Library hours extension sought

Lacey Burnett

After a few weeks of experience with the new hours we will be reviewing them. We realize that we are hitting the evening college students the hardest.

Library Director Ronald Knuth, September 1981.

It's the evening college students that are getting thumped-off.

Political Science Academy President Tony Calandro.

When school opened for the Fall 1981 semester, the library began closing its doors earlier.

The trickle down from Governor Christopher S. Bond's 10 percent statewide budget reductions in June resulted in a reduction in funding for the libraries causing Knuth to cut back the library hours.

The Political Science Academy, in conjunction with the Evening College Council, is petitioning to have the library open until 11 p.m. Monday through Thursday. The library currently closes at 9:30 p.m. on those days.

"For a lot of evening college students this is the only place to study," Calandro said. "Many evening students are married and have families and just need someplace quiet to go." Calandro said that his main interest in reopening the library is to provide a place for students to study. He said that it is not necessary for the library to provide services after 9:30 p.m., just to be open. He added that a guard at the door and a person at the circulation desk would probably be sufficient.

The petitioning groups started gathering signatures Monday evening and will continue collecting them until early next week. Calandro said the organizations are collecting signatures only during the evenings because they feel the extra students have been most affected by the cutbacks.

Tonight they will be gathering signatures in Clark Hall, Lucas Hall and the Social Sciences Building. Next Monday they will be gathering signatures in Stadler Hall, and on the Marillac Campus.

Calandro said that the groups have submitted petition forms to county clerks at the beginning of the hour, and then picked them up after class is over. They have been canvassing the cafeteria and tried to collect signatures in the library, but were told to leave.

Calandro said that they have finished collecting signatures, they will submit the list to vice-chancellor for Administration Services Arthur C. MacKenzie. He said that he hopes the petitioning will persuade MacKenzie to allow the library enough funds to maintain later hours.

The petition states: "We, the Evening College Students, ask Dr. Krash, Chancellor Grobman, and all parties concerned, to reconsider the present library hours so that the hours may be more equitable for 24 percent of the student body."

Calandro said that about 800 signatures were gathered last Monday. The groups have not set a goal for total signatures.

Four professors trade phones for expenses

Lacey Burnett

What do David C. Carkeet, John Glenn, Lauren Lepow and Eugene Murray all have in common? Perhaps that is an unfair question, a question to which the answer may only be known by English major, work experience or area of interest. A common denominator is that the four are English professors at UMSL. But there is something more that these four professors have in common—they have volunteered to relinquish their office phones so that they could have additional money for instructional purposes.

The professors had their phones removed in October after English Department Chairperson Charles H. Larson distributed a memo asking individuals willing to give up their phones in return for extra money for instruction. Professors who agreed to have their phones taken out were allotted about an extra $110 for expenses. The cost of each phone is $18 per month.

"Our situation is similar to the situation in the speech department," Larson said. "Our expenses budget is disastrously low and the phones are extremely expensive."

Earlier this semester, 12 of the 17 phones in the English department were removed to meet the department's expenses and equipment budget. In addition to the four professors' phones in the English department, two phones have been removed from offices that currently are not occupied.

Phone calls to the telephone professors are now handled by the central office in the English department. A secretary takes a message from the caller and then leaves the message for the professor. The professor then returns the call, using a central office phone.

"There have been no problems that I know of," Murray said. "The way things are make it possible for students to contact us." Both Carkeet and Lepow agreed that they have not had trouble with the student communications.

SWAP finds jobs for students

Deborah Suchart

The Student Work Assignment Program (SWAP) is a job-locator and placement service for students currently enrolled, or between sessions, at the University of Missouri-St. Louis. The SWAP program office is in 209 Woods Hall and is open Monday through Friday from 8am-5pm.

Robert A. Powell, Coordinator of Student Job Development, heads the program.

The program is set up to place students in jobs based on either academic major, work experience or area of interest. A special effort is made to locate jobs related to students' academic majors.

Once a job comes in, it is recorded in the files and listed according to category. Then it is placed on the bulletin board outside the Financial Aid office, 209 Woods Hall. After a student inquires about a position on the bulletin board, the student is given an application form to complete. An appointment is then set. "We prefer to work on appointments when possible so we can sit down and decide what will best suit the student's needs," Powell said.

Applications are filed according to academic major, then pulled later when appropriate jobs come in. It is important, however, that the students keep in touch and continue to look on the bulletin board.

Powell sees the program as a means of keeping students in school who might otherwise have to drop out. "We see this as a viable program when we consider that grants, loans, and work-study programs are being cut. The SWAP program is probably in line with President Reagan's thinking. I'm not saying that I agree with it, but it is giving some of the responsibility back to the community from which the students come. St. Louis ranks last in the nation as a location for corporate world headquarters, so there is a lot of untapped potential."

'Black Concern' hearings to be held next week

A Chancellor's committee on black concerns on campus will hold open hearings next Wednesday and Thursday in room 211 SCI, the McDonnell Conference Room. The hearings will be conducted on Wednesday from 8:31 am and Thursday from 2-4pm.

Committee chairperson Everett E. Nance said, "The hearings are being held to give faculty, staff, and students an opportunity to voice the concerns of black students on campus." At a later date the committee will survey all of the students on campus to assess the conditions of black students on campus, according to Nance.

The students on the committee are Cecil R. Anderson, Cheryl D. Morgan and Yates W. Sanders. In addition to Nance, who is director of the Midwest Community Education Development Center, the other faculty and staff members on the committee are: Hal P. Akridge, an assistant professor in political science; Harry H. Bash, an assistant professor in sociology; Howard Ben-0ld, director of the Center for Academic Development; Brenda M. Shannon, admissions counselor; Marilyn Sneed, a counselor in Student Affairs, and Glenn White, an assistant professor in Behavioral Studies.

