Slave sale draws protest

by Bruce Barth

Despite unseasonably cold weather, the turnout for the annual slave auction sponsored by Alpha Xi Delta was respectable. But not everybody in attendance was there to bid. Between 25 and 35 demonstrators, representing women's groups on campus, Students for a Democratic Society, the Peace and Freedom Party, the P.F. FLYer and other interested organizations, looked on in protest. With them they brought posters, printed handouts and other items which are too cause.

The auction itself began without incident, but the demonstrators soon joined forces, and the battle ensued. Student Body President, "Woman of the Nigger of the World," "Slavery Isn't Funny" and "Woman is Here!" The protesters ambled about the area, one later taking the microphone.

New council members elected

According to results released last week, the University council members are: Dan Watts; Yvonne Reng; Mike Thomas; Mark Clay; Robert Spellman; Richard Kisler; Martha Johnson and Tim Walsh.

On the same ballot, students could vote in a preference poll for the Vice President of the Student Council and several other offices. In the campus presidential preference poll, Senator George McGovern captured 64.3% of the votes cast, while Nixon took 32.9%. A wide variety of people shared the remaining 2.8%.

Results for the state positions are as follows: For Governor: Kit Bond, 63.6%, Ed Diwed, 43.4%. Attorney General: Danforth, 53.9%. Second District Senate, 46.1%. Treasurer: Spanhower, 82.8%. Parker, 16.4%.

Lieutenant Governor: Schramm, 69.5%, Piggotty, 17.4%.

The student court is in dire need of judges for the coming year. At the moment, two judges have been appointed, but a full court consists of five judges and three alternates. Applications for positions for new may be picked up at the information desk, and returned at the same location after completion.

Requirements mentioned are: 1) being in good standing as a student; 2) having a few hours each week to deal with cases; 3) having some knowledge of the traffic regulations; and 4) plain common sense.

The Student Court deals mostly with traffic violations and disputes between students.

Pre-law program to be held

The Law School at St. Louis University invites all UMSL pre-law students to their "Pre-Law Admissions Conference," October 28, from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The conference, to be held in the Knights' Room in the Pius XII Memorial Library, 3655 West Pine Boulevard, will feature speakers and panel discussions on Careers in the Law, Law School Admission and Financial Aid, as well as opportunities for students of disadvantaged backgrounds, minorities, and women in the Legal Profession.

Formal speeches will be kept to an absolute minimum. The greatest part of the time will be devoted to answering students' questions and providing them with the types of information pre-law students need.

There is no charge for attendance. UMSL pre-law students and those who may be thinking of a career in Law are urged to attend.

S.D.S. member Paul Gomberg was given time to speak by Sigma Pi auctioneer Greg Webb. Gomberg pointed out that "the idea of a mock auction is not funny. Between 50 and 80 million slaves died on slave ships from Africa to the U.S., and many more died under poor conditions after they arrived here."

Gomberg also argued that the idea of women allowing themselves to be sold was "not funny, because it is too realistic. Selling women on the basis of looks is what's really happening in this society. Women are judged on looks and it's a serious problem." After Gomberg's ten-minute oratory, Webb asked, "Alright, who's next?"

For each person protesting the slave auction, there was one infatuated with the event. Most of the girls being auctioned justified their actions by claiming that the whole affair was not meant to be political, but solely a fund raising measure. "It's just for fun," stated one participant. "Everyone here has volunteered, and they want to be sold." She pointed out that the slavery concept distributed to each "owner" forbid forcing the slave from doing anything against her own discretion.

Lisa Pagano of the Alpha Xi Delta sorority said "We went through all of this last year, and they're making a big thing out of nothing at all. If they (the protesters) want to take a stand about something, let them take a stand about something that concerns the real world."

In answer to the question of why no men were being auctioned, she responded by saying that Sigma Tau Gamma was planning a "male auction" for the future. But a spokes- man for the fraternity claimed he had no knowledge of such plans.

News Briefs

"Each student is requested to file a degree application form in the Office of the Dean of the School or college from which he intends to graduate at least one calendar year before the expected graduation date."

