Groebman predicts imminent Marillac purchase

Mark Henderson

Arnold B. Groebman, chancellor of UMSL, told the University Senate Thursday that UMSL is quite near to the purchase of Marillac.

"My guess is that we will get Marillac," Groebman said.

"You know that the governor has changed his story concerning Marillac, but that he thinks the state can't afford it. "I want you to know we have a great deal of support from the legislature, and I believe we have successfully shown that we need Marillac; because we are the most overcrowded campus," Groebman told the Senate.

Groebman, in his report, also discussed purchasing arrangements for Marillac. Groebman said he was not in favor of a lease purchase arrangement because there is no guarantee that next year's legislature will appropriate money in the same way as this year's.

"If we have to pay for Marillac out of our budget, that would be a great strain on the university," Groebman said.

In explanation of Marillac's purchase, Groebman has appointed Donald Dreisbach, acting dean of the school of business administration, as the new space committee chairperson.

"This is going to be an especially tough job this year, since the chairperson and the committee are going to have to decide on which departments are going to move out to Marillac, what will be done with the space vacated by those moving, when the administration and general services buildings are to be completed, and how to work out a schedule for the moves," Groebman told the Senate.

Groebman also announced that the contingent budget cut of three percent will have to be adopted.

Lawrence Barton, associate professor of chemistry, gave the report of the Curriculum and Instruction Committee.

"Changes on Barton's report included a resulting in the elimination of the 'Y' grade, which also deletes any notations on transcripts that include "any official action taken concerning such student which affects his standing in the University," Barton said, and his eligibility for a degree, and the reinstatement of such student after suspension or dismissal, and the restoration to good standing after probation, and all honors, letters, etc., except Latin honors.

Barton's committee also reported to the senate the 1977-78 calendar.

Another Barton resolution, the elimination of the "Y" grade, brought about a great deal of debate before the resolution came to the committee for final vote.

Joseph McKenna, professor of economics, spoke in favor of the resolution because of the "Y" grade -- we are placing a premium for the $5 charge to attract people from the community to get a 'Y' and save $5."

Ellingworth, director of the economics department, spoke in opposition to the resolution.

By-law revisions withdrawn by Central Council

Pam Rhody

"Revisions to the Central Council by-laws concerning membership in the council were withdrawn from the February 1 meeting.

The revisions which call for all student organizations to apply for council recognition had been reworded since first being presented to the council.

It took two more meetings before the revisions can be voted on.

The revisions will state, in effect, that each organization on campus must make an application for recognition by the Central Council through its administrative committee.

This application will include the name of the organization, a list of UMSL students in the organization, and the general purpose of the organization.

It was also enunciated that Central Council will be sponsoring free coffee houses in the first three Friday of every month from 9:30 to 12:30 in the University Center.

There will be live entertainment and refreshments. The first of these coffee houses will take place on February 6.

The Council in other action, voted against the allocation of $100 to the UMSL section of the Midwest Model United Nations (MMUN). The money was to be used to enable UMSL students to attend a nationwide meeting of MMUN to be held in St. Louis from March 18 to 20.

The Central Council will be sending out letters to various UMSL administrators honoring the current policy for obtaining health insurance.

It stands, a student who was enrolled in the fall semester and did not purchase insurance cannot purchase it for the winter semester. Students enrolling for the first time in the winter semester, however, can purchase it.

The Council feels that this is a discrimination against those students who come of age after the beginning of the fall semester, or who could not afford to take insurance at that time.

Also discussed was a meeting of the Missouri Student Leaders Conference that will be held in Columbia on February 14. Central Council voted to pay driving expenses for those UMSL students attending the meeting. Randy Klock, president of the student body, has been asking students to make a presentation concerning commuter students at that meeting.

One of many free services offered by the Developmental Skills Center is the study skills sessions. The purpose of these sessions is to help anyone who is interested to develop more effective study habits. The sessions will be held twice a week.

Students meet aid conflict

Thomas Taechinger

Last week 18 students working for the university and receiving financial assistance were notified that they had to resign their campus jobs. Bart Devoti, director of financial aid, had notified these students that they had exceeded or would soon exceed their allotted amount of financial aid.

Many students were displeased with this information and stated their views in a recent interview.

Randy Klock, president of the student body, was one of the three students who had already exceeded his allotment. The recipient of a $500 loan from the university in August, he decided to take out a loan bank for that amount and repay UMSL immediately.

"I had little choice," he said. "I received $1650 a year as president and I can't resign my office. But I am trying to arrange a meeting with H.E. Mueller, head of the Financial Aid Office and Bart Devoti's superior, to see if the university won't, will absorb the cost of any excess loan payments."

"I'm angry that Mr. Devoti didn't tell me there was a limit to aid when I applied for the loan. It is his job to take care of such matters before they reach the crisis stage," he continued.

"Sure, no one would have accepted campus employment or a loan if they knew they would exceed their allotment and be abruptly terminated or forced to repay the loan. And now it looks like he is failing to accept responsibility for his mistake because it would make his department look bad."

Carolyn Carter, former news editor for the Financial Aid Department.

"The FAO knew I worked at the University Center and for the Current, yet I was told nothing at the time about any limit. I realize that Devoti's hands are tied on the issue, but it should never have happened in the first place," Carter said.

John Mueller, recipient of a loan and a worker for the campus Food Service, expressed a similar attitude toward the matter. "I will continue to work on campus until otherwise notified and I will not repay any loan," he said. "This mistake was made by the FAO in the first place and they, not the students, should make up any overpayment. Mr. Devoti gets paid to do that job, not me."

Mary Heinricher, a senior majoring in psychology, said, "I never knew there was a limit for an individual's aid. I assumed that everything was in order because it was handled by the FAO. I gave them all the necessary information."

Mary also plans to work at her job in the university center until further notice. "Devoti is sympathetic to me but I won't repay any loan because I don't think it's my responsibility. Ironically, I've recently had a turn for the better financially, and after my case is re-evaluated I'll probably be in no danger of exceeding my allotment."

Bart Devoti, director of financial aid, said, "Mistakes were made by this department but I am not trying to avoid any blame. It must be remembered that this office comes into contact with one third of the student body, administers eleven different aid programs, and handles veteran's minority, and social security programs. Mistakes are made but of course we try to minimize them."