Sheehan will discuss the reasons for the air traffic controller strike, the current conditions of the air transportation system, and the strike's impact on the economy. The talk is being sponsored by the Political Science Academy.

Trachtenberg to lecture on American photographer

Yale University Professor Alan Trachtenberg will lecture on "The Art of Document: Vision and Form in Walker Evans' American Photographs," Nov. 18 at UMSL in the J.C. Penney Auditorium. The lecture, to begin at noon, is part of the Humanities Lecture Series sponsored by the College of Arts and Sciences.

Trachtenberg has authored eight books on American literature and has been affiliated with the American Studies Program at Yale since 1970. He has received an American Council of Learned Societies Fellowship, a National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowship, and he was an exchange lecturer at Lingea University in 1977.

Smith elected president

Wendell L. Smith, dean of Continuing Education-Extension at UMSL, has been elected president of the Adult Education Association (AEA). He will serve as the head of the Washington-based professional organization for 1982. AEA, a national association with 2,800 members, represents adult education at college campuses, libraries, public schools, private trade schools, and military bases. Smith was installed at the organization's annual meeting, held Oct. 26 through Nov. 1 in Las Vegas, Nev.

As dean of Continuing Education-Extension at UMSL, Smith directs all noncredit courses, off-campus and on-campus, for the University. He is responsible for all details regarding courses and contracts. Under his direction, the continuing education program, which has 578 noncredit short courses and seminars, 93 credit courses, and 27 grants, serves 70,000 clients annually.

Smith served in numerous leadership positions in AEA before his election as president, including chairperson of the 1980 National Conference, director of the AEA's Washington Office, member of the Steering and Executive committees. He has received the AEA National Leadership and Meritorious Service Award.

Biology night to be held

Hundreds of St. Louis area life sciences students and their teachers will attend the 10th Annual Biology Honor Student Night at UMSL on Thursday, Nov. 19.

The four-hour program, from 6-10pm, includes biology workshops to be led by UMSL biology department faculty and graduate students. Last year, about 370 students attended the session; approximately the same number is expected this year.

After a brief slide show of the campus, Charles R. Granger, biology department chairperson, will give the orientation. Theresa Thiel, an internship joining UMSL, Damron was the coordinator of the lecture entitled "Industrial Microbiology: A Frontier in Science," from 6:30-7:30pm.

In the media presentation, "True Stories From Dr. Seuss," will be given from 7:30-7:45pm. The presentation uses real life scenes in conjunction with stories by the children's author.

Participants will then be assigned to one of the ten biology action workshops: exploring human physiology, preparing and looking at giant salivary chromosomes, insect collecting, behavior as an adaptation, developing and testing strategies of energy use, and maintaining a responsible lab environment. Economic studies from the supermarket, plant behaviors and responses to a variety of stimuli, ecological and evolutionary questions in field botany, and corn and other genetically engineered species. Participation in each of the two-hour workshops varies; those attending are advised to bring the first five choices and preference will be given to early registrants.

Those who wish to attend may register until Nov. 13. There is no registration fee. Participants fulfilling the program certification about the program can be obtained by calling 553-6236.

Damron named coordinator

Renee Damron has been named senior education coordinator for Continuing Education at UMSL, closing programs at Lindbergh High School and in the St. Charles area.

Damron has a masters degree in secondary education administration, with an emphasis in adult and continuing education. She is also an affiliate with the Cooperative Education Program at St. Louis Community College at Florissant Valley. She also was a special coordinator of program development and research related to adult and continuing education at Florissant Valley.

Board approves BSPA degree

UMSL will offer a new undergraduate political science degree beginning with the Winter, 1982 semester. The Bachelor of Science in Public Administration (BSPA) degree program has recently been approved by the Missouri Coordinating Board for Higher Education.

UMSL is the only university in the St. Louis area to offer the degree. Maryville College had offered the degree, but officials there said the program has been dropped, according to a staff report, to the Missouri Coordinating Board for Higher Education.

The staff report cited the many strengths of the UMSL degree program, but questioned the availability of positions in public administration because of job cutbacks and hiring freezes in government. The report concluded that because of the uncertainties of the job market for this degree, the university should monitor the success of graduates so that prospective students can be advised on enrollment.

BSPA Program Coordinator Andrew D. Glassberg, an UMSL associate professor of political science, said in a letter to local public service officials that the program "has been designed in consultation with personnel offered from the public sector, the private sector, and local levels."

"In times of ardent budget cuts, it becomes increasingly important to insure that public sector personnel are capable of doing the job effectively and efficient performance of their duties, and we hope our new BSPA program will make a contribution to this goal," Glassberg added.

Three new courses have been added to the political science curriculum to fulfill the degree requirements. The three courses are: Political Science 244, Budgeting, Political Science 342, Public Finance, and Political Science 448, Program Evaluation. All three courses will be offered next semester. The political science department suggests that students interested in the degree within a year and a half, because the classes in the next semester will not be offered every semester.

Additional information about the BSPA degree can be obtained by contacting the political science department at 553-5521.

Wednesday last day to drop classes

Next Wednesday, Nov. 18, is the last day to drop a course or withdraw from school. Students cannot receive refunds on tuition for dropping a course after this date, but some of the parking fee can still be re-funded.

Students who withdraw from a class between now and the 18th will either receive an "excluded" grade or a grade of "F." "Excluded" grades are given if the student is passing the course. After the 18th, an excluded grade will be given only in an exceptional instance and only with the approval of the instructor and dean.

Students who stop attending classes without withdrawing officially from the university are issued an "F" or the temporary "Y" grade. A "Y" grade is given when an instructor has no basis for evaluating a student. A "Y" grade can be changed to an "excluded" grade after the student can demonstrate sufficient reason for not having completed the requirements of the course.

