China expert discusses president's trip, “two-Chinas” dilemma, Chiang and Mao

By ANN TELTHORST
Current Staff Writer

President Richard M. Nixon’s much-heralded trip to China is “more of an advance political gesture than anything else,” according to China scholar Dr. William Wycoff, who teaches the Modern China course here.

“He (Nixon) timed the announcement hopefully with the ‘Postagon Papers’—to take the steam out of that,” Wycoff told an observer. “But Nixon isn’t really that eager to go—remember he was a strong anti-Communist earlier in his career.

“The trip commits him to nothing and he doesn’t even seem to have to go. He realizes that more and more Americans are for the recognition of mainland China.

“Most people recognize that the Communist Chinese have fought normal relations with the U.S. since 1949, but the Joe McCarthy era and fear of communism in the 1950’s ruined chances then.

“T say John Kennedy would have moved quickly in this direction if he had been elected in 1964,” Wycoff continued. “J.F.K., a knowledgeable student of Asia, was moving towards China.

“Lyndon Johnson, though, had less knowledge of Asia, especially in foreign affairs. He relied on Dean Rusk as his advisor, whereas J.F.K. used a former State Department official for a research assistant. So once President, Rusk is an advisor, and for the next president, he’s jumped to advisor.

“That’s how we got entangled in Vietnam,” he contended. “J.F.K. will get the blame for sending advisors, but at the time of his death he was at the point of pulling the troops out.

“One of the first items of official Red Chinese admission to the United Nations, he maintained “there’s no point in expanding,”” and proceeded to discuss the “two-Chinas” dilemma.

“I agree with Professor Fairbank at Harvard that it is essentially a question between Taiwan and the mainland... and an internal conflict and the U.S. should stay out completely,” Wycoll said.

He remarked that Chiang Ching-kuo, son of Chiang Kai-shek, is the probable successor in the event of his father’s death.

“Chao has offered Chiang (senior) a nominal position in the Communist government, but Chiang stubbornly wouldn’t accept because he was, and feels that he still is, the ruler of all China,” Wycoll commented.

“Chiang has lived for twenty years on Taiwan but still plans on coming back to the mainland. Chi- ang Ching-kuo on the other hand doesn’t feel this way towards mainland China.

“His emotional ties are not that strong and, if Mao offered him a position in his government, Chiang Ching-kuo could conceivably give up Taiwan and go over to mainland China or anywhere else he wants to go in the world,” Wycoll suggested.

“I don’t see the possibility that can’t come about for the belief in his father’s that he might rejoin on the Taiwan issue.

“China is emotionally attached to Taiwan,” he said. “It was their colony until the Japanese took it in the 1890’s. Hou Ki-Lai is inflexible on this matter but he is willing to settle for Taiwan being a part of mainland China in principle.

“There are many autonomous provinces in China, and it is likely that Taiwan would be an autonomous province. It is imperitive not to let the United States be seen as a part of a China, not as a separate entity, in this case,” Wycoll added.

Wycoll continued, “Chiang’s only real support is on the island of Taiwan, three years ago, twenty per cent or so of the people there. This consists of the usually wealthy Chi- ao, who left China when Chiang did.

“The people of Taiwan could really care less about Chiang’s. That’s why Mao beat Chiang on the mainland. Chiang only cares about himself and never really had the support of the people, whereas Mao has. He’s made changes. The Chinese Communist form of government is based on ideas and a system and it will continue after Mao dies.”

Wycoll scoffed at the once-pervasive image of China as a belligerent aggressor in quest of world domination.

“The Chinese are reserved and not very talkative on current political issues,” Wycoll said.

“Theyir primary problems right now are internal. They know they have a responsibility to respect without being solidified.

“As for taking over land and peoples, they know that is impossible. The Chinese have been around for centuries and there is no record of them accomplishing vast empires such as the English, Spanish and Dutch have done.”