"In Randy Klock's case," he continued, "other alternatives were discussed with him that might have precluded the necessity of repaying the loan so (continued on page 2)"

Relations director named

Marie Casey

Blair K. Farrell, a development consultant at UMSL for the past year, has been appointed director of university relations at UMSL.

His responsibilities include the coordination of the efforts of UMSL's development, public information, alumni relations, and publications activities. In addition, he will head the campus' private fund-raising program to supplement state appropriations.

Prior to Farrell's appointment, university relations consisted of activities focused on the office of public information and alumni relations.

The program is similar to those at many private institutions, which find greater success further extending the four areas mentioned into one department for telling the university's story to the public. Such a combination is necessary to attract money from private sources, to give a cohesive image of the community who have an interest in helping the institution, to attract
Debra Cunningham

The Office of Alumni Activ- ities has appointed Kathy Head as new director. Head is a graduate of SIU.

Before coming to USML, Head worked as a promotion coordi- nator for Professional Travel Planners, Inc. She began her new job at USML on January 5, 1976, replacing Lois Schoenmel, who was the first director of alumni activities and held that position for nine years.

So far, Head enjoys her work. She said, "It’s a very people oriented job and I like working with people." Head also said she has not encountered any difficulties but will probably have trouble with some of the university red tape as almost everyone does at one time or another.

It is the job of alumni activi- ties to keep the alumni informed of what is happening at USML. The Alumni Association, made up of 2,000 members who are alumni of the USML office of alumni activities in- volvement is not essential in the community.

The Association funds a num- ber of projects such as Seren- dipity Day, a reception for graduation seniors and their parents, and an awards program for the most outstanding USML faculty member.

KWMU, KETC get minority grant

The USML radio station KWMU and KETC-TV have received a joint minority training grant from the Corporation for Public Broadcast (CPB). The two-year grant is offered by CPB to increase minority participation in public broadcasting.

The KWMU/KETC-TV applica- tion was one of 11 selected from among 64. It is the first time a public radio station and TV station have shared the hiring of a broadcaster under the grant program. For KETC-TV it was third such grant in the three-year history of the minority training program.

The project will pay one-half of the salary and benefits for a minority candidate to be hired for two years for one position. Programs are generally divided into management, mid- management, professional and technical assistance levels.

In accordance with the CPB guidelines, Christopher Moore was selected employee trainee, learning aspects of news repor- ting, production, public broad- casting and news management.

While at KETC he will continue hosting "World of Work," a series on career edu- cation, and "World Neighborhoods," a series on minority geography, and will serve as producer/director. Moore said, "We feel that Chris Moore can be of value to KWMU and the KETC can be of value to Chris," said Robert Thomas, KWMU general manager. The result will be an employee-trainee with working knowledge and real on-the-air work in both radio and television.

"We at KETC-TV are pleased that the grant will open new horizons for the professional develop- ment of Chris Moore, whose work at KWMU in the public TV station in Little Rock is of the highest standards. Mr. Moore’s first began freelance air work for KETC last summer after leaving here from KETC- TV in Arkansas," said Robert C. Glazier, executive director of KETC-TV.

soon or possibly at all. And in a student says he or she wasn’t report this could probably be taken care of when further aid is discussed. But I don’t foresee any law suit or similar drastic action by the university to recover loaned money. If this happened it would probably cost more to recover the amount than would be worthwhile.

Jazz thrush

Cleo Laine coming up

by Bob Goddard

THE INCOMPARABLE British jazz thrush, Cleo Laine, a treat for any body’s tired old ears, will be heading our way soon. She’s booked for a concert, March 24 at Powell Sympho- ny Hall for the benefit of the University of Mis- souri-St. Louis performing arts.

John Dankworth, another lumin- ous figure in British jazz circles, will be there, too, as her accompanist.

The Laine-Dankworth debut concert here in 1973 at USML packed ‘em in so you’d better be seeing about reserving your tickets very near future. They’ll go on public sale March 1, but in pay dues you can get ticket reservations info by calling USML at 453-5148.

Tickets on sale exclusively to USML community for 4 days before public sale begins.

The Performing Arts & Cultural Events Committee presents

The Boehm Quintette

Susan Stewart · Phyllis Boldt · Don Stewart · Joseph Anderson · Richard Victory

Flute · Oboe · Clarinet · Horn · Bassoon

The Boehm Quintette was formed in 1968 for the purpose of performing wind chamber music. Since then the group has toured the U.S. and performed at both the Carnegie Recital Hall and Alice Tully Hall in Lincoln Center.

These young musicians have developed a varied and unique repertory. A major part of their work is based on a program of ongoing commissions and their concerts have included both the U.S. and world premieres of several compositions. Their program at UMSL will include works by Bach, Beethoven, Joseph Foerster and Alvin Etler.

Since the last issue of the Current, UMSL has moved a step closer to the acquisition of the Marillac campus. Governor Christopher Bond has announced that he has never actually opposed the purchase of Marillac for UMSL, but that he feels the state cannot presently afford the money needed for the purchase. This announcement is a softening of the Governor’s earlier statements, and is a sign that the purchasing of Marillac may be near.

Last year the state legislature passed a bill calling for the purchase of Marillac. That bill was vetoed by Bond on the grounds that the purchase of the campus had not been approved by the Coordinating Board of Higher Education. This veto was overturned, and the Marillac campus was purchased.

Bonds next argument has been his concern over land speculation. Bond does not favor the purchase of land without a specific use for it. Arnold B. Grobman, chancellor of UMSL, and University President C. Brice Riechard have shown adequately the need for the Marillac property. At present the UMSL campus, in terms of instructional space, classroom space, and the like is the most crowded of the four University of Missouri campuses.

Bond has attempted to answer this argument by saying that he is not opposed to purchasing buildings to be used as classrooms when there are empty classrooms in other higher education institutions throughout the state. This argument, however, forgets that the existence of UMSL is centered on the urban students who cannot afford to leave the city to become a resident student in an out-state college or university.