If a "F" grade is changed to an "excluded" grade after a two-semester waiting period, it will be changed to an "F." Students can contact their dean's office for additional information about dropping a course.

Dancers to highlight International Week

Next week will be the Third Annual International Week at UMSL. Programs have been scheduled for every day of the week and include belly dancing, folk singing, cultural displays and hot-coal walking. The week is being sponsored by the International Students and the University Programming Board.

Monday—University Center, Belly Dancing and Egyptian Case Dancing, 11:30am-1:30pm.

Tuesday—University Center, Casam Dance Company and African Dances, 11:30am-1:30pm.

Wednesday—Cultural Displays in J.C. Penney, from 10am-2pm and Native Dress.

Thursday—University Center, West Indian Extravaganza, 11:30am-1:30pm.

Friday—University Center, French Canadian Folk Singer and Japanese Musician, 11:30am-1:30pm.

The team receives funding for the tournaments it attends from a combination of funds allocated from student activity fees and from Arts and Sciences. Approximately nine dollars a day is allocated to pay for incidentals such as transportation and food. Anything extra is paid for by the participants.

"It is more important to make people informed on what forensics is," said Jackoway. "Then we can work on the club aspect. It would have been hard to elect officers this year because no one had ever attended a tournament."

The Forensics team will attend a tournament Nov. 20-22 at Bradley University in Peoria, Ill. and another on Dec. 4-6 at Butler University in Indianapolis. In. They will also be hosting a high school speech tournament at UMSL in January.

Letters to the Editor are encouraged from students, faculty and staff, and the UMSL community. All letters must be signed. Names will be withheld upon request. Letters must be received by 4pm Mondays, prior to publication.

Letters should be sent to: Letter to the Editor, 1 Blue Metal Building, or dropped off at the Information Desk in the University Center.

Dear Ms. Bruce:

This is in response to your letter of October 26 regarding parking fees. I want to point out several errors.

1. Persons attending short courses and conferences in the J.C. Penney Building pay parking fees of $3.00 per day for the number of days the course extends.

2. Funds collected from parking fees are used for operation of the parking lots, including the payment of several police officers, and to maintain the parking structures and lots. A contract has been issued to build a walkway from the top of part of the garage structure in the University Center/J.C. Penney Building as well as other improvements to the parking structure.

3. You are eligible to receive a prorated refund on your parking permit by turning it in to the UMSL Police office and applying for a partial refund.

Sincerely,

Jean Colliers,

Vice Chancellor
Administrative Services

Dear Editor:

"I'll be home for Christmas" will not be quite the same this year unless the PATCO strike is quickly ended! Anyone who believes that the striking air traffic controllers are not missed should pay a visit to Lambert-St. Louis International Airport as I recently did. They will discover that there is no business as usual. There is no flight plan. All things do not go as smoothly as before the strike, such as making connecting flights, the baggage arriving at the same time they do, etc.

Speaking of Christmas, how about Presiding Judge Ronald Reagan and PATCO president P. Di considering those words of The Lord's Prayer: "And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors."

Elmer N. Stueart

Dear Editor:

The "controversy" over Wednesday Noon Live began in the Oct. 1st edition of the Current when Patricia Harkins wrote that "it is a commuter campus. UMSL does not need or want entertainment." I pointed out in the Oct. 8th issue of the Current that this statement, in addition to being untrue, was disrespectful to working commuters who desire and enjoy entertainment as much as anyone. I also mentioned that contrary to Harkins' opinion, Ron Edwards does extend an extraordinary job of providing this campus with a quality music program.

In the Oct. 15th issue, Ms. Harkins termed my letter a "scathing personal attack." The portion of my letter that could be seen as "personal" was in fact offered in response to Ms. Harkins' remark that Ron Edwards was "touting his own horn." Nevertheless, because of my letter, Ms. Harkins acknowledged the quality of Wednes­day Noon Live and modified her position to "entertainment on campus should be a low priority," all the while maintaining that I "did nothing to diminish the validity" of her argument.

A letter signed by 46 students in the Oct. 22nd issue of the Current underscored in no uncertain terms that, in receiving only 4% of UMSL's student Activities budget, entertain­ment is, indeed, considered a low priority, especially in relation to the demand for such fare. This letter and the very fact that Wednesday Noon Live is funded (under- funded in light of demand) is further proof against the notion that UMSL does not need or want entertainment. The percent­age of the student populace which actually watches WNL remains a moot point until survey techniques on either side of the question have improved. Judging from the rest of the evidence, however, I would hazard to say that percentage is significant enough to warrant further funding of the program.

Finally, in the last issue of the Current, Monica Lamb throws up her hands at the rhetoric of this entire exchange. While I agree that the multi-authored letter of Oct. 22nd was a bit vitriolic, the signing students had their hearts in the right place. If Ms. Harkins still believes that UMSL does not need or want entertainment, then the "controversy" is in her own mind. WNL is not forced upon students. It is offered in response to a demand and received eagerly. If, however, Ms. Harkins continues with her more moderate point of view that entertainment should be a low priority, then there was no need to start this mess in the first place: the signing students have pointed out that this is indeed the case.

All this considered, Ms. Lamb should blame the excessive rhetoric on the Current for extending the debate beyond printing the first two letters. Had Ms. Harkins not continued to insist on a non-existent point, the students of the Oct. 22nd letter would not have felt compelled to respond as emphatically as they did. Ms. Harkins' original points were overstated to the point where she was dead wrong. I corrected her. It should have ended there.

Sincerely,
Kern Thomas

Response to Nov. 5 letter on photographer and paper's lack of coverage

Dear Editor:

This is in response to a letter from Michael Trent Johnson.