They’ve traded with many nations, but as far as actual acquisition of land is concerned—that is completely a Western notion.

“Look how futile our involve- ment in the Vietnam War has been. The most technologically advanced nation can’t wipe out a small, ‘primitive’ nation unless we resort to nuclear weapons. The Chinese realize this. Look at ourselves and the American Revolution.

“The Chinese know you can’t control another people completely,” he concluded, “and they have no intention of taking over the world.”

Wycoll formerly taught at Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, New York.

While on the Sarah Lawrence faculty, he served as a guest lecturer for the United Nations Program, teaching such subjects as the policy formation of American diplomacy in East Asia.

He has also lectured on United States involvement in Vietnam.

Three special programs offered by accounting faculty

The accounting faculty of the School of Business Administration is sponsoring special programs for junior and senior accounting students this semester.

The first program is designed to provide data about accounting students to the business community. The second program is designed to provide data about accounting students who have shown a prof- ficiency and interest in accounting.

The first program, Accounting Careers Day, will be held October 19.

In the first program, data from questionnaires completed by students in the accounting sequence at the university’s 360/50 computer, resulting in three IBM print-outs ranked by graders by grade point average.

The first print-out ranks students in descending order by grade point average. The second print-out provides a ranking by business grade point average. The third print-out provides a ranking by business grade point average.

The four program participants are: students in the accounting sequence at the university’s 360/50 computer, resulting in three IBM print-outs ranked by graders by grade point average.

Kunstler addresses SLU crowd despite alumni protest; raps “conspiracy cases”

By CHARLES BALDWIN
Current Staff Writer

Despite strong protests from a St. Louis University alumni group, controversial speaker and attorney William Kunstler has been allowed to address an overflowing crowd at the university’s Busch Memorial Center on August 31.

Meeting the evening before the proposed speaking time, a group of trustees decided to proceed, in pressure brought by an alumni group led by John O. Shields.

In a statement issued by the board of trustees, the Rev. Jerome J. Marchetti, S.J., executive vice president, said, “I personally do not agree with Mr. Kunstler’s views nor do I endorse the disrupted courtroom tactics in which he is reported to have engaged.”

I also have confidence that the student at St. Louis University has a level of intelligence and good judgment such that he is able to evaluate at their proper worth the words and actions of the speakers whom he hears.

First remarking that he was glad the right of free speech had not been usurped and that he was pleased to be able to speak, Kunstler then began a light-hearted discussion about the adverse publicity created by Shields.

While Kunstler was speculating, almost in amazement, on the cost of the full-page ad that ran in both the Post and Globe, Shields suddenly rose from the audience and shouted, “It was $4,000! Bill!”

In reply Kunstler said, “My God! My federal bond wasn’t that high!”

Delving into the main subject of his talk, he decided that rather than speaking on “Chicago—1970, The Great Conspiracy” he would speak on “Great Conspiracies After Chi-

COMMENTARY: Editorials and Opinions

Indictment

After you've been around this place for a few years—maybe it doesn't even take that long—you come to take for granted the general spirit of screw-the-students that seems to characterize the actions of some segments of what may loosely be referred to as "the administration," for want of a better term.

One symptom of this general attitude was disregarded by all of us until one concerned student brought it to our attention. It reminds you of Edgar Allan Poe's "The Purloined Letter," in a very distressing sense. However, photographs taken Tuesday and displayed on the front page reveal that the ladies and gentlemen who work behind the counter in the snacketeria wear no caps or hairnets. We were under the impression that a Missouri health ordinance requires such precautions, but what do more students know?

We don't intend this as a slap to the employees themselves, rather we would place the responsibility with those who are paid to shoulder such responsibilities. Certainly, compliance with such a basic health regulation is not too much to ask from a multi-million dollar concern.