Grobman worked very hard to persuade government officials of the need for Marillac, and has proven every one of Bond’s arguments to be false. The chancellor’s actions, his diligent work toward the purchase of Marillac before the beginning of the fall semester of 1976 should be praised.

The Marillac purchase does not lie in classroom space alone, but other considerations should be included. By purchasing Marillac, the cost to the taxpayers would be $35.00 per square foot, while planned construction at Marillac is not purchased would run $50.00 per square foot. Not only is the purchase of Marillac necessary, the acquisition of the buildings and land is economically sensible, and presently available.

On the priority list of UMSL’s expansion goals include a library extension. The Marillac campus possess a modern library. On that same priority list is a business administration building. The two planned buildings would cost $8 million.

Marillac could be purchased for 5 million, and would include seven buildings and 44 acres of land.

Marillac is attractive also for its office facilities and cafeteria. When the old Administration Building comes down many organizations, including the Central Council, will lose their offices. The Marillac purchase could be used to relocate those offices. The university cafeteria would be relieved of its overcrowded conditions when the Marillac cafeteria begins operation.

Marillac, then, could be held as a token for the expansion of UMSL and, considering the cost of construction today, a token for the public taxpayer. Twelve years ago, state officials showed great insight by establishing an urban, commuter campus to serve the St. Louis area. In twelve years, UMSL has grown in size to be the second largest campus in the University of Missouri system with a student body of over 11,500. Since the campus is the most crowded in the system, a Marillac purchase by the state government for use by UMSL, the Current hopes those officials who showed such great insight into establishing UMSL will show the same insight in guaranteeing UMSL’s existence and growth.

UMSL needs Marillac now.

Bitches about box bitch (eventually)

Dear Editor:
During the holidays, my cous­ in Jim visited us for a few days. Jim’s 23. Jim’s from Denver. While he was here we visited the university. I told him we were on a pretty campus we have and I asked him if he’d like to take a look. He said yes and he would also like to check out a book at our library. That is, if you had it. While parking, he mentioned that he likes getting all bundled up on these really cold days.

He said he loves it when it’s so cold. I said that’s weird and the sounds are so crisp. While we were walking through the trees, he said, “what have you done to stop.” I stopped, looking at him, perplexed. Soon we were stepping. Then he said, “Did you hear that?” “Hear what?” I said. Physical leaves leaves you just stepped on, the crunching below your feet, it sounded like two or three hundred little explosions of sound.” “I said “Yes. It sounds like something like when you are eating pop­ corn.” He agreed, adding that the last time he went he thought he was looking at him. He was crunching his popcorn so loudly, I said, “I know what you mean, but it sounds louder to you because the sound is hurrying inside.” He agreed, adding that he knew that, but you still feel that someone can hear you and that it is bothering them. And I said, “It sounds like it is bothering you more worrying about bothering them, than it would ever bother them just listening to a few innocent popcorn crunch.” He didn’t say anything.

As we were approaching the library, he noticed the bitch box in front of UMSL. I told him that it was in front of UMSL. He agreed, adding that he knew that, but you still feel that someone can hear you and that it is bothering them. And I said, “It sounds like it was bothering you more worrying about bothering them, than it would ever bother them just listening to a few innocent popcorn crunch.” He didn’t say anything.

The reason I am writing this letter is in the hope that someone can read it and write another letter, letting the Central Council know that they are not alone in wanting the name of the bitch box changed to something more appropriate, especially considering that it is standing at the foot of the library.

Finds unanswered questions

Dear Editor:
In the last editorial that dealt with Bond’s attitude toward UMSL, I found a few unanswered questions, and that I felt compelled to say something about.

In these times of declining enrollment that affects most of our university campus, I can’t help but wonder the reluctance on the Governor’s part for expansion on UMSL. To say that the taxes from other parts of Missouri are inadequate, I suggest instead of morons Mr. Rolly Riddler should have substituted complete politicians who will join any witch that may come along and get a vote in his district.

I also believe it unfair to compare the expenditures of UMSL as opposed to UMKC. Kansas City boasts a dental and pharmacy school. These programs are more expensive to operate. They also provide a great service to all Missourians.

The issue of Bond not attend­ ing the meeting of Coordinating Board has come up again. But I haven’t seen Mr. Bond appropriating from Missouri to schools out of Missouri or even to his alma mater. I wonder what one can do about this. What Universities did University President Mark Henderson, Chancellor Arnold B. Bond and Mr. Grobman?

Defends That’s Entertainment

Dear Editor:
In the last issue of the Current Mark Henderson did a review of “That’s Entertainment,” a musical revue put on by the Develop­ mental Skills Center. Does Mark Henderson, which is his job, know anything about the work of amateur entertainment? Is he aware that this perfor­ mance was put together in a matter of a little over a month? That there were only three stage hands? That there were no orchestra? That the performance could be closed on the Penney Auditorium stage for the pur­ pose of changing scenery? The performers knocked themselves out to give a performance that would benefit not themselves, but a well deserved program on the UMSL campus.

Mark’s strikes against personal­ ity members of the group by saying that they do not have the foot of the library.

Dear Editor:
I saw the review of a UMSL production “That’s Entertainment” and worried what the critic was thinking when he commented upon the lack of enthusiasm on the part of the cast. Granted that the show had some technical flaws, the cast carried the production with their high spirits. Without this enthusiasm the show would have been tasteless as the critic’s review was. I would also like to know why the author decided to comment on a piano which was not out of tune, instead of on the pianist’s performance, which was a joy.

Ban of illicit breathing is Vatican's newest move

Thomas Taeschler

Most students are aware that the Vatican published on Jan. 15 a sexual code for Roman Catholics. But on the same day, a similar, though less publicized document was also released in Rome. Current investigative reporter Thomas Taeschler, who has penetrated the International papal conspiracy through subterfuge, perseverance, and stealth, gained access to this lesser known document and wrote the following expose:

ROMP Jan. 15 - The Vatican released today a position paper entitled "Declaration on Certain Questions Concerning the Use of the Lungs". The thrust of the paper was a condemnation of "the unbridled socialism, and crumbling permissiveness has reached new heights (or low), and one of the most serious indications of this immorality is the unbridled exhalation of breathing."