I believe that Mr. Johnson should learn the meaning of the word research. He obviously didn't when he wrote his letter last week.

If he would have looked into this matter, he would have found out that:
1. Ms. Sharon Kubatzky is a very good photographer. However, even the best photographer can make a mistake. I would like to see Mr. Johnson do as good a job as Sharon.
2. Not all stories can be covered in a 16-page paper. Many of the Current's reporters are writing two, three, or more stories an issue. A lot of them have other jobs besides. Sometimes they just can't cover every story. If they started taking requests, somebody would complain about not covering the Frog-Jumping contest held by the Eta Pi fraternity.
3. He obviously is using the incident just to have a pity fit because he thinks he is being discriminated against.

I don't know how many minority writers there are on the Current staff, but I can tell you the Negroid race is not photogenic. I have never made such a statement. You really should acknowledge your source. I did not take the photo of Tim Murphy. That photo was taken by Bill Lyons and should have been credited to him.

You seem to know something about photography. If you do, you'll know that nothing in photography is fail-proof. In this case, mistakes occurred in all three phases: shooting, developing, and printing. Dr. King was standing in front of a black curtain. The lighting in the room was poor and without a flash (which I did not have) the situation was difficult at best. I felt I did the best I could with what I had to work with. The result was a bad picture. If I could have, I would have reshoot the assignment. However, that was impossible.

Whether or not a story ran was not up to me. I shot the assignment I was given.

You seem to be bitter about the fact I placed 3rd in the UMSL Photo Contest. I'm sorry that bothers you but there was definitely nothing 'racist' about my winning photo.

Sincerely,
Sharon Kubatzky

$189.9 million recommended for UM system

The Missouri Coordinating Board for Higher Education has recommended a general operations appropriation of $189.8 million in 1982-83 for the University of Missouri. The amount is $9.7 million dollars less than the university is seeking. Generally, the Governor's request to the General Assembly has coincided with the Board's recommendation.

The university has requested an appropriation of $199.5 million, an increase of $29.3 million over this year's allocation. However, this year's funding totaled only $150 million because of 10 percent statewide budget cuts enacted by Governor Christopher S. Bond in June. The cuts were made to balance the state budget, according to Bond.

More than two-thirds of the requested increase is for inflation adjustment. Of the $79 million, $70 million is earmarked for inflation adjustment, $3 million for compensation improvements, and $6 million for program requirements.

Bond will make his recommendation to the General Assembly after it convenes in January.

Phones—

Murray will be using the extra money to defray some of the expenses for attending a professional convention. "I felt the money could be used in a better way," he said.

Both Carkeet and Lepow will use the money to pay for extra copying they will be doing. Both teach writing courses and make copies of students' papers for workshopping in class. "There had been some discussion about cutting back on workshopping, to work some way other than workshopping," Lepow said. She said that she will continue to workshop students' papers and use the additional money to pay for copying.

Flinn said that she has not had any complaints from students about her not having a phone, but her husband has complained. Flinn said that she gives her home phone number to all her students. Flinn will use the additional money to help pay for a trip to the National Council of Teachers of English, in Boston.

"I feel that that is more important than having a phone," Flinn said.

Freshman awarded army ROTC scholarship

Student on the road to anticipated military career

Terri Ederer

Too good to be true—that pretty well describes a full three-year scholarship, with books, paper, pencils and a $100 per month. That is exactly what Robert Graham just received from Army ROTC.

Graham, an UMSL freshman, was selected on the basis of his scholastic achievement, extracurricular activities and, finally, an interview by a board composed of a cadet military officer and ROTC faculty members. In order to receive the scholarship for the full three years, he must maintain a satisfactory academic standing, take one hour of ROTC in his freshman and sophomore years, and three hours in each of the other two years. He must agree to serve four years in the army after graduation.

Graham is not the first in his family to be involved in the ROTC scholarship program. Two of his older brothers are currently serving as officers in the army as a result of the program.

What next? “Well, I plan to graduate with a major in administration of justice.” Graham said “and then go on to Airborne and Ranger school after that. I plan to make a career out of the Army.”

Graham is the sixth UMSL student to receive the ROTC scholarship. He graduated from Hazelwood West with no ROTC credits.

“It isn’t necessary,” said Director of ROTC Major Robert Christiansen. “You can come in with no military experience at all. What is important is the ability and the desire.”

Graham seems to have plenty of both.

Upon graduation, he has two possibilities. He can begin his army career as a 2nd lieutenant, or continue his studies, if he is eligible, with a fellowship to the school of his choice.

What advice does he have for future scholarship hopefuls? “You have to work for it.” he said. “Take part, lead when you are called upon to lead, and never stop trying until you reach your goal.”

Students sing in harmony under direction of Vantine and Hylton

Shawn Foppe

You are walking down the second floor of the Music Building and hear strains of people singing “Hodie Christus Natus Est.” It is the UMSL Chamber Ensemble and the words are Latin for “Christ is Born Today.” The UMSL Chamber Ensemble is under the direction of John Hylton and Bruce Vantine, music instructors for UMSL.

Hylton teaches sight singing, conducting a lab, and student teachers. He conducts the University Chorus in addition to co-conducting the Ensemble. This is Hylton’s second year at UMSL. He holds a B.S. in Music Education from Gettysburg College, and a M.S. and D.Ed. from Penn State University.

His chorus consists of 80 singers, a tremendous increase from last year’s enrollment of 35. University Chorus is a non-credit course and most of the members are from the community although approximately 15 are from UMSL’s campus.

Besides his interests in music, Hylton enjoys jogging and is interested in Civil War history. He was once employed by the National Park Service in Gettysburg.