New plaza

The patch of land bordered by the social science building, the library, and Clark Hall will soon be converted to a garden-like plaza, according to Mr. John Perry, director of the UMSL business office. "SPACE (Performing Arts and Cultural Events) committee made some suggestions for this area and met with the architect, Drake Partnership," Perry said. Plans will be finalized this winter and bids sent out so work can begin this spring.

Money for the plaza development will come from state appropriations earmarked for "Repairs, Replacement and Campus Improvement." Perry said. The area north of Lucas Hall will remain undeveloped to permit future building on the site.

Future teachers

On Friday, October 6, Student National Educational Association elected its new 1972-73 officers. They are Stephen Becker, President; Marty Hutchcraft, 1st vice-president; Susan Bell, 2nd vice-president; Mary Boald, secretary, and Pat Right, treasurer. This year SNEA, an organization for future teachers, has a membership of 70 students. The fees for the year are $5.50, which entitles the member to subscriptions to several educational magazines and papers. Dr. Dick Miller and Dr. Paul Travers are the sponsors of the club.

There are a variety of activities planned for the year on Fridays at 11:30 in the Ponny Building. October 27, Dr. Fred Brechter will speak on Urban Education. On Friday, November 3, there will be a regular meeting with Dr. Harold Salmon, Director of the Educational Center in Ferguson, discussing his program. Come and join us!

Late bus run

The last shuttle bus from UMSL to the Korvette lot will leave at 5:15 p.m. beginning Monday, Oct. 30.

Students in afternoon Biology and Chemistry labs submitted this suggestion to the Central Council Grievance Committee.

The late bus run is being tried on an experimental basis to determine how many students will use this service.

The University Players are holding auditions for their next play, "A Gun for His Mistress," October 29, 30 and 31. Auditions will be held Sunday and Monday from 7 to 10 p.m. and Tuesday from 3 to 6 p.m.

Six females and four males will be cast in the fast-paced farce centered around the turn of the century. Written by George Fennel, and adapted by Ken Clark from a play by Frank Werneke, a graduate student at Washington University.

The Players encourage any member of the community to audition, including students, faculty and staff.

Human rights ignored, Fuller

by Judy Klamon

Dr. R. Buckminster Fuller, recently speaking to a capacity crowd in L. P. Penney’s, used the words and the present knowledge and resources that he possessed, he would be able to “make it possible for all of humanity to exist at a high standard of living,” one day and that I would require only 15 years to implemen.

Fuller, 77 years old, is presently at the Edwardsville campus of Southern Illinois University. He is the architect and designer of the geodesic dome on the campus, holds 29 honorary degrees, although never graduating from any of the many universities that he attended, is author of several books, holds several architectural awards, and a “Humanist of the Year” award.

Fuller’s theory comes down to one basic principle—“What needs to be done for the world—and how can I do it with what resources that I have?”

In the discussion, Fuller reminisced of the era when he was born where many things were believed to be impossible—such as the Wright brothers—they flew when I was nine years old and all that. “People acted as though they knew all along that it was feasible.”

Fuller’s first child was born the year after World War I. She died of spinal meningitis soon after. Not having a direction to his life, Fuller followed the advice of many, soon ending up on a collision course with himself.

“I could not understand people’s preoccupation with securing employment and earning a dollar. With such confusion at that time, I was on the verge of suicide. I had to sit down and figure out where I was, why and what for—what relation everything had to the universe. In 1927, I gave up all axioms that had been drilled into my head and began thinking about what I know by experience. At that time, I concluded that humanity was not here for its own satisfaction, that the universe was complex, and that each of us played an intricate part.”

With the knowledge that Fuller had, he began to engineer, planning according to what man needed from the universe and the best way to facilitate that need at an economical and ecological value to both.

Man’s “so called” feats of engi-gineering, to Fuller just do not measure up. Stated Fuller, “The waste is incredible!”

Fuller implied that J. C. Penney was totally inadequate for the need when he turned to the Dean of the Extension Division and asked how much the building weighed. The Dean couldn’t answer.