The document was warmly received by the international church establishment. Cardinal V. Retenti of Turinigia, West Germany tipped the pre-sailing opinion when he said, "This is a timely proclamation. We just can not have people running around and breathing when and if they choose as if it were some God given right."

And as expected, the Church reiterated its firm disapproval of the homosexual use of air. "Individuals of one sex who allow their lungs together as for a fiery after life," it read.

COMMENTS

"Homosexual breathers who are so because of some innate instinct or pathological constitution judged to be incurable probably have to be treated with understanding (but at a safe distance and sustained with the hope of overcoming their personal difficulties and abnormalities to conform," the report said.

And it was no surprise to followers of the Church to see the masturbatory use of air (self-pollution) was condemned as "an intrinsically and seriously perverted act suspected of causing blindness, insanity, and filthy palms."

The recent surge in illegal breathing was said to be "certainly linked with humanity's weakness following original sin, but also with the loss of a sense of God, the corruption of morals engendered by commercial vice, unrestrained licentiousness and, declining church contributions, and the neglect of modesty, which is the guardian of chastity."

Pope Paul is accused of ordering the document drafted to shock International Catholicism out of its grief following the death last fall of revered church figure and current candidate for beatification, Francisco Franco, El Caudillo (St. Sp. "the whore").

Cardinal John J. Barbery spoke for the St. Louis diocese by saying, "If there was ever the slightest shred of doubt that the Catholic Church was not relevant to a sophisticated, educ

Urges support in Marillac issue

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my strong support, and to solicit your support, for my educational institution, the University of Missouri - St. Louis purchase Marillac College to provide room for much-needed expansion.

As a student at UMSL now, and three more children who will be enrolled in the near future, we have here a very deep personal interest in the establishment and development of the university.

But personal interest aside, I think we should be concerned that when a university grows from nothing to more than 12,000 students in a little over ten years, as UMSL has, it is failing to live up to a great public need. And if the university is to continue to fulfill that need, it must have room to expand, because it is operating at capacity.

I understand that the Governor opposes the appropriation of state funds for Marillac College, because there are empty classrooms in other state institutions outside. I think he is absolutely right. But I recognize higher education to the students, who are instead of forcing them to take their courses, is to provide them with the job training they need. For that reason, I support the Governor's position on Marillac.

I hope, therefore, that you will do all in your power to secure a favorable action on this appropriation.

Thank you for your consideration of these views.

Questions term 'good old days'

Dear Editor:

Riding to work this morning on the Southampton Bi-State bus my seatmate commented, "The good old days cost far too much." I would really like to go back to the good old days when so many items that we take for granted today had to wait their turn to be noticed. For example, a little more than a few decades ago, grocery and meat market. Of course, thank goodness, meat market, was the old-fashioned way of having the butcher cut to order the kind we wanted. And with certain words for there are remaining a number of small country stores, and meat markets where meat is not pre-packaged even though the grocer- man works as a grocery clerk other than in the 1920's with no help but recall how the customers would patiently wait their turn with their market baskets while I would fill their order. There was coffee to be weighed out and ground, sugar, rice, beans, dried fruit, cookies, butter, sauerkraut, etc. just to mention a few items. Also bananas to be cut off of a huge bunch, wherever I picked them because sometimes there were big spiders even small snakes in these banana stalks. Then there was the deal of mixed vegetables, spinach, turnips, cabbage, peas, carrots, etc. Of course, the clerk got to know the customers off of the counter shelves and at prices in those days it took quick thinking to get five dollars worth of groceries to- gether. What really slowed things down was a customer wanted a live chicken out of the coop and the clerk, no very selective of a plump one, would then ask to have its head cut off. Fortunately for the store at which I worked would not go so far as to also pluck the chicken. All of this makes me wonder if we really want the good old days back?

Free HP-21 Applications Book
See your dealer for details.
Offer void where prohibited by law regulation, or otherwise. Available only with the purchase of a new HP-21 before March 15, 1976.

The second generation is here.

One of our second generation calculators can save you countless hours and errors en route to your diploma and on the job thereafter. Each offers problem-solving technology you probably won't find on competitive calculators.

New low price.
HP-21 Scientific,
$100.00.

The HP-21 makes short work of the technical calculations even so-called "non-technical" courses require today. It performs most arithmetic, log and trig calculations automatically. It is also the only calculator at its price that offers full display formatting; you can choose between fixed decimal and scientific notation.

If you need a calculator that does more than simple arithmetic, this is it—especially at its new low price.

New.
HP-22 Business Management,
$165.00.

The HP-22 takes the starch out of the calculations you face in business courses today, in management tomorrow. You can solve most time-value-of-money problems in seconds. You can breeze through business math calculations (discounts, markups, etc.). And, most important, you can use the HP-22's statistical functions to build existing data into more reliable forecasts. No other pocket calculator at any price offers you a comparable combination of financial, math and stat capabilities.

New.
HP-25 Scientific Programmable,
$195.00.

Our HP-25 does everything our HP-21 can do—and much, much more. It's programmable, which means it can solve automatically the endless repetitive problems every science and engineering student faces. With an HP-25, you enter the keystrokes necessary to solve a repetitive problem only once. Thereafter, you just enter the variables and press the Run/Stop key for an almost instant answer displayed to 10 digits. You gain time, precision, flexibility.

All three offer you HP's efficient RPN logic system that cuts keystrokes and scratch pads. All three are easy to use (e.g., the HP-25 requires no prior programming experience). And all three are almost certain on display at your bookstore.

For example Title IX of a new federal law prohibits sexual discrimination in education and athletics, and there has been quite a lot of legal action as a result. Title IX other member of the firm who teaches at UMSL, thinks that the prospect to allow lawyers to advertise should be treated with caution. "Like Lisa," she says, "I've handled many types of cases, such as business matters, divorces, adoptions, setting up a trust fund, or incorporating a business or an individual. One of my more interesting cases was an attempt by an adopted child to find his natural parents." Sedey received a B.A. in Social Sciences from Webster College before she entered law school. She was advised at SLU by a Darforth Foundation Fellowship. She is not ambigous about her decision to enter law school. "I want to be a lawyer since I was 12 years old," she says emphatically. "After I graduated from Webster I was still a generalist with few salable skills. It is personally satisfying and I can help the women's movement as a lawyer."