This also is Vantine’s second year at UMSL. He teaches music composition, orchestration, advanced choral conducting, applied voice and conducts the University Singers in addition to co-conducting the Chamber Ensemble with Hylton. Vantine holds a B.S. in music from Concordia College, a masters in Music from Michigan State University, and is near completion on his doctoral degree from the University of Illinois.

He conducts the University Singers, a select group of 40, all of whom had to audition to be chosen. The Singers will be going on tour in April for four days in Missouri, Arkansas and Tennessee. They will be performing at universities, schools and churches. They also will record with a top record company in Tennessee.

In addition to his work, Vantine finds time to play golf, racquetball, and write songs—two of which will be performed by the University Singers and the UMSL Chamber Ensemble. The Singers will perform “Dusty Feet,” a secular song by Robert Louis Stevenson’s “A Child’s Garden of Verses.” The Ensemble will perform “Brothers in Eternity Cold,” a song taken from themes in the Bible, Time Magazine, and writings by Archibald MacLeish.

According to Vantine, “The piece dramatically expresses the need for mankind to abandon its present course toward nuclear destruction and to work toward reconciliation and peace among its people.”

These two groups have been asked to perform on Nov 25 for the “Arts and Older Adults” during a special breakfast downtown.

All three groups will perform on Dec. 6 at the Florissant Valley Christian Church and on Dec. 8 in the J.C. Penney Auditorium. They will present a seasonal program of various Christmas, carols and other songs. The highlight of the University Chorus’ presentation will be Vivaldi’s “Gloria.” The highlight of the University Singers and the UMSL Chamber Ensemble will be the premiere of Vantine’s work.

Lazar Gosman night scheduled

Local music lovers will have a chance to share in the reminiscence of a renowned violinist's life in the Soviet Union when UMSL presents "An Evening with Lazar Gosman" on Nov. 23. Gosman, artist-in-residence at UMSL, was assistant concertmaster of the Leningrad Philharmonic before he left Russia with his family in 1977. His program will begin at 8pm in 205 Music Building. Admission is free.

The "Evening" will include some recorded musical excerpts, and video tape passages as well as Gosman's reflections. Gosman was born and reared in Russia and played with the Leningrad Philharmonic for 27 years.

Never content with merely working in a symphony orchestra, Gosman founded the Leningrad Chamber Orchestra in 1962. After his emigration, he started the Soviet Emigre Orchestra in 1978 with the help of flutist David Barg. The orchestra is making an east coast tour.

Gosman's reflections upon musical life in Russia will include comments about his friends, the late composer Dmitri Shostakovich, violinist David Oistrakh, cellist-conductor Mstislav Rostropovich, now director of the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D.C., and the late British composer Benjamin Britten, among others.

In the second year of the tour, "An Evening with Lazar Gosman" has held an evening of musical memorabilia. He wel-

Welcome informal conversation with the audience following his presentation.

In addition to his duties at UMSL—which include being musical director of the Kammersg, UMSL's orchestra-in-residency—Gosman is associate concertmaster of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

Dean of Student Affairs settles in new role

Laura Dyer

Just a few weeks ago, St. Louis became the new home of Lowe S. (Sandy) Maclean as UMSL got a new dean of Student Affairs. Maclean arrived at UMSL Oct. 19.

"I am very, very impressed with UMSL," Maclean said. "It has a strong tradition, strong faculty, excellent leadership and a variety of student organizations functioning very well." His main interest is in student leadership and developing student training programs.

Maclean said he has three basic goals. The first is to provide leaders for St. Louis, the state and the nation in that order." He said he wants to see programs developed that prepare students for their own organizations and government.

He also wants to help students find satisfactory employment related to their educational objectives. Enriching students' academic, social and cultural lives and providing for and increasing their development outside of the classroom are two more of Maclean's goals.

Working on a commuter campus is not a new experience for Maclean. At Eastern Michigan University, where he was dean of Students and associate professor for Student Affairs, he dealt with about 19,000 students, 4,000 of whom lived on campus.

Maclean said he does not see the commuter student as a major problem but realizes that students sometimes view themselves as more of a problem than it really is. He said commuter students simply have different needs.

Maclean is quick to point out that commuter students are not a phenomenon and that there are, in fact, more commuter students overall than residential students.

"It's closer to life. Life is not living in a dorm or a fraternity or sorority house. Commuting students are a parallel to life," Maclean commented. He said it disturbs him that commuter students sometimes see themselves as see themselves as second class and apologize for their status when no apology is necessary. He added that commuting colleges and campuses will continue to grow in the future.

Although he's only been on the job a few weeks, Maclean has become an integral part of the campus, participating member of UMSL's campus and said he enjoys it. "I like the people, the atmosphere and I am sure I'll be pleased to be here," Maclean said.

Maclean considered coming to UMSL because he wanted a position in the inner city where he would be the one in charge. He also said he was familiar with the University of Missouri, having worked at UMSL and having lived with the city of St. Louis. Maclean also preferred to work at a state institution in a large city, because he tends to favor metropolitan politics. The position of dean of Student Affairs at UMSL allowed him to satisfy all three.

The dean of Student Affairs oversees a large number of departments on campus. He is also an ex-officio member of the Student Activities Budget Committee.

Maclean's attended three universities during his college career. He earned his B.A. in 1960 at Michigan State University with a major in guidance and counseling. He obtained his qualifications in 1967 from Indiana University where he did graduate work in educational research and psychology.

Maclean is married and has two sons. His wife is a teacher. His family will also help him fulfill his dream to plan a Jewel in St. Louis after the first semester.

The purpose of the student health service, according to Phyllis Lee, an RN and coordinator of the service, "is to promote positive physical health and is a free service to UMSL students.

The center is located in room 127 in Woods Hall and is open from 8:00am-9:30pm, Monday through Thursday, and 8am-5pm on Friday. The service is one of the few offices on campus that remains open through lunch to facilitate the needs of those who must use their lunch time to visit the office.