“I would bet that most bathrooms were never examined by scientists. The system of flushing away waste was invented in 2400 B.C. The idea of using 5 volumes of water to flush away one volume of waste is absurd!”

Fuller continued, “For some reason in today’s society, there exists a fear of losing one’s job. The many things that humanity needs are ignored. The planning that has the capability of functioning nearly 24 hours a day runs only one third of the time because people are tied up in such irrelevant matters. But the universe can not put up with this irrelevance. We can do so much with so little and were doing so little with so much.”

According to Fuller, political bureaucracy don’t think the great assumption that there just is not enough to go around is totally erroneous.

“The necessity for a world commonwealth is evident. Just one telephone depends on materials from four different countries. The negative way in which man is treating society is very detrimental.”

“The game that society plays seems so unnecessary,” said Fuller.

An individual goes as far as earning a doctorate. He is then told that he must earn a living. Just as that individual begins to know something, they tell him to stop—so someones else can earn a living.

According to Fuller, nature provides all the wealth that is needed. Money is not necessary, only com-cience. Fuller thought that governments were totally unnecessary also—that everyone could see what needed to be done. Said Fuller, “They should do it spontaneously. The resources to do it all are rap-dily decreasing.”

“If you can get people to thinking big enough, there won’t be pain anymore.”

To Froma－From Robert
She’s as cute as a kitten, as soft as the snow.
I feel her presence, wherever I go.

The touch of her lips, that she presses to mine;
Brings great thrills of pleasure.
And a love that divine.

To know that she’s pretty;
As cute as can be:
As sweet as the honey,
That’s hidden in a tree.
And most of the happiness,
That’s coming so free;
Is because little Froma.
Belongs now to me.

I take great pleasure and count it a wonderful privilege to announce, to the whole University family that Froma Rogers has consented to become Mrs. Robert W. David on the Christmas Saturday of December 23, 1972.

The formal wedding will take place in the sanctuary of the West Overland Bible Church, 2724 Ashby Road, on block north of Midland Blvd., at 7:00 p.m., Dec. 23, 1972.

Reception to follow. You all come.

Mexico lures Spanish students

by Rich Graft

All students have their own plans for the summer and they generally do not include an academic endeavor. However, there is a plan which is both academic and hopefully interesting enough to be included into your summer plans. Five weeks in Mexico, living with a Mexican family and studying at the Instituto de Estudios Hispanico at Saltillo, Mexico for up to five hours of credit in Spanish. This program lured some thirty students to the supervision of Mr. Luis Clay, to Mexico last summer.

Button is very proud of what he has done for the campus here and he is modest about it. However, it is difficult to determine just what the students and faculty think of him and his system. Everyone of the faculty members attempted to interview was trying to write a book and figure up grades. They simply were not available. Students, too, were impossible to find and even more so to talk with. The few I cornered were, though, representative of the mass enrollment here. That is to say, they were apathetic. The single question which did evoke a response was, "What do you do after your classes are over?" The almost unanimous answer, "Leave."

"Button's broken-down methodical system of running the UMSL campus is not perfect, its faults are few and far between. From his point of view, no irrepairable damage has been done by it. He looks to the future with the satisfaction of security on his side. One reporter asked him if there was a form to handle problems which the other four could not. "Yes," he replied, "I invented it, they have such a form. It is LC6971-U.M. FORM 18-BLNK SHT. It is a plain sheet of paper on which the complainer is asked to describe his problem in detail. There are no resolutions in the formal and hence, these forms are discarded immediately."

How to ruin a two party system

When Spiro Agnew claimed last Saturday that his conscience was unaffected by the implications of the Watergate affair, few eyebrows were raised. A man would have to possess literally no conscience at all to remain part of an administration as corrupt as the Republican Party.

Watergate has been investigated by no less than 50 groups, but the truth, if the Republican Party has its way, will not be revealed before November 7th general election. It is so sequestered that its caution is not necessary. A recent Gallup poll indicated that the crisis-corruption in government ranks as an important campaign issue to only 3% of the voting public.