It's personally satisfying and I can help the women's movement as a lawyer.

The firm plans to add a fourth woman in a few months, as soon as she passes the bar examinations. But if further expansion is necessary, they would not be adverse to hiring a man. "The legal question of the 1970's," Sedey says, "is how will the legal profession expand its services to allow middle and lower class people to afford them, and will the canons of ethics of the ABA work against expansion. But there has been progress on the issue. Three years ago the Justice Department voided the practice of having minimum fee rates as a monopolistic practice. In many ways," Sedey continues, "the legal profession is a 19th century institution. It has made little use of modern technology such as computers, in aiding case research and investigation.

A recent advancement, the creation of the position of legal assistant, has been needed for decades. Such a person is more valued than a legal clerk but is not a lawyer. We intend to hire such people in this office," Sedey thinks that business rules concerning pregnancy may be changed dramatically by court decisions in the 1970's, as pregnancy is reclassified as a temporary disability. Then many law suits and huge changes in sick leave practices will follow. "One reason I like being a lawyer," she concluded, "is that you know if you won or lost a case. At Webster I worked on highly theoretical urban affairs studies, and no one knew if the final draft was right, wrong, or thrown away. But this is a job where successes and failures are quickly realized, and it keeps you alert."

WE ARE NOT A FEMINIST LAW FIRM PER SE, BUT FEMINISTS AND WOMEN IN DISTRESS SEEK US OUT INSTEAD OF A MALE FIRM."

I decided to become a lawyer because I didn't want to be stuck in a useless job I didn't enjoy.

Students gain experience, skills and credit in public affairs program

This semester 15 UMSL students are involved in the Public Affairs Internship Program. Through this program juniors, seniors or graduate students majoring in political science and other social sciences assist public agencies in performing their tasks.

One of the goals of the program is to strengthen university—community linkages. Joan Saunders, Intern Coordinator, said, “Since we are an urban university we're concerned with relations with municipalities, counties and community affairs.”

From the students' point of view serving an internship should help develop an understanding of politics, policy making, policy implementation, and public service. It also provides the student with the opportunity for further development of analytic skills.

While breaking up the monopoly of a school the internships also give students a chance to reassess their career choices and gain work experience in the area they plan to go into.

Jeff Newport, a junior who is currently working on an internship with the Attorney General, John Danforth, said, "I was getting burnt out on sitting in class taking notes and exams and this seemed like a real alternative. It provided an opportunity for change and I'm also getting my feet wet in the legal field.

Craig McLelly, a junior who plans to go into public administration and is working with the city administrator of Bridgeport through an internship, said, "I was going through a tough patch hating everything; I didn't have any patience in anything. But I decided to give it a try. I figured it would be a worthwhile experience to help me get a job. So far, my conception is that it's well worth it. It's for anyone who wants to get in."

The program, just ending its third year has been successful. Saunders said, "I'm safe in saying that officials in the municipalities valued the use of interns. We always have more interns than students tell them. The program allows municipalities to do things that they wouldn't otherwise, it gives them an added dimension."

Many students who have participated in the program in the past have acquired jobs from their internships.

Saunders said, "Although it isn't the point of the program, a lot of times internships turn into jobs."

Students can receive up to six hours (depending on how much time one plans to spend on the internship) work 10 hours a week at the agency and get three hours of credit.

Before the program was set up several students worked with agencies through faculty members. Dean Virgil Sapp, of the Extension Division, funded a graduate student position to assist Professor John Collins. Extension Specialist in Political Science. The intern program involves generating placements, interviewing and screening applicants, and matching students and agencies.

In September of 1975 funding of the position of intern coordinator was assumed by the College of Arts and Sciences and the Political Science Department.

The program has placed students in a wide variety of agencies, municipalities and other organizations.

Saunders said, "Anyone who knows what they are interested in should ask me about it. Most agencies are happy to have them. We have a flexible program with placements in the community, but not in private agencies. We can initiate almost anything."

Newport plans to go on to law school and is currently working with the Consumer Division of the Attorney General's Office.

Jeff said, "I'm mainly doing investigative work for lawyers. I do a lot of the leg work; if they want to try something they send me out to try it."

"If they can find a pattern they can use. My job is to look for a pattern. For example, if a store advertises something and you go it and it's not there. ... We have to keep looking for a pattern."

McKell is looking into the facts the City of Bridgeport has in its employees. He said, "I'm supposed to look into other cities' programs and compare theirs with Bridgeport's to see if there's any way to change or improve the present program. I'm trying to present a clear picture to the administrator on the employee retirement benefit program."

During a semester one or two workshops are held to provide an opportunity for students, agency supervisors and faculty supervisors a chance to discuss general interests and comment on the program.

On being in three places at one time

Terry Mahoney

Just where does UMSL stand with regards to the surrounding community? We've come up with some evidence that seems to suggest 'the answer is "Not well at all!"'

A while back somebody asked what municipality UMSL was in. We made some calls.

Our first reaction was to call the Center of Community and Metropolitan Studies over at the SCRIE building. The center was established back in 1965 to compile, among other things, a reference file on the local governments, including their ordinances, maps, budgets and annual reports.

We spoke to four people there. None of them gave an answer either. One of them, though, said that there was a man on the Administration of Justice staff who knew all about that sort of thing.

While we never did get around to calling AO, we did place some more calls that afternoon, mostly to the suggestion of a fellow staff member. The first was to the St. Louis County Municipal League. They checked over their maps and said that UMSL — as it so near as they could figure — was in the Village of Bellerive. They suggested we could find out exactly what that meant in reference to the jurisdiction and the like by placing a call to the State Attorney General's office.

The Attorney General seemed quite busy and time for us, so we settled for the County Prosecuting Attorney's office. The secretary that answered said that this was a job for the County Police.

Honestly we don't remember if the person we talked to gave us her name or not. At this point we didn't know yet that we were researching a story; we were just sitting there in the office wondering where it was we were really calling from. After fifteen years in the same location somebody had to know where we were.

Once we did think there was a story we still didn't get too many names. Most didn't offer them, and those we did get just weighed us down, probably just as soon as we didn't print them.

