paper deals with are for the most part, relatively insignificant to the problems of this world as well as the creativities of individuals.

How can you expect a paper to become good if most of what it deals with are confined to the university? Problems and events of the university become boring after awhile and if you ever had an empathy with the students you certainly have lost it.

For this reason I am submitting a thought for the week in hope that you will make room for it in your paper and consider as important as the sports page. I would like to convey these thoughts temporarily to man, society and the relationship of the two.

I therefore submit the following thoughts for the forthcoming issue.

When man learns to understand and control his own behavior of crop plants and domestic animals he may be justified in believing that he has become civilized.

Elvis C. Stukman

Dear Editor,

In today’s changing, uncertain and turbulent times, what is so horrible about an armed guard in the bookstore? Shoplifting and robbery are common crimes that are being dealt with and hopefully prevented in our bookstore. What paranoid is so insecure and afraid of a man who offers a service to the students and the university? Why would anyone be afraid or angry at an open authority figure who represents service and protection to most and represents a threat to would-be thieves? Would you rather have armed plain-clothed agents walking around fulfilling the same function as Famous-Barr and others do? We also contend that anyone who is a browser is not a captive audience. Most people who browse would prefer to have free hands “to browse,” and not an armload of books. As frequent customers of the bookstore, we have found the guard to be courteous and friendly—grow up! Rules serve many, without them all of us as individuals would suffer.

A retraction

Perhaps I made a mistake. Earlier this semester I publicly predicted a new and (yes, I can’t deny it) dramatic epoch which would be led by black students and which would make great demands upon the university administration. Now, however, as the semester creeps towards midterm, I think (and I was a little too hasty; for the atmosphere continues unchallenged in its antiseptic sameness and it continues to practice blazely its policies of institutionalized racism and non-involvement with the social issues currently shaking the “American way of life.”

It is with no little embarrassment that I take this opportunity to explain the forces which drove me to make such a bold and favorable, but so far insane, prediction. First of all, I took into consideration the escalation in the atrocities which the government is committing against the American people and the people of the world. This generalization I then broke into parts and considered (1) the decline of civil rights in the U.S., (2) the exposure of a plot to silence freedom-fighter Angela Davis, (3) the exposure by the Pentagon Papers of a racist, barbarous, imperialist war of aggression. I considered many other things too numerous to be mentioned here.

I finally concluded that these things were just disgusting enough to cause people--especially black people--to move in a positive way. Though this has happened in some sections of society, it does not seem to apply to UMSL. It seems, in fact, that the people of UMSL are not at all affected by the decaying of this society. Either they don’t care or they just don’t understand what’s going on. And, unfortunately, a community of ignorant and apathetic people can never hope to challenge an administration (even UMSL’s administration) in a way that will insinuate true change. This was the one factor which I failed to consider when I made that prediction.

I admit to having made a serious error, humbly withdraw my prediction, and leave the UMSL family to its daily routine which must undoubtedly produce a calibre of scholar exactly suited to the calibre of this society in which we live.
Radical films for rent

Films for Social Change, a non-profit organization concerned with distributing "controversial materials", has films to rent to any interested group or person.

The films are being distributed in the St. Louis area by Jay Brandt. In his words, "Film is an educational tool and a weapon in the struggle for a better world." He also states, "Many filmmakers with social concerns have made award-winning films, but found no one to distribute them, because commercial distributors are often reluctant to handle controversial materials.

"They tell us that the market cannot sustain these films", because teachers, librarians, and media specialists (who are the ones who buy films) are in general afraid to present films with a revolutionary point of view.

"At the same time, we filmmakers are human beings too. We need money to survive and to make new films. Consequently, we do charge a rental fee for our films and we sell prints. Proceeds from our films go back to our member filmmakers and are shared with those who help us in distributing our films."

In St. Louis the films should be ordered from Films for Social Change, 1122 Waterman St., St. Louis, Mo., 63108. For a catalogue write the above address or call Jay Brandt at 862-5044.