Despite the widespread public's desperate attempts to make the bugging a viable issue, two-thirds of the voters cannot relate the incidents of Watergate to pollsters, and the third that can don't feel that it's an important issue.

When police first discovered the siren on the sixth floor of the Watergate complex—the offices of the Democratic National Committee, little more than burglary was suspected. But when the bugging equipment was found, it was valued at $30,000. The question of who was financing the probe was brought to light. All money from the Committee to Re-elect the President was tied in with the caper, the battle grounds were drawn.

The five men, James W. McCord, Jr., Frank Sturgis, Virgilio R. Gonzalez, Eugenio R. Martinez, and Bernard L. Barker were arrested for conspiracy to employ illegal means to transfer telephone conversations and documents from Democratic headquarters, and of illegally entering the offices with intent to steal property. Two new names were added to the list of defendants, E. Howard Hunt, Jr. and G. Gordon Liddy were both indicted similar charges. Three of the men had some background with the Republican Party.

Bernard Barker, reputed leader of the Watergate five, was found to possess an enormous bank account, presumably at the expense of the Republican Party. Maurice Stans, who has become famous in recent weeks for his gross mismanagement of funds, claims he doesn't know how GOP campaign funds came to rest in Barker's bank account. But Stans' ignorance seems somewhat suspicious.

The Justice Department tried to trace the origin of the funds found in Barker's possession, they found that the records, if there ever were any, had vanished. The question of legality was then raised; a congressional act requiring that all campaign contributions must be documented was apparently violated.

These investigations have uncovered facts that lead many Democratic leaders to believe that Watergate is not an isolated incident. For instance, thought has been given to sending illegal phone calls have been made by men claiming to be Democratic officials that were later proven to be phoners. One such call went to George Meany, AFL-CIO president, from a McGovern campaign aide, in order to set up a meeting between the two men.

Another similar incident involved a call to Walter Cronkite from Frank Manion, McGovern's campaign manager. Manion allegedly bought tickets for slanting the news to favor McGover, and in this way displaying theism towards his candidate. Again, a check-up proved that the call was a hoax.

Investigations have also brought out the possibility that other espionage techniques have been employed to destroy the Democratic party. One way to do this was found by Donald H. Segretti, who admitted that the Republicans did him to discard various primary cards. For example, he admitted that he had a direct hand in arranging for people to ask embarrassing or difficult questions of the GOP opponents during the primaries.

And the evidence of political sabotage does not stop here—events ranging from the overthrow of a Catholic dictator to the firing of a first lieutenant in a New Hampshire newspaper, to untraceable letters in the 'Wax, and thought have been sent out accusing Hubert Humphrey of "illegal sexual activity." All are examples of the efforts to plant disorder and disenchantment into the Democratic Party.

Within less than two weeks to go until the presidential election, there is little hope that the entire matter will be thoroughly investigated, and all of the facts printed. Senator Ted Kennedy has ordered a last-ditch investigation by the House Judiciary Committee into the possibilities of sabotage, with subpoenas to be issued to key witnesses, but there is no basis to assume that even after the facts are disseminated, the voters will be affected.

Ironically, if it may seem, a political party that depends on its stringent law enforcement program as a primary platform can't seem to thwart, much less detect, criminal activity in its own organization.

Admissions exams

To the Editor,

The charge of racism by those who protest the use of admission exams by the University immediately brings to mind the philosophical questions of standards and values.

The protesters scream that the test is biased towards the middle class and that the system is white or black, or rich or poor, but because they were men of great ability who set their own standards by the highest value--the rational mind! Productive thought is all man has to make progress.

Those unable to pass the entrance exams will find the going difficult in a school system set up on the same standards as the exams. The protesters' unspoken attack is not on the test per se but on the standards and values by which it is set up.

The standards brought down to a level of inferiority where we will all be equally inept.

Perhaps the most disheartening sight is that of the administration, as well as the faculty and student body, who remain silent in the face of such abuse.

John Mulken

To the Editor,

I write in response to the letter in the UMSL Current of October 20, 1972 written by Manh A. A. Abuhamdeh. His letter in response to your article of Oct. 12th concerning race, I am aware of the name of King Hassan I of Jordan.