We dialed the number listed for "Police — St. Louis County, Superintendent's Office — general information."

But apparently that's not who we got. The man that answered wanted to know if it was an emergency. We were awkwardly anxious to learn the answer to our question but we had to say no.

So we got transferred to "Police — St. Louis County, Superintendent's Office — general information." They transferred us too. This time we were talking with "community relations."

There we talked to a policeman who had been assigned to an area including this campus. He said that the whole campus was a part of unincorporated St. Louis County.

We still had Bellerive on our minds because of the Municipal League so we decided to try for some kind of verification. We dialed the Recorder of Deeds Office, which is a division of the County Department of Revenue. The secretary who answered at their general information number said we should call County Planning or else the Tax Office because, "well, they're always involved."

We couldn't locate the County Planning number and the listing for the Tax Office must have been right next to it. So we tried Plat Information (plats are lots of varying sizes). The woman there had a very direct answer, "I don't know."

But she did say she would call Mapping and Coding for us. She couldn't get through. She gave us a number. We didn't get through either.

So next the Recorder of Deeds office was tried. They guessed that UMSL was in Town of Normandy, but they were willing to check to make sure. Nancy Minter, the secretary to the recorder was the person we talked to.

She told us we would look up the records listed under the address 8001 Natural Bridge.

But there was a listing under the University of Missouri Catara. She explained that seven parcels of land were on file, some in Bellerive, some in Normandy, one in Bel-Nor, and others unincorporated.

We still hadn't talked to Mapping and Coding though, so we called back after thanking Ms. Minter. The number we had been given got us in contact with a draftsman. He didn't know either.

The suggestion about calling County Planning still had us intrigued. Finally a listing was found, under St. Louis — County of, Planning, — Department of (where else?)

It turned out that they were about as intrigued by us as we were by them. "Oh wow!" the secretary said, "Are you doing a story on it?" We told her honestly we didn't know (and we didn't). She excused herself and returned a few minutes later with an answer. UMSL is in Normandy. The whole thing.

"Just for our records" we asked if she had gotten that answer from her own office. It was from one of the planners in back. He didn't look at a map or anything.

Next we called the Criminal Court Division. The man there said we should try the Highway Engineer or else the County Clerk. Somehow we never got referred to the same office twice.

The Highway Engineer said that part of the campus was unincorporated, part of it was leading in were state property, and a section of the campus was in the jurisdiction of Hollywood Park (that's part of Normandy).

The Bel-Nor police were the next source tried. They told us that none of the campus was in Bel-Nor. We suppose Casey House just doesn't count.

The Town of Normandy's police were a bit more possessive. They told us that part of the campus was within their jurisdiction but it didn't really mean anything. The last parking lot erected (the "East Jesus") and the new General Services Buildings were included in this area.

The campus police wanted to meet us in person. "We don't give no information like that over the phone," was their reply.

When we did meet, they told us we were entirely unincorporated.

Girls like it.

Adams photos capture beauty of American West

Jeanne Vogel

Though the end of February, Gallery 210 is exhibiting a collection of one of the most successful freelance nature photographers, Ansel Adams. When a photographer opens the shutter exposing the film to light, not only is an image imprinted on a sheet of celluloid, but he or she also records an intricate portion of him or her self. When Adams opens the shutter on his bulky 8X10 view camera, his talent for capturing the majesty of the environment is fully expressed. Each photograph is distinctly his — a phenomenon in the world of photography. Adams began his career as a small boy utilizing an old Kodak Brownie, photographing the Yosemite Valley. His love for the American West has never ceased. Gallery 210 has collected a most impressive arrangement of Adams' work ranging from gentle mountain wild flowers to violent waterfalls and rushing streams. Adams, who works exclusively in black and white, is one of the few who is able to produce landscapes equal to those done in color. Contrast is the key to his work.

Viewing Adams' work, contrast dwells in extremes and the accents of texture draws one's immediate attention. A master of utilizing the unique texture of objects, composition and contrast are his main tools. Nothing is too small and delicate or too large and majestic for him to capture with unequalled ease. Magnificent mountain chains, still life of eggs, the nothingness of sand dunes distinguishable only by the excellent use of light and aided by an expert hand in the darkroom, towering cliffs and quiet flowers, the beauty of nature — this is the style of Ansel Adams. Adams, who has created a limitless art from a narrow field of personal interest, fascinates and encourages every amateur photographer who has ever ventured into the woods with an intent to capture its beauty.

Soloists to perform 'Porgy and Bess' excerpts

Under the direction of James Frazier, the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra will present a special concert at Powell Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, February 15, at 3:00.

Baritone William Warfield and soprano Renice Frison will be soloists in excerpts from Gershwin's 'Porgy and Bess;' William Grant Still's 'Saljdi Ballet' and Beethoven's 'Symphony No. 8' will complete the program. 'Saljdi Ballet' will be performed by the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra for the first time. Choral groups featured in the work will be the Legend Singers, directed by Kenneth Bills; the Alton Koraliers, directed by Earle McGill; and the Central High School Choir, directed by Walter Young. The Legend Singers and the Summer High School Choir, directed by Ora B. Taylor, will also perform the 'Porgy and Bess' excerpts. Frazier was the youngest native-born American conductor to be invited to the Soviet Union when in 1971, he conducted the orchestras of Philadelphia, Detroit, Indianapolis, Los Angeles, the New Philharmonia Orchestra in England, the Danish State Symphony in Copenhagen, the La Scala Opera in Italy. This is his first appearance with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.
Sylvia Plath: Presented with Sad Eyes, Distinct Brooch

Sylvia Plath, the author of "The Bell Jar" and other notable works, was known for her tumultuous life and literary contributions. This section of the document appears to be a tribute or remembrance of her work and influence. It mentions her work being presented in various locations and the impact of her poetry on readers.

"Jongleurs Reuniting"
The Jongleurs, the UMSL based comedy improvisational troupe, is in the process of reforming, according to Dan Stratman. The organizational meeting is planned for February 11. All those interested are welcome to attend at 8:00 pm, in room 404 Benton Hall.
Onuska to star in uncut version of ‘Hamlet’

After a six year absence, John T. Onuska, associate professor of English, returns to the UMSL stage in his production of an uncut version of ‘Hamlet.’