In September, the center saw 175 students and faculty and staff members, including work-study students. The center administered 22 allergy shots to students in September. In October, treated many students with virus-related illnesses and some who had possibly been exposed to mononucleosis or hepatitis.

The center offers vision and hearing tests; it also tests students for mono, VD, pregnancy, and hernias. It administers PPD tests, tetanus boosters and removes sutures. Health service personnel also counsel students about contraception and abortion, and refers them to the proper physician, clinic, or health agencies if necessary.

The center is staffed by a consulting doctor, an LPN, and two RNs.

Among the many things the center does is promote positive health and preventive medicine. The center sponsored a hyperension screening earlier this year. As a result of the screening, students who show signs of high blood pressure are working with Lee, watching their diets and having weekly blood pressure check-ups.

In addition to the hyperension screenings, the center holds health fairs in the spring in Mark Twain. The fair offers many varied tests for the students.

The center also offers special services to many classes. At the beginning of each semester, Lee gives TB skin testing to students working in the child development center and to students working in the child development center and she administers tetanus boosters to archeology students before they go on field trips.

The center is alerted to all emergencies cases on campus. If there is an accident, someone from the service is available to assist. If necessary, they can also arrange emergency transportation to a nearby hospital.

Student health insurance is handled through their office also. Students can have their claims filled out there. In addition, policy holders, or any student, can take a physical in their office.

The office also handles all handicapped parking requests.

To the next time you have an ache or pain, stop by the student health service before you pay to see the doctor.

The Ars Nova Trio will present a concert of music ranging from Aaron Copland on trumpet, Robert Souza, on piano, was formed in the fall of 1979. They have previously performed at the St. Louis Conservatory, St. Louis University, Webster University, and Washington University.

For their Nov. 16 concert, the Ars Nova Trio will perform "The Noisy City" by Copland, Concerto by Hertz, "Solidarity for Music" by Washburn, "Paragon Rag" by Scott Joplin, and "A Dingy Slowdown Rag" by Hoffman.

For more information, call UMSL Music Department at 553-5960.
Chopin brought to life by Guralnik's interpretation

Pianist Robert Guralnik will present his interpretation of the life and work of composer Frédéric Chopin at UMSL, Nov. 18.

"Chopin Lives," a program tentatively including 16 of the Polish composer's works for solo piano, will be presented in the J.C. Penney Auditorium at 8pm. Advance tickets are $4.50 for the general public, $3.50 for UMSL faculty and staff, and $2 for UMSL students. Tickets are 50 cents higher for each category at the door.

Guralnik performed in the conventional concert manner for more than a decade until he approached Harold Gaskin, a New York theater director, with the idea of augmenting performances of Chopin's music with a dramatic portrayal of the composer. Since 1974, Guralnik has toured the United States with his one-man show.

Dressed as Chopin might have been during his heyday in Paris (1810-1848), Guralnik gives the impression of being the guest of honor at a Parisian baron's mansion. While playing mazurkas, waltzes, nocturnes, and preludes composed by Chopin, Guralnik speaks as Chopin might have about his music and why he composes, his formative years in Poland, his rivalry with Franz Liszt, and women.

Guralnik believes that musicians have to find new ways to present themselves and their music. He also has developed "Touched: Franz Liszt." The show is sponsored by the University Program Board. Tickets can be purchased in advance at the University Center Information Desk or at Baton Music, 6392 Delmar Blvd. For more information, call 553-5536.

Bellis conducts concert pleasing to large crowd

Daniel C. Flanakin

There was a warm round of applause for Warren Bellis as he walked on stage. And he deserved it. This was an unusually large crowd for a music department concert and the audience knew that when Bellis walked on stage, there was good music in store.

Bellis led the University Concert Band through the pages of an exciting concert last Sunday at the Marillac Education Auditorium. As always, Bellis chose a good program with a lot of variety.

The band opened its program with Giuseppe Verdi's "Overtures to Nabucco," which was transcribed for band by Lucien Callele. There was some nice metallic work by the woodwind section respectfully the oboe player, Linda Weaverfield and the brass section (led by trumpeters Steve Drumell and Kurt Schmidt) showed a lot of control on the long notes of the opening pianissimo section.

The program also included James Hook's "Suite of Band" which was originally written for guitar and was transcribed for band by William A. Schaefer, Frank Erickson's "Richard Rodgers; A Symphonic Portrait," Russell Alexander's "March from Tropic to Tropic," and Jim Cairns' "Collage for Band" (a collection of five different minuets). The band also played David Shire's "Who You're Born Again" (the first five contemporary tunes that Charles Hicks, assistant professor of Music, is arranging for wind groups), and Robert Russell Bennett's "Suite of Old American Dances." The best of these were the Erickson and the Bennett. Erickson is a composer/arranger and, according to Bellis, "He has taken a collection of music from a selection of Richard Rodgers musicals and scored them into a very nice arrangement."

And a very good arrangement it is, indeed. The band itself was powerful when need be, but unequivocally graceful even more often. The band's performance was equal to the combined genius of Rodgers and Erickson. Bennett's "Suite of Old American Dances," which concluded the program, was his first, and probably his best, published work. Bellis said, "Robert Russell Bennett is a name that is not very well-known name, but it is terribly well-behind. He has scored over 300 Broadway shows."

A Bellis band is always a well-rehearsed group, and this group is no exception. This fact really stood out in the Bennett piece, especially the "Cage Walk" movement. The intricate rhythms, the delicate phrasings, and the extreme dynamics were superb.