I certainly agree with Mr. Abuhamdeh that much more commentary and insight into the Middle East situation is needed. Mr. Abuhamdeh raises some questions in his letter: "... Was the Father aware of the tragic conditions of the two million Palestinian refugees? ..." Yes, I am aware of the situation and the political strife in the Middle East. Most of these camps in Lebanon and Israel. I will never forget the eyes of the children there.

"Did Mr. Lyons inquire about the motives and behavior of the Palestinian refugees?" Yes, for two weeks in August I talked every day with Palestinians in Lebanon, Israel, Syria, and Iraq. They said much about their motivation.

"Did Mr. Lyons protest the Israeli bombings in Syria and Lebanon where in 275 innocent people were killed?" Yes.

I regret that my gesture of support to the one Palestinian leader who expressed sympathy to the Israeli government has been seen as indifference to "an entire Palestinian people."

Salaam Aleikum,

Fr. Bill Lyons

To the Editor,

Every night in this country, the families of 1778 young men retire, wondering whether they shall ever see them again. Of these 1778 young men, 537 are known Prisoners of War, and 1241 are Missing in Action in Vietnam; the latters' fates being totally unknown. To date, the problem of bringing the POW's and MIA's home is unsolved. Fortunately, in recent months the American people have become more aware of and concerned with this pressing problem. Recently, three POW's were released and sent home, at which time Americans began to feel encouraged at the prospect of other such homecomings. Such optimism is without foundation, specifically when one considers the vast numbers of men still being held or missing. Ali al-Dina illustrates the point that only twelve American POW's have ever been released from North Vietnam.

The degradation and suffering these men are experiencing must stop. Please be involved. What can you do? Write first letters. It is vital that the whole of the American people become aware of the situation and feel that our actions are directly related to the efforts of the American people to stop the war. Please write to your Senator or Congressman with a few words on this issue. Let him know you care.

A word for Black Sabbath

by Steve Diesel

Black Sabbath Fear? As if three albums weren’t enough. Well, if their musical reputation won’t discourage you, and the album cover won’t either, let me try. The play by play goes something like this.

“Wheels of Confusion,” the first cut, is average Black Sabbath. It reaffirms my belief that the guitarist played a month of lessons, learned a progression and quit. Sabbath’s biggest technical trick is playing four chords over and over again and then thinking up neat ways to step and stop again. The lead singer is featured on the next cut, “Tomorrow’s Dream” which is the best song you'll find on the record. Actually the vocalist has it easy on this album. He only had to learn five melodies and sing them over and over.

“Changes” is definitely a change for Black Sabbath. It’s their first slow, gentle tune. We can make out the lyrics now, but we’re sorry we did. It’s an eighth grade poem. “FX” is the first song to use stereo on the album. It is an experimental cut with a synthesizer. The problem is it sounds like a couple of notes from “A Clockwork Orange” and Walter Carlos did that much better anyway.

From here on there is nothing new. A couple of other cuts that could have been called Lullaby Tunes. “St. Vitus Dance” at first I thought was a song. But now I realize it was only a description of the technique used to make the album.

Or to put it in terms even Black Sabbath might understand.

Black Sabbath (scream) has just thrown dust over their own tomb. Black Sabbath (silence) has it easy on this album. The vocalist has it easy too.

The play by play goes something like this.

The production of The Grateful Dead in previous statement, concert, and 19th. The Dead seemed to immediately acquire this sense of enjoyment. In comparison, the Dead seemed to generate an aura of experience “down home” like this.

Early in the concert, a sound problem existed, and Jerry Garcia, six feet tall, with that big bundle of bushy hair, seemed to be concerned about it how the audience was receiving the concert. Garcia, along with the rest of the group, wanted to make sure that we were getting our three dollars and fifty cents worth out of the concert. Consider paying $3.50 for a quality concert. Doesn’t it seem phenomenal? Well, so are the Dead.

It is “heart warming” to have a group like The Greatful Dead with us. A group of polished musicians that are not hooked on monetary values, nor time perspectives, is needed in our rigid governed culture.