Despite this obvious source of irritation, we in our cynical apathy would be inclined to merely shrug it off were this an isolated occurrence. It isn't. In that same snacketeria, students swarm during the noon hour in what is appropriately termed a "scramble area." This mad rush, in lieu of an orderly procedure for quickly obtaining a meal without behaving like dogs struggling for some bones, might be said to be—despite the triteness which has come to afflict the expression—a dehumanizing experience.

This atmosphere in which students enjoy about the same esteem as the "poor white trash" of an earlier century is also manifested on the parking lots, where students arriving after early-comers have swelled the parking-garages may cruise for several minutes along the university drives in search of a resting place and view row upon row of faculty-only spaces, comprising all of the nearest parking areas.

So we decided that maybe the time had come for the peasants to let their betters know—albeit with great trepidation—that they are not altogether content with the present scheme of things.

Those who ask why the editorial comment rather than a discreet word to the powers-that-be should be reminded of the story of the man who bought a supposedly "trained" jackass, but the animal consistently refused to perform.

Frustrated and angry, the man took his animal back to the previous owner and demanded why, if the jackass was really trained, he refused to perform.

Whereupon the previous owner housed the jackass between the eyes with a two-by-four, remarking, "See, you just have to get his attention."

We just wanted to get their attention.

Many urban specialists among new faculty

Among the many newly-appointed specialists in a wide range of physical, social, and related fields are:

Dr. Frank E. Moss, a new assistant professor of physics, comes to UMSL from the University of Virginia. His research interest there has been in the superconducting transmission line, an electrical power system that would enable electric power to be transmitted at a greater distance than from urban areas. Dr. Moss has a background in electrical and nuclear engineering and holds a Ph.D. degree in physics from the University of Virginia.

Dr. Mark S. Foster, visiting assistant professor of history, is studying the reasons why potential urban areas in the United States, ardenty promoted as possible "world cities," fail to achieve the degree of development predicted by its proponents. He is also interested in what impact the failure has had on the daily lives of these cities.

A contributor to the New Jersey Citizen. Dr. Foster comes to UMSL from the University of Nebraska, where he recently completed requirements for his Ph.D. Dr. Foster and Dr. Harrel Rodgers, an expert on political behavior and survey methodology in American cities, have been appointed to the political science faculty as associate professors.

The author of Cities and Suburbs: Selected Readings in Local Politics and Public Policy, Dr. Downes comes to UMSL, from "Michigan State of defining delinquent behavior and numerous articles on urban racial violence, minority group behavior, and other related topics, as well as researching the use of science advice made by local government, a study funded by the National Science Foundation. Dr. Downes holds a Ph.D., from Washington University.

Dr. Rodgers, who comes to UMSL from the University of Georgia, is the author of Community Conflict, Political Opinion and the Law, a study of New Political Politics: Polarization or Unification, and co-author of Law and Social Change: Civil Rights Laws and Their Consequences, to be published next year.

His current work, financed by the National Science Foundation, is an analysis of censorship movements in 18 American cities. In addition, Dr. Rodgers has authored several articles in legal and social sciences, including the Midwest Journal of Political Science and the Harvard Law Review. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Iowa.

Appointees in the department of history are Dr. Howard S. Miller, associate professor; James Rourk and Ann S. Lever, both assistant professors who have completed their Ph.D. requirements this summer; and Dr. Jerry Cooper, visiting assistant professor.

Dr. Downes, who holds a Ph.D. in law, whose research interests are social and cultural history, and the history of American science, is currently working at the University of Southern California, where he received the Associates award for Excellence in Teaching.

The author of Legal Foundations of American Philanthropy and Duties for Research: Science and Its Patrons in Nineteenth Century America, Dr. Miller has also contributed several articles to other science history texts.

Among his academic honors, he lists the University of Wisconsin's Distinguished Teaching Fellowship, a Richard D. Irwin doctoral fellowship and two awards from the U.S.C. This past year, a Graven Award in the humanities funded his research on educational innovation in the teaching of history. Dr. Miller holds M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from the University of Wisconsin.