Onuska’s stage reading of ‘Hamlet’ is his first production since “An Evening with Shakespeare’s Lovers” which ran in March of 1970.

“Ever since then I have been asked from time to time when I intended to take on another project of this kind. My answer has always been that I would do so when the university had made a clear commitment to support such activities.”

“With the appointment of Denny Bettisworth as director of theatre and Jim Fey as technical director and the remodeling of Benton 105 for theatrical purposes, I decided that the time had come to keep my promise,” Onuska said.

So Onuska’s ‘Hamlet’ was born. The uncut reading of ‘Hamlet’ is a very rare theatrical event, a four hour plus version with one extended intermission of approximately forty-five minutes during which light refreshments and appropriate entertainment will be provided.

The production will be a highly staged reading with lighting, music and sound effects, and will run for two performances, Saturday, February 7 at 7 p.m. and again on Sunday, February 8 at 4 p.m.

All tickets are on sale at the information desk, and are priced at $1.00.

“For anyone who is apprehensive about a ‘reading,’ let me assure you that this will not be another group of actors sitting about on stools. I think you will be quite surprised how ‘theatrical’ a staged dramatic reading can be. One thing is certain: those who attend will be witnessing a rather rare event. Hopefully you will find the quality of the performances as noteworthy as its length,” Onuska said.

The production of ‘Hamlet’ is being performed by Onuska’s Renaissance Theatre Workshop. The Renaissance Theatre Workshop is a dedicated corps of UMSL students, faculty, staff and alumni plus interested members of the community. Only the students are taking the workshop for academic credit.

All 3776 lines of the long 1604 Quarto version will be duly recited by the actors at the two performances as contrasted with the less than 2000 lines retained in the average production of ‘Hamlet.’

Adaptation, timing make ‘Cuckoo’s Nest’ a success

Mike Dehn

The movie version of Ken Kesey’s brilliant 1962’s novel, “One Flew Over The Cuckoo’s Nest” will certainly be one of the best movies of the season. Having been successfully adapted for screen by the director Milos Forman and writers Bo Goldman and Lawrence Hauben, the movie moves with a pace and timing that is rare in screen adaptations of books. The movie centers around the character of R.F. McMurphy, played by Jack Nicholson, decides that he wants to plead insanity and go to a mental hospital, instead of going to work farm or penal institution for his crime. It is hard to tell whether he has a positive effect on the patients that he comes in contact with at the institution, or if he frustrates the patients even more than they already are. But, in the end all seem to suffer for his actions, including him. The movie follows the book’s intent faithfully, while only changing a few things, such as the dialogue of the Chief, and the trip with the boat. The problem of one man facing the establishment and trying to cheat it seems to be the topic of both the book and the movie. But Forman wisely chose to eliminate a few of the specific references to the sixties thereby making the adaptation more universally oriented.

While McMurphy outwardly shows a real compassion for the patients in the ward with him, such as the shy Billy Bibbit, played well by Brad Dourif and the Indian Will Sampson, he is ultimately using them for his own goal, to get out. Nicholson does an excellent job of portraying the character of McMurphy. The forceful, ram-bunctious, wild, character is done with both painful reality and humor.

Head nurse Ratched, the immediate villain of the story is convincingly played by Louise Fletcher. Her intention to do good, out of the Christian “charity” makes the situation worse. It is hard for her to see that charity does not always receive a “thank you” in the end, and that she is not doing all her “good works” for the sake of charity.

This unrelenting story is not just of a man that is fighting the system, but of a man fighting a society, and the society, as usual, wins. However there are a few scenes in which the tension is temporarily side tracked, for instance the basketball scene and the boat in the ocean scene. The strongest aspects of the movie are the excellent acting and the excellent directing. The cast is close, concerned and each member interacts with the rest in a manner that is not often found in a movie.

The direction is imaginative, and shows a great insight into not only the problems of a man who does not fit into society, but into the ideas of developing a theme in a screen play.

The conclusion, one that not everyone will agree with or that may not seem appropriate, is justified when it is realized that McMurphy has not only paid his price for his war against society, but has achieved his original goal, and helped the Indian regain his self awareness. “One Flew Over The Cuckoo’s Nest” is now showing at the Brentwood theatre.

Donald Bogle, former staff writer for Ebony magazine, and story editor for Otto Preminger, is black, young, and a man with an infectious enthusiasm for the movies. A graduate of Lincoln University, he has also studied at Indiana University, Harvard, and Columbia. His book, Toms, Coons, Mulattoes, Mammies and Bucks, won the Martin Library Association Award for the best film book of the year in 1973. “An outstandingly researched, handsomely illustrated and well-written treatise on the treatment of blacks in American films. Certainly it rates as one of the best volumes on that sparsely covered field and should be on all film reference shelves.” (Variety)
Cagers slide on road

Dave Beldwell

Sire, orchestrated by sophomore DeCarlo Weber, proved to be too much for the UMSL Rivermen last night as they lost to Indiana State-Terre Haute 78-62.

The loss dropped the Rivermen record to 9-8 for the season.

"His arms were so long he could almost scratch his knees standing up," said Rivermen head basketball coach Chuck Smith, describing Weber. Weber was more than impressive defensively as he blocked 11 shots and grabbed 19 rebounds for the Sycamores of Indiana State. Webster is currently ranked sixth in NCAA Division I rebounding.

"We've never run into someone that awesome," Smith commented after the game. "He's the best defensive center we've seen.

Webster was not the only big man that the Sycamores had on their squad. The team's average height is about 6'8".

The Sycamores, as well as being big, were also extremely physical.

"Our previous opponents were not nearly as physical as Indiana State was," said Smith. "They weren't that much better than us, it's just that they were much bigger and more physical."

UMSL was once again plagued with foul trouble, a problem which has haunted the Rivermen all season. Roland Nash, Jim Goeaasing and Pat Green, the front line of the Rivermen all had four fouls on them when the final buzzer sounded. This made it very difficult for them to play to their full potential. With the lack of depth Smith has on his bench it also makes it hard to substitute for those big men.

UMSL now has just eight games remaining in the season, three of which will be out of town.