My previous impressions of the Dead were that of a country rock group. How wrong I was! Tuesday night the group collectively participated in a contemporary endeavor that was shocking to the unaware observer. Their current LP of The Grateful Dead consists of a two record set, THE DEAD LIFE.

Crowd comes alive to the Dead

by Mike Klick

In these times of super groups and the worship of rock gods, it is refreshing to experience “down home” artists. By this previous statement, I am referring to the Sky High Associates and Pacific Presentation Production of The Grateful Dead concert, on the nights of October 17, 18th and 19th.

The Dead seemed to generate an aura of appearing with the intent of “enjoying.” Both the audience and the Dead seemed to immediately acquire this sense of enjoyment.

Faculty to relate religious experiences

Would you like to hear the director of the MBA program, or an assistant professor of biology, or the Dean of Students speak about the values that inform and support their personal and professional lives?

On Wednesdays during November UMSL’s campus religious advisors are sponsoring a series of lunch time sessions in the J.C. Penney Building in which faculty will share how their particular religious traditions and faith perspectives shape their life and work.

Each of the sessions offers an opportunity to meet and get to know better an UMSL faculty member in terms of what he believes and how faith helps determine his priorities.

All students and faculty are invited to attend these "How It Looks To Me" lunch time sessions. Bring a tray or a sack lunch, coffee is provided.

The schedule of speakers is:

Nov. 1 Don Driemeier of the School of Business, member of the United Church of Christ 11:45 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. Room 72 J.C. Penney Building

Nov. 8 Don Grogan, Department of Biology, member of the Baptist Church 11:45 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. Room 75 J.C. Penney Building

The clearest choice for a generation

So McGovern can't win, eh? Where have you heard that before?

In the primaries last Spring, that's where.

But you fooled the political experts and rewrote the history books. You provided the manpower and womanpower for the largest, smoothest, toughest vote-canvasing operation this country had ever seen.

Now it's time to do it again. And the job this Fall is even more important. For the choice between Nixon and McGovern is the clearest choice voters have had for a generation.

McGovern has opposed the bombing of Indochina, while Nixon has been inflicting the explosion equivalent of 7 Hiroshima atom bombs a month on that already devastated area.

Nixon believes in putting people out of work in order to hold down prices. His policies have put 2 million more people out of work. McGovern believes that there should be a job for everyone who wants to work, with the U.S. Government itself as the employer of last resort.

Nixon started his campaign with $10 million in secret money. McGovern's campaign is financed almost entirely by contributions of $5 to $25 from the people.

Nixon has nominated conservatives and mediocrities to the United States Supreme Court. One or two more Nixon appointees, if he is re-elected, and you'll live with a heavy-handed Nixon court for the rest of your life. McGovern has pledged to appoint a woman and members of racial and ethnic minorities, and will appoint highly qualified liberals.

Ralph Nader says the Nixon Administration is "the most corrupt in our history." The late Robert Kennedy called George McGovern "the most decent man in the Senate."

McGovern wants the millionaires and the large corporations to start paying their fair share of taxes. Nixon wants to maintain the status quo.

Get an absentee ballot if you need one. Get some money together to help us make get-out-the-vote phone calls. And get together with your local McGovern Committee to find out how you can help.

You started this campaign. It's up to you to finish it.

Graduation ceremonies held for extension center program

by Deborah White

Over fifty former high school dropouts graduated from the University of Missouri-St. Louis Extension Center Work Incentive (WIN) Program early this month.

The ceremony was held in the J.C. Penney Building and guest speakers included Democratic Congressman William Clay, John Sullivan, project director of the WIN program, and Paul Pic, director of the Adult Basic Education Program.

The WIN program began in July 1968 under legislation from the U.S. Department of Labor. It later merged with the University of Missouri Basic Education Program and began an October of that same year, in order to launch a high-powered educational plan for those adults who had failed to complete a high school education.

Features of the program include an absolutely cost-free high school education, a seventy dollar per month stipend for attending classes, and three dollars per day per child for those parents caring for babysitters. The only pre-requisite for the above benefits is that persons enrolling in the program be on welfare.