Throughout the evening, the band's instrumentation was good and the balance was fairly good, although the large number of trumpets and trombones had an occasional tendency to overpower the rest of the band. It was an enjoyable evening. But one would not have expected anything less than an enjoyable concert on this evening. Bellis is not the kind of director who will walk on stage and not lead a good concert.

Rivermen lose to St. Louis U.; finish at 12-4

Ron Tipton

The UMSL Men's Soccer team finished its season with a 3-1 loss to their arch rival, the St. Louis University Billikens, in the annual St. Louis cup game. The loss was the final game for the SLU team, which has been a dominating force in the Missouri soccer scene for the past few years. The Billikens, led by their star player McVey, had already secured the championship of the Missouri intercity league. McVey already had stolen the spotlight with his outstanding performance in the cup game.

The Billikens dominated the game, with McVey scoring the first goal of the game. The Rivermen tried to fight back, but McVey's second goal put the game out of reach. The Billikens' defense was solid, with only one goal allowed by the Rivermen. McVey's third goal in the second half sealed the victory for the Billikens and ended the Rivermen's season with a disappointing 12-4 record.

The Billikens, who are the most important part of the Missouri soccer scene, are the champions of the Missouri intercity league. The Rivermen, who are in second place, will have to settle for second place in the league.

UMSL gains No. 2 seed in regions

The UMSL Men's Soccer team has received the No. 2 seed in the Midwest-Mideast regional playoffs and will meet opponents yet to be determined in the regional championship game. The Billikens, who are the most important part of the Missouri soccer scene, will be playing for the Missouri intercity league championship.

In most sporting events, the last game of any players career is one that holds many reflections of the seasons past. Members of the soccer Rivermen are experiencing their last moments as members of a college soccer team. Mike Hess, Pat McVey and Tim Murphy all played their last regular season game as a Rivermen uniform last Tuesday night.

When you play a team that is better than you, you have to be realistic. This was the case for the Rivermen against the Billikens. The Rivermen played well, but the Billikens were too strong and too much for them.

The women's volleyball season came to a close last weekend as they lost three hard fought matches in the post-season tournament at Central Missouri State University in Warrensburg, MO.

The spikers opened play against the two teams in their pool, Northwest Missouri State, a team who brought an astounding 43-10 record into the tournament, and Central Missouri State University, the ultimate winners of the tourney.

Coach Cindy Rech felt that being placed in the same pool with these two powerhouse teams could have worked to her team's advantage if things went right. Things didn't go right.

The women put their 300 record up against NEMO in their first game last Friday night. Although the women played well, they couldn't overcome the team from Maryville and lost in two games, 14-16 and 11-15.

The team's next opponent was CMS, a team that UMSL had beaten earlier in the season. CMS, powered by a strong serving game, beat the Riverwomen in straight games, 3-1 and 12-15.

Up to this point in the tournament, the spikers were still somewhat optimistic about the rest of the tourney. "By losing those two matches, it put us third in our pool," said Rech.

But in the other pool, where Southeast Missouri State and Harris-Stowe were playing, things got a lot worse for the Riverwomen.

The favored NEMO team lost to SEMO, a team that UMSL had handled earlier in the season and hopefully would get a chance to handle in the post-season tourney.

Unfortunately for the women, SEMO upset NEMO and won the pool, forcing the Riverwomen to play NEMO, a team that had a mysterious mystery over the UMSL spikers all year. In fact, five of the 15 regular season losses came at the hands of the team from Kirkville.

"We knew what we had to do against them," explained Rech, referring to their match against NEMO. The squad played tough throughout the match, winning the first game 15-4, losing the second game 6-15 and finally, losing the third 11-15. Rech points out that the third game was a neck and neck affair.

"They played tough the whole match. But in the third game, the score bounced from 9-9, 10-10 until they finally won the last points for the match." One bright spot in the women's trip to Warrensburg is that two players from the UMSL squad were selected to the tournament's All-Star team. The two UMSL spikers named were Sue Drurrer and Janet Taylor.

"I am extremely pleased about them getting picked for the team," explained Rech. "They both played well." Now that the season is over, Rech must look forward to next year. With only one senior on this team, the women should strengthen their squad by recruiting new talent. Recruiting together and adding the interest of new members from both the university and college and high school level.

In the past few years, the professional sports season has been stricken by an epidemic of drug use. Fantasies which are paid to certain organizations to stir up enthusiasm amidst the home crowd. As ridiculous as it sounds, it is often true.

But in college athletics, a team mascot as outrageous as those seen in the pros is almost non-existent. And with the exception of a visit this fall by "Buddbird" during the UMSL Badgers soccer tournaments, UMSL at no time had ever had a wild "mascot" or "superfan" to speak of.

Unknown to most people, though, UMSL really does have a superfan. His name is Angus Smoke, a 40-year old custodian at UMSL. And watching sports, not mopping floors, is his main interest.

"I love sports," he said as he watched a recent UMSL women's soccer game. "I've been a fan of UMSL sports, especially soccer, ever since I've been here."

Smoke, who has worked at UMSL for 10 years, is an American Indian of the Mohawk tribe, and has always been an active participant in athletic activities.

"Sports has always been the most interesting thing to me," he said. "When I was younger, athletics was important to me because it kept me part of a group. It also helped me to get recognized and accepted by others."

Smoke was a pretty fair athlete at one time. He attended Haskell Indian Institute in Lawrence, Kan., from 1953 to 1955 and was an all-conference football player. A sprinter in high school, Smoke was once timed at 10.2 seconds in the 100-yard dash.

Another sport Smoke participated in during his high school days was basketball. But ironically, the one sport he never got a chance to play is soccer.

"I played soccer until I came to St. Louis," he said. "When I first saw a soccer game, I saw some of the things that applied to basketball. It really caught my fancy, especially since St. Louis is a soccer city."