Dr. Cooper is a military historian, who comes from the University of Wisconsin, where he earned his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees. He is particularly interested in the social and institutional aspects of the U.S. Army and federal military intervention in American labor disputes.

Judy Whitney embarks on bold co-ed intramural program

The appointment of Miss Judy Whitney to head UMSL's new department of intramural education has filled an important void which has existed since the inception of the athletic department.

Miss Whitney has embarked on a bold program designed to bring to campus co-eds the full value of athletics. Available, for the first time, will be such sports as field hockey, soccer and tennis.

The new women's PE coordinator comes to Missouri from seven years at Arlington High School in Arlington Heights, Illinois, where she earned her Bachelor's Degree from Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville and her Masters from Missouri-Columbia.

Miss Whitney has announced that the full sports schedule will continue through October, at which time the intramural program will switch indoors, offering volleyball, gymnastics and swimming. These activities will continue through the end of the semester.

"I will try to break down the program into beginner, intermediate and advanced levels," said Miss Whitney.

"Students are interested in playing a particular sport, but have had no experience in it. I will, therefore, have an opportunity to learn about it," she added.

"We will try to arrange the schedule to suit the maximum number of students," explained Miss Whitney. "If there is a special team from another school, we would like to participate in a sport, I wish she would contact me."

Field hockey and soccer will start Monday at 3:45 and continue until 6 p.m. Tennis will be offered on Tuesday and Thursday. Students may check out equipment from the fieldhouse for recreational sports, thus eliminating the necessity of intramural activities for the student to participate in athletics.

Diving school slated for preps

The athletic department, School of Education and Extension, Division of the university has scheduled a one and three meter diving school for women. The classes will be taught by instructors and coaches.

The program is scheduled to begin Sept. 18 and continue through November 20.

Jack Nelson, former National High School One Meter Board champion and All-American selection, will conduct the Saturday sessions.

Judy Whitney, recently appointed director of women's intramurals, stands in her office in the new Multipurpose Building Complex. Miss Whitney has outlined a pioneer program of activities for UMSL co-eds.

BULLSHIPPIN' by Darrell Shoultz
Associate sports editor

Something akin to the Hatfield-McCoy feud of old will be heard upon St. Louis Saturday, for that is the date of the Rivermen-St. Louis U. Billikens soccer match, and with it the start of one helluva cross-town rivalry.

The Great Intracity Rivalry permeates most of UMSL's intercollegiate sports. With the Bills providing the competition in basketball, tennis, wrestling, swimming, and most notably, basketball. The baseball and tennis match-ups aren't new, but with the addition of competition in the four new sports, the rivalry really gets into swing.

The Rivermen have scrimmaged the soccer Bills before, but have never taken the field against them in actual play. The formidable Bills have a string of victories that extends to 1000 or something like that, and it is unlikely that the string will be broken this year. It's my bet (55 to two-one odds) that the Bills will repeat as NCAA university division champs this year.

The reason for all this gibberish is that, taking facts, it seems unlikely that the Rivermen will beat the Bills (not impossible but unlikely) this year. BUT, that will not always be the case. With the help of a few more soccer scholarships, and with the channeling of more of the home-grown talent our way, the UMSL-SLU match-ups of the future should be on a more even keel.

Right now we're talking about soccer, because the Rivermen-Bills basketball rivalry is a different story. The basketball Bills, though they are MVC co-champs are nowhere near as formidable as their soccer counterparts, and it is highly possible that the Rivermen will kick their posteriors when they meet in December. However, that's another story, and if I don't forget or flunk out, we'll get into that later.

Getting back to soccer, now's as good a time as any to wish coach Don Dallas' boys good luck in the coming season. Just think how cool it'd be to have the college division champs; the Rivermen, and the university division champs; the Billikens, in the same league, the Stars, can get it together... oh well. That, too, is another story.