One of the distinctive characteristics of the program is that classes are held during the day, five days a week, in contrast to the usual three or four evenings per week schedule used in most adult educational schools. In fact, "There are very few such schools in the city," according to Dr. Paul Pic.

He also mentioned that teachers need not be certified, though the six out of seven now conducting classes in the program are. However, this is mainly because they come from primary and secondary school backgrounds.

Perhaps one of the most important features of the program is that students decide for themselves when they feel they are ready to go on. And, after passing the high school equivalency test, Dr. Pic attests that, "More than ninety percent go on to some sort of higher education." This is not surprising in view of the fact that WIN continues to give its graduates the same monetary benefits, so long as they pursue some form of higher education--be it a junior, senior or secretarial school, or university, etc.

When asked about what the actual success of the program has been to date, Dr. Pic stated that within a month, they have received explicit results from data collected on 800 students over the past four years. He estimated that "of those who have graduated, seventy-five percent have improved their economic lot and have been able to remove themselves from welfare."

The program will be continued as long as the government sees fit to spend the money, but it is important to note that it is funded on a year-to-year basis. Dr. Pic implied that the coming election may be the deciding factor as to the program's continued existence, or its cessation.

Youth fare decision to be announced

After over four years of study, the Civil Aeronautics Board is prepared to announce its decision on discount fares for persons 12 to 21 years old. Sources at several airlines, many of which favor continuation of the fares, expect the announcement to be delayed until after the November election--because they expect the CAB to ban the privilege for which over a million new youth travelers apply each year.

By making the impending announcement an issue in the presidential campaigns, student inquiri­ ries to the CAB and the candidates might affect the ultimate decision.

Rivermen edge Chikas, 3-2, in overtime

by Matt Mattingly
Current Sports Editor

Blame it on the St. Louis-Chicago rivalry, perhaps, but the Chikas of the University of Illinois-Chicago Circle have consistently given the Rivermen fits -- in soccer, that is -- buffering their visitors 2-0 in the Windy City two years ago and playing their hosts to a scoreless tie in double overtime last year on UMSL's home turf. Obviously, dreams of upsets were dancing in their heads Saturday as they took the Missouri travelers into an extra stanza tied at 2 goals apiece. The Rivermen, however, after their rude treatment at the hands of another Illinois team last Wednesday, would have none of it. John Garland tallied at 2:03 of the overtime session to send the Rivermen back home with their sixth victory in seven games.

UMSL's Pat Reagan and UICC's James Scobie had added goals in the first half, while Mark L. Grand of the Rivermen and Angelo Malmano of the Chikas matched second-half goals.

The tough contest made a prophet of UMSL coach Don Dallas, who had predicted as much last week. "We can't stop to think about the SIU loss, we play Illinois-Chicago Circle Saturday and that's where our concentration should be directed. We know they're a fine team and I'm sure they'll want to beat us badly, especially because of our national ranking."

That national ranking might just improve despite the SIU loss, in light of one of last weekend's successful upsets.

Defending NAIAA champions Quincy College, who made the Rivermen pay dearly for a 3-1 victory with the loss of top scorer Tim Smith, finally did UMSL a good turn by dealing St. Louis University a 1-0 defeat Saturday. SIU, at 6-0-1, boasts the area's best record. Quincy is 7-1, UMSL 6-1. The Bluenows were on their way to a lackluster season with a mark of 9-2-2.

Dallas was optimistic about this squad's chances of landing a playoff berth. "We're the sixth rated team in the nation and the second in the Midwest (behind St. Louis). An NCAA tournament bid is still our objective, and I wouldn't be surprised if we meet the Cougars then."

UMSL and SIU are both NCAA college division members.

Naturally, however, Dallas was not taking the Cougars lightly. "They have exceptional talent and pass as well as any team I've seen this season," he maintained. "Their attack is impressive and I have to give our goalie (Frank Tausinski) a lot of credit for keeping the score low."