Since then, Smoke's infatuation with soccer has become stronger. He has season tickets at Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville and seldom misses a major soccer game in the St. Louis area.

Although he supports other teams and schools, Smoke still has a warm spot in his heart for UMSL. In the last decade, he has only missed about two home UMSL soccer games.

"They are always here," he said. "I'm not the rah-rah type of fan, but I do get involved in the games."

Even if the games are boring, Smoke still enjoys himself. He almost always attends UMSL soccer games, whether he listens to his radio and then watches the game while he listens to the world series, or a Mizzou football game, or a Blues hockey game or...
Dominic Barczewski: Riverman turned Cosmos

Jeff Kuchno

The status of American players in the North American Soccer League has been a major controversy in sports for the past year. Former UMSL standout centerback Dominic Barczewski had a chance to gather some first-hand knowledge of the problem over the summer.

Barczewski, a two-time All-American and four-time All-Midwest selection at UMSL, was drafted by the New York Cosmos last winter and invited to their tryout camp in the Bahamas. He made the team, but saw action only once - in one game during the regular season.

"It was frustrating not getting a chance to play, but I can understand it," he said. "The Cosmos have a lot of talent, maybe too much talent."

Barczewski cited the cases of Dave Brcic, a former All-American centerback at St. Louis U., and Larry Hulzer, another St. Louis U. alum, who both rode the bench all season.

"Brcic is one of the best young American centerbacks in the game and Larry [Hulzer] is one of the best American players in the league," said Barczewski. "Their talent is being wasted."

"The Cosmos have a lot of talent, maybe too much talent."

— Dominic Barczewski

Barczewski was introduced to world-renowned players like Gorgio Chingalia and Johan Neeskens. He'll never forget the feeling he got after meeting soccer's superstars.

"We had 25 guys on the team and you can only dress 15," explained Barczewski. "It's hard to learn when you don't get in the games."

But despite the frustration of watching instead of playing, Barczewski admitted many of his experiences last year are worth remembering.

For instance, Barczewski recalls the three weeks of grueling conditioning in the Bahamas and then being told he made the team.

"We worked out three times a day and I was so tired that at night I wanted to go to bed," he said. "I didn't have time to think about being in the Bahamas. I was just concerned about making the Cosmos."

"I couldn't believe I was on the same team with these guys," he said. "They are simply phenomenal players and I

Barczewski said one of the hardest things to do was getting up mentally to go against a Chingalia or Neeskens in practice — and hold his own.

"I have to try to do my best against them in practice," he said. "I think about how great the guy is. I'm in trouble. I just have to concentrate on what I have to do."

Barczewski, who has one year remaining on his contract, plans to see how things go next year before making a decision about his future. He would like to stay with the Cosmos, but...

"If I see I have no chance of getting any playing time, I'll try to go somewhere else," said Barczewski. "No matter what you do in practice, you need game situations to learn and improve."

Pilot: The pens you have to hold onto with two hands.

— Roddy Cunningham

"I don't get no respect. I make a deposit. She's got my money and I'm not there..." — Including my Pilot pen.

"It's almost comical how people go for a Pilot Fineliner. Why? Its fine point writes through corners. And Pilot mingles only 79¢ for it. People get their hands on it and forget it's my pen. I got my pen. And no respect.

People go nuts over my Pilot Razor Point too. I write with go nuts fine line. Its metal clip helps keep the point from going square. For only 85¢ they should buy their own pen... and show some respect for my property."
and the four people. The Hoosiers beat in a very tough match with a late goal in the second half of the Flippers beat the Headliners & included the start of three on the Courts and finally, Smotherman & Co. beating the Nobody's.

In nine-man soccer, the Deans continued to blaze the field with a 3-0 victory over Cook's. The Deans are now boasting a perfect 3-0 record. They have scored seven goals and haven't allowed one.

In the Gold division the four teams are the Raucquett Club, Beta Alpha Pi, Krazy Kickers, and Papal Bulls. Finally, the Green division consists of the ROTC team, PEK, The Clash and Phi Zappa Kappa.

Last week, the volleyball final was played in the Mark Twain Sports Complex, the match saw the Pikes #1 team facing the LeSabre team. The Pikes #1 team swept by the LeSabre team with scores of 15-2, 15-6.

In the final, the Hoosiers defeated the LeSabre with scores of 15-8, 15-12 and 15-6. The Hoosiers then beat the Communications, Beta Alpha Pi, Krazy Kickers, and Papal Bulls. Finally, the Green division consists of the ROTC team, PEK, The Clash and Phi Zappa Kappa.

In the semi-final game, we played The Alliance. Their team is made up of a dozen players including the Kappa Alpha Society, Sig Pi, Bccta Alpha, and the TKE's. They got by the Tennis Team 8-15, 15-11 and 15-8. They defeated The Alliance with scores of 9-15, 13-15 and 16-16.

Pikes, who also won the championship, are not fitting as well as hoc soc and soccer. But, it is of no concern to Shor who said, "Our championships for this season might be over, we'll give some of the other teams a chance to win."

The UMSL assistant leader said that his father was instrumental in helping him establish his attitudes about soccer, "He never stressed winning." This year's squad has an unusual sense of closeness according to Dallas and his players. "Everyone is very close and everyone wants to have a good time playing soccer," said Dallas.

Bess feels that this year's team is made up of a "Great bunch of guys and coaches." For the past two years, UMSL soccer fans have been blessed with the presence of Pat McVey. For the past four years, UMSL soccer fans have watched Mike Bess and Tim Murphy mature.

Would there have been another school canceling the benefits of these fine players if it hadn't been UMSL? Probably not, according to the players.

"Harry Krouenh (head coach at SLU) is my neighbor," explained Murphy, "But when I was in high school, Dallas approached me right away. I knew some of the players so I went to UMSL."