Brandt hopes that Films for Social Change will alleviate some of the difficulties that the little guy has in getting films like these. "When you order from a commercial company, he said, "you have trouble with postage and handling, and it takes a while to get the films. We're local, so we don't have that trouble."

Brandt will be showing one of the films at the People's School Work- shop on October 12 at 7:30 p.m. The workshop will be held at 6189 Westminster (corner of Westminster and Skinner).
GREEKS MIX IT UP SUNDAY

By MARGARET NOTORANGELO
Bathing Greek Reporter

On Sunday, October 10, the Delta Zeta "Demons" meet the Sigma Tau Gamma "Tritons" in an unmatched football game of wit and spirit.

The "Demons" would not release the press any information on new football players, although the coach, Barbara M. Pumpkin, did say, "This undefeated team has an unprecedented practice season and they will not gracefully give up their title."

Coach Pumpkin also speculated on the spirit of the team which she feels will be high not only because of their record but also due to the new uniforms which will give the team a unifying element. It is supposedly reported that the new "Demons" uniform consists of auburn and white jerseys, faded blue cutoffs, and striking red and white striped knee socks with blue trim and white stars.

Student teachers seek more credit

A group of student-teachers will meet at 2 p.m., October 11, Room 118, Business and Education building, to organize a committee aimed at securing more credit hours for student-teachers.

Due to the number of hours spent in teaching, actual teaching, and activities related to teaching, student-teachers enrolled in Education 271 find it extremely difficult to keep up with student teaching and their other courses.

A sampling of student-teachers showed they were spending 15 to 21 hours per week on Education 271. Their department recommends that students enrolled in 271, the methods course and one other course, total 12 hours, the minimum for classification as a full-time student.

Michael Long, spokesman for the group, told the Current, "We will try to show the Education Department that many considerations are involved in order to determine a just number of hours for the Education 271 students."

"There is a difference in both course hours and the course organization between the Columbia Campus and ours."

"Columbia offers student-teaching for only 8 hours and it's worth 8 hours. Universities across the nation do not agree on the number of hours given for student-teaching, but many allow as much as 12 hours. S.U.I., for example, gives 12 hours for their course in student-teaching."

Mostaccioli dinner Oct. 13
Sigma Tau Gamma will hold a mostaccioli dinner from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. at their fraternity house, October 13.

There will be a free shuttle service from school, 11 to 2.

Prices for "all you can eat" are $1.50 men, $1.25 women.

G.reds, mix it up Sunday

With all these good points going for them, the "Demons" feel confident.

The Tau's allegedly repudiated this boasting because they feel even though they have had an unfortunate beginning this year, their experience and brains will power will crush the "Demons'" confidence.

The Tau's coach, D. Wall Worm, feels that "This competition against smarter and quicker teams is a challenge our team needs to pull us together. The Tau's team will stand together and make everyone realize our power."

This is in game the sports fans will not want to miss. Remember October 10 at 1:30 in the UMSL football arena right behind the Multi-Purpose Building.

Dodsen leads Rivermen golfers in Central tourney

The Rivermen golf team entered the Central Missouri State Invitational Tournament knowing well that, having beaten each of the participants at least once this Fall, the three other entrants would be vying for the Red and Gold.

Fortunately, the Rivermen did have any reason, in spite of the Fall record, to take the competition lightly.

"We've played Central Missouri for example four times the last three years," coach Larry Berres said, "and after all those meets, there is only a six stroke difference."

Gene Dodsen led the Rivermen in their multi-team Fall firstplace, carding a 69 for medalist honors. "This just has to be one of the best efforts we've ever put together," commented Berres.

A look at the scores confirms Berres' comments. Mike Prendergast finished with 72, Ron Brewer shot 76, Gary Walshmauser and Randy Gray, 79 each.

UMSL finished with an overall 296. Missouri Southern was next with 297, while Southwest Missouri and Central each shot 298.

The Rivermen walked off without half honors, as well, chalk ing up a 133 to Central's 137. Missouri Southern had a 138 and Southwest finished with 148.