Of course, SIU also helped keep the score low, by shutting out the Rivermen. Maybe Quincy would consider doing UMSL another service this Saturday when they take on the Cougars at Edwardsville.

Even so, the Rivermen would still have to beat SIU themselves to survive in the play-offs.

A discouraging word? Sorry about that. The Rivermen play their three remaining contests at home as they seek a 9-1 season.

If you missed Western Illinois yesterday, you can still drop in for the action as the Rivermen entertain Murray State this Saturday, and next week the following Saturday.

Cagers anticipate rebuilding season

With five weeks to go and counting until the defending NCAA Midwest Regional champion Rivermen open their 1972-73 season at home Dec. 2 against Central Missouri State, UMSL head coach Chuck Smith and his assistants, Dan Walz, and Cezel Walker, face the task of converting a wealth of individual talent into a cohesive team. The team which fashioned a 21-6 record last season is no more. The five starting seniors, (Greg Daust, Mark Bemsen, Ron Cordum, Jim Buford, and Glen "Boody" Robe), along with subsuperstars Mike Hayes and Fran Geissel--have all graduated. A third reserve, Charlie McFerren has quit school. Smith's two returning lettermen, Jim Steitz and Butch Willis, were junior varsity last year. The players who accounted for 64.2 of UMSL's 89 point-per-game-average are gone.

Off-season recruitment has brought the Rivermen a host of transfers with outstanding credentials. Potential .

"It's going to take us at least five or six weeks of practice to play as a team," Smith contended. "We have to analyze which style of play will suit all of them, and then they'll have to learn to discipline themselves."

This year's squad is composed almost exclusively of juniors--no seniors at all. Basically, every position is up for grabs.

One of those positions is that vacated by the departure of 6-7 Daust, who earned honorable mention All-America recognition last season.

The two leading candidates for that spot are Lefty Lay of Chicago--a 6-5 junior college transfer who averaged 17 points, 17 rebounds and 8 blocked shots per game last season for Eastern Oklahoma State--and Rick Schmidt--a 6-7 junior center who went on a concentrated weight program after last season to add 30 pounds to his formerly bony frame. Schmidt now weighs 230, five pounds heavier than Lay.

"Schmidt's the quickest big man we've got," Schmidt said, "and he didn't lose any speed with the extra weight.

The coaching staff must determine the starting five from among 13 legitimate candidates, including the four previously mentioned. But the list is far from complete.

Kevin Barthule, a 6-3 guard who averaged 17.1 points per game last season for Harper Junior College of Palatine, Illinois, shot over 50 percent from the field.

Another Kevin--Brennan by name--came to UMSL after Loyola-New Orleans dropped intercollegiate basketball. The 6-5, 180 pound guard/forward, who led LNO freshmen with 19 points two years ago, scored 5 points per contest as the sixth man on the Loyola varsity.

Derrick Gray, a 6-3 guard from North Platte, where he was most valuable player, averaged 23.8 points and 8.1 rebounds.

Dave Kincaid, from Plattis College of Columbus, Nebraska, averaged 22 points and 10.2 rebounds over two seasons.

Smith also noted that Mike Lewis, a Northwest graduate and another of the growing ranks of Florissant Valley transfers, has been a pleasant surprise.

"Lewis has looked very good in practice," he said, "and he already proved that he can play for us."

A 6-4 forward, Lewis had 17.1 points and 7 rebounds per game for FVCC last winter.

Other candidates are guards Bill Harris (a 6-1 junior), Dave Bazzell (a 6-6 sophomore), and forwards Mike Pratt (a 6-8 junior) and Jim Peloscheck (a 6-8 sophomore).

"We've got a tough act to follow," Smith said, "but we have some fine talent and I'm confident we'll have a good season."

Five weeks and counting.

A Governor should be a man we can trust.

He should be a man capable of leadership. A governor should be a man who would act in our behalf. After all, we elect him to represent us.

Kit Bond has no ties to the special interest groups. Kit Bond has no stake in, and will not continue, the patronage system. Kit Bond represents leadership which will put efficiency and responsiveness back in Missouri government.

If we truly want this type of government, there is only one choice--Kit Bond.