Rivermen kickers face tough test Saturday

This Saturday at Municipal Field the defending champion of the Ottawa (Kansas) Invitational Soccer Tournament will take on the defending NCAA national champions in a 1 p.m. match.

It may sound like a mis-match and it might very well be. The powerful Billikens of St. Louis University may very well expect to win over the young cross town squad.

The Rivermen, built around the success of 14 returning lettermen, however, do not seem overly impressed. "We have a very tough schedule, but we're not overmatched, even against St. Louis," said Coach Don Dallas. "Needless to say we're looking forward to that game - most of my players have neighbors playing for the Billikens." As always, a top soccer match in the St. Louis area is something of a South St. Louis intramural clash. An extra added attraction in this contest, however, will be the presence in the Rivermen nets of former Billiken Tim O'Toole. The Red and Gold have been talking about and planning thin clash since it was announced during last Spring's baseball season. The Rivermen will meet two other schools for the first time this year, Eastern Illinois, formerly NAIA national champ, and Murray State of Kentucky. Once again on the slate will be Quincy College, also a recent NAIA champ, Washington University, Southern Illinois University - Edwardsville, and the Billikens. "With four schools for the first time this year, Eastern Illinois, formerly NAIA national champ, and Murray State of Kentucky. Once again on the slate will be Quincy College, also a recent NAIA champ, Washington University, Southern Illinois University - Edwardsville, and the Billikens."

At any rate, playing the role of the under-dog is nothing new to the Rivermen kickers. In their first season three years back, playing their first home game ever at Florissant Valley, the locals went up against the formidable Rockhurst eleven.

The Hawks started their reserve, not bothering even to dress their starters. They lost 3-0.

Athletic staff bolstered by newcomers

Increased activity resulting from the addition of UMSS's Fieldhouse has necessitated the addition of five staff members to the Athletic Department.

Dan Wall, formerly an assistant basketball coach at Central Missouri State College, has been named to fill the same position on the Rivermen staff. Wall, a native of Kansas City, received a B.A. in education at St. Benedict's College and a M.S. in physical education from Central Missouri, replaces Arnold Copeland as assistant to the varsity and head junior varsity coach. Copeland will become a full-time instructor in the school of education at UMSS. He will remain as baseball coach.

Wall will serve as assistant coach. Miss Judy Whitney has accepted an appointment to head the new women's intramural department. Miss Whitney received a masters in physical education at the University of Missouri - Columbia.

She comes to UMSS following seven years at Illinois, Illinois, high school. Miss Whitney is a graduate of nearby Normandy High School.

Bobby Roads, formerly assistant coach at both Riverview Gardens and Hazelwood High Schools in St. Louis County, has accepted the position of head coach of the men's wrestling team. The first year coach of the first year wrestlers earned his B.S. in education at the University of Missouri-Columbia, where he captained the 1965-66 Tiger wrestling squad.

Ted Struckmann, who served as trainer for the 1978-79 Rivermen, has been named head coach of UMSS's first swimming team. Struckmann will also serve as trainer to all UMSS athletes.

The new trainer-coach earned his B.S. in education at Southeast Missouri State College and received his masters in health and safety from Indiana University.

Early in the summer, Kevin Byrne, a graduate of Marquette University, accepted the post of sports information director. Byrne, a two-time lettermen on the Marquette wrestling team, served as sports editor of the Marquette Tribune and sports director of WMUR-AM in Milwaukee.

Byrne succeeds Eddie Muson, who resigned his post at the end of last semester.

It ain't happenin' in the city, baby.

M-P Bldg. schedule

The new UMSS fieldhouse, the Multi-Purpose Building, will be open according to a schedule released this week by the athletic department.

The building will open daily, from Monday through Friday, at 8:30 a.m. and close at 10 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday; 10 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday, and 9 p.m. on Friday. The facility will be open for student use from 1:30 to 4 p.m. on Sunday and from 10:30 to 2:30 p.m. on Saturday.