Dodsen's medalist 69 was the under par for the Central home course. The Invitational was the last scheduled Fall golf tournament.

3rd UMSL Open

The third annual UMSL Open will take place Oct. 15, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

All members of the student body, faculty and staff are eligible to compete.

For further information, contact Larry Berres, 455-3641.

IM bowling

An Intramural bowling league, the first in UMSL history, will begin play Oct. 26, 4 p.m. at Bowl-A-Rama Lanes, 1573 Woodson Road.

Matches will take place each subsequent Thursday throughout the season.

The league will be open to men and women students, faculty and staff. There will be a $1.50 charge per night, which will cover the costs of bowling and shoes.

Those interested may sign up in the athletic office, multi-purpose building, through Oct. 29.

For further information, call 455-3641.

Locker leases announced

Students will have an opportunity to rent locker space in the multi purpose building, it was announced this week.

The lockers will be rented on a first come first served basis, beginning Oct. 15, 9-10 a.m.

Those interested must sign up at the athletic equipment windows in the locker rooms.

You've probably heard it before. "Get your feet wet and then we'll talk about responsibility." Or... "there's a big desk and lots of filing space. And don't worry—this large of a company won't hinder your opportunity for advancement."

And then you wait — and wait — and wait.

But there is a company that starts college graduates in decision-making jobs with responsibility. You don't waste half your working life with company introductions. You have the opportunity to supervise and motivate people as well as make decisions.

The program is tough to get into and even tougher once you're in.

We call it the "Initial Management Development Program."

The company is Southwestern Bell — and we'll be on campus October 18.

It's high risk with high reward. Look into it.
Harriers run against weather

By ANN TELTHORST Current Staff Writer

UMSL’s harriers don’t compete against tough teams, they compete against tough weather. The worse the weather conditions the better they like it.

Thus far the harriers have won two meets in miserable conditions and dropped two when the sky was blue and the days were pleasant—or almost pleasant.

Last Wednesday the Rivermen ran against a tough Washington University team in 91 degree heat. Last Wednesday, the Rivermen last as Marty Rudder led the Bears past their visitors on their five mile home course at Forest Park.

“They jumped out on us, and forced us to run their race,” said UMSL’s Ted McQuary. But UMSL put up a good fight. Ed Heidbreder trotted home third and Frank Neal surged from seventh to fourth in the final stages of the meet, but the Bear depth overwhelmed the Red and Gold.

“I’d like to run against Washington on our course,” said coach Dan Wall. “I know we could beat them.” The Rivermen lost, but at least the crowd improved.

Pike powers to twin wins

Pi Kappa Alpha powered its way to two intramural football victories last week, scoring 48 points in the process.

The Pipers over the Orange-gutangs last Tuesday, 21-0 and then shut out the Ramchargers on Thursday, 24-0.

The two wins earned Pike second spot in the Gold League behind the Wild Bunch, which kept its perfect record intact with a 12-0 thumping of Sigma Tau Gamma.

The Black Raiders exploded for 30 points in their Tuesday game with Newman, the highest intramural score of the week, in jumping their record to 2-0-1. However, the Raiders’ loss on Thursday to league leading Sigma Pi dropped them to second spot on the Red hill.

Sig Pi won twice last week, slipping past the Newman Gods, 14-12 in their other game.

Pike Wall, "I know we could beat them.

The cheerleaders showed up. "We really appreciate the support of the cheerleaders," said coach Wall.

THE CHALLENGE.

In brewing Bud®, our choice is to go all the way. We hope beer matters enough to you that you too will go all the way... with Budweiser.

WHEN YOU SAY BUDWEISER YOU’VE SAID IT ALL!

Pike powers to twin wins

Pi Kappa Alpha powered its way to two intramural football victories last week, scoring 48 points in the process.

The Pipers over the Orange-gutangs last Tuesday, 21-0 and then shut out the Ramchargers on Thursday, 24-0.

The two wins earned Pike second spot in the Gold League behind the Wild Bunch, which kept its perfect record intact with a 12-0 thumping of Sigma Tau Gamma.