"Playing at home will help," said Smith. His club has won all of its contests except one at the Multi-Purpose Building.

The Rivermen's home contest is February 10 against Westminister.

Coach Smith is rather dissatisfied with his team's 9-8 record.

"If things don't change we might have to chance our lineup."

Last night the Rivermen took on cross-river rivals SIU-Edwardsville here at UMSL. The results of that contest were not available for this issue.

On Saturday the Rivermen will travel to Evansville Indians to take on Indiana State-Evansville a team that UMSL beat earlier here at UMSL. The Rivermen's next home contest is February 10 against Westminster.

The UMSL Riverwomen remained at the .500 per cent mark this past weekend, losing to Missouri State University 54-48 on Jan. 31 and defeating the University of Missouri-Columbia on Jan. 30, 53-51. Their record now stands at 13-13.

After a 21-21 halftime score, UMSL held a slim lead over Southwest. With six minutes left in the game Southwest, holding UMSL scoreless for almost four minutes, reeled off nine straight points to gain a 49-44 lead. UMSL scored only four points in the final nine minutes.

The poor shooting of UMSL, hitting only one out of every four shots from the floor, combined with the absence of starter, Carmen Forest, led to the Riverwomen defeat. The team suffered considerably on the boards without their top rebounder.

Forest, Forest was in Chicago, Illinois training for the U.S. Olympic handball team.

High scorers for SWMU were Cindy Wilson with 10 points and Jeanie French with 14. Terry Becker and Tommie Weber were high scorers for UMSL with 19 and 13.

Friday's game against UMC came to a close with a different ending. Terry Becker fired in 32 points for the Riverwomen to gain the victory. Becker was 14 for 23 from the field and scored 16 of UMSL's 19 first half points.

UMSL trailed 26-19 at halftime and fell behind as many as eight in the second half. After a comeback which resulted in a 49-42 UMSL lead, UMC rallied to tie the score at 53 all. Helen McCarthy hit two free throws with only 15 seconds left to give UMSL its final advantage.

Future looks bright as tankers seek records

A long term losing streak on the part of the UMSL Swimming team is about to end Friday Feb. 6: according to head coach Monte Strub and his aquanauts. With a return to competition after a month of workouts, fuller development of the small, freshman dominated squad, and the addition of four more swimmers, the tankers feel ready for a victory against Westminster College.

The strokes last met Westminster on Dec. 5, where they were edged out 61-55. "We've more experienced now," stated Strub, "and I know Westminster's weaknesses. This meet could be won just by placing some swimmers in different events."

At least two more school records are hoped to be set this Friday. Sophomore Tim Moore has already set marks in the 200, 500 and 1000 yard freestyle events, all three of which were formerly held by Strub. Bill Wilson, in the 200 yard backstroke, and the 400 yard medley relay teams of Conrad Philipp, Mike Venatta, Wilson and Moore, are both trying to better the existing times of 2:28.5 and 3:35.1 respectively.

While the swimmers have had a certain amount of talent since early season, they are now getting what they must have to win meets—depth. Chuck McDonnell and Jim James have returned to the team. Freshman Ted Silverberg, along with Philipp, will handle the butterfly, and Sam Schrapp will lend help to Vincent Burke in the breaststroke races.

Another important meet will be held in home waters Feb. 11 against St. Louis University at 4 pm. SUU previously defeated the Rivermen 57-55. "Largely as a result of the lack of manpower, which we are finally beginning to acquire," said Strub.

The swimmers hosted their first meet in home waters last Saturday in a tri-meet with Washington University and Central Missouri State, losing 68-35 and 83-27 respectively.

UMSL meets the Westminster Squad on 2 p.m. Feb. 6 in the Multi-Purpose Building.

minimal hassle.

"Before construction we were able to play three full-court games on the gym floor. Now, because of the work being done, we are forced to make a change." The games could either keep the full court set-up playing one game on the main floor and two in the balcony or else go the half-court games; all would be played on whatever half of the court is not being worked on.

Veltin gave his personal opinion on the two alternatives. "I don't like the first option for two reasons. One, the balconies are very slick and players slide quite easily. Secondly, there's always the possibility of someone going over the side."

Veltin said that he would take the option of a vote by the team captains and that no decisions would be made until he has heard from all the squads.

Wolfgang of Sig Pi beat TKE 53-41.

In Evening play, Con Alma snuck by the B-School Bombers 50-44. Unnamed As Yet, in a lower scoring contest, got by Gibbs Free Energy 29-22. Papal Bull picked up a freebie on a forfeit win over St. Gabes.

The real thriller of the day, however, was hosted by teh Faculty/Staff and Pi Kappa Alpha. Playing quadruple overtime the Faculty/Staff finally turned the game 68-63. Never before has an intramural game gone even three overtimes.

Hoc soc will not begin its games until Feb. 11 because of a shortage of space and time. This season however, hoc soc will consist of two ten minute halves instead of the usual 15 minute halves. Also, the teams will compete in round robin play. This change will allow the teams to play more games than before.

Matmen cut schedule

The wrestling team participated in a seven team tournament at Millikin Friday and Saturday Jan. 30 and 31. "Victory-wise we didn't do very well," said head coach Mike Glisson. "As far as wrestling we did pretty good."

The Riviermen cancelled the last three dual meets because of lack of interest, according to Glisson. "It's a little much to travel two or three hundred miles for five matches. We talked it over with the Athletic Committee."

There are currently five wrestlers on the team.

UML will participate in a quad meet with Washington University, Southeast Missouri State and UMK at Rolla Saturday Feb. 7. They will also participate in teh Washington U. Tournament Friday and Saturday Feb. 20 and 21.

two UML's players were called on fouls. UMC had four shots to try and tie the score. Fortunately, for the Riverwomen, they missed all four, leaving UML in the lead by two.

Taking honors for UML was Terry Becker with 32 points and 12 rebounds. Nancy Ritter was high scorer for UMC with 18. and Suzanne Alt had 19 rebounds. UML's last game was played on Tuesday, Feb. 3 against Missouri Southern. Results of the game were not available when the Current went to press.

The UML Rivierwomen will take on Southeast Missouri State University on Friday. Feb. 6 at the UML field house. Game time is 7:30 pm.
