The Student Assembly has unanimously approved a resolution asking the Coordinating Board for Higher Education and state legislators for "the financial, logistical and moral support necessary for (UMSL) to blossom."

At its meeting Sunday, the assembly approved the two-page document, which is in response to a proposal made by the CBHE calling for UMSL to leave the University of Missouri system and join with Harris-Stowe State College as a separate state institution.

The assembly also decided to contract with the Associated Students Council of the University of Missouri for the remainder of the academic year. Assembly prezident Greg Barnes said that ASU will act as a consultant to the Student Association and will offer contacts with legislators, extensive files and lobbyist training sessions.

"It gives us a running start on setting up our own lobbying organization," Barnes explained.

The assembly also elected two new chairpersons and approved committee slates for the year.

“In a short time, she pulled together enough information to convince the board that she could do the dance right," Archibald explained that Steenvezz had explored possible locations, entertainment, and the week's activities. The possibility of scheduling the dance between with an athletic event fell through because the dates between soccer and basketball seasons.

The dance, which was scheduled to be held on Oct. 20, will now be held on the evening of Nov. 14, at the Country Manor Banquet Center on Manchester Road. The cost will be $9 per person. It will carry the original theme of "Showboat."

Events leading up to the dance will include the selection of a homecoming king and queen.

If you've already taken your homecoming dress back to Macy Fifth Avenue and had it taken off of your gold card, but have had better run back out there with your plastic purchasing power hand, why? Just because the show will go on.

Southwestern Bell to support KWMU

Southwestern Bell Corp. has joined a number of other advertisers to underwrite KWMU radio programming, according to KWMU Development Director Tom Eschen. The company's $15,000 purchase of radio time will support the news, classical music and jazz programming of KWMU (FM 91), the public radio station at UMSL.

Recent changes in the Federal Communications Commission regulations allow program sponsors to advertise their products or services on public radio.

Eschen said Southwestern Bell's decision to advertise on KWMU illustrates a dramatic change in the advertising potential of public radio. "Traditionally businesses have supported public radio because it improves the quality of community life," he said. "Now, however, KWMU is also a good advertising investment, largely due to its extended underwriting announcements."

"Public radio gives us a quality, uncrowded environment for our public service advertising messages," added Randy Barron, president of the Missouri division of Southwestern Bell. "And, we're particularly pleased to be associated with National Public Radio's 'Morning Edition.'"

Other area businesses to advertise on KWMU recently include General American Life, Air One, Union Electric, INDECO, Famous Barr Computer Center, Ram Communications and others.

Ashcroft to visit

John Ashcroft, the Republican nominee for governor of Missouri, will visit the UMSL campus on Tuesday. The campaign stop is sponsored by the College Republicans as part of their "Meet the Candidates" series. Ashcroft opposes Democratic Lt. Gov. Kenneth Rothman in the campaign.

Ashcroft is scheduled to arrive on campus at 10:30 a.m. He will proceed to the Social Sciences and Business Building where he will answer questions from students in an "Introduction to American Politics" class.

Then Ashcroft has tentatively planned to appear in the quadrangle between the Thomas Jefferson Library, Clark Hall, the Social Sciences and Business Building and parking lots.

From the quadrangle, Ashcroft plans to make remarks and answer questions from students. He plans to leave campus at 11 a.m.

Ashcroft's campus advance men warn that the candidate could be behind schedule due to many unforeseen circumstances.

Life Blood: Beta Alpha Psi sponsored a blood drive at UMSL last week. St. Louis Red Cross officials had declared a blood emergency and urged people to give blood.

Even this has been worked out by the ambitious student organizer. Applications are being accepted in the University Center for the Nov. 12-13 elections.

Steevensz, a member of Delta Zeta sorority, became interested in the dance when she found that it might be postponed. "Homecoming is usually a fall tradition," she commented. "We were all psyched up for it."

Steevensz isn't the least bit daunted by the fact that she only has a little over a month to organize the dance. "Finding a place isn't that hard," commented Steevensz. "You just have to sit down and find it." She does not have a slight advantage because she has organized special events in the past.

One of Steevensz's main concerns is getting the event publicized. She intends to "get the flyers out, and let the students know about the dance." This, she contends, is "just a matter of time."

Although a member of Delta Zeta, Steevensz contends that she is "not doing this for Delta Zeta's benefit, but for UMSL."

"UMSL PAC has grand plans for the future," LeLoup said. "We have a message to the students and the the university."

Rothman: Higher education is growth industry

John Tucci
Kevin Linden

Lt. Gov. Kenneth Rothman, Democratic candidate for governor of Missouri, held a press conference at the Thomas Jefferson Library Friday. Rothman's main focus was the proposed UMSL-Harris-Stowe merger which he categorically opposes.

At the town hall meeting, Student Association President Greg Barnes stated, "I think it's important for students to attend both these events (Rothman's news conference and John Ashcroft's Oct. 23 campaign stop) and press the gubernatorial candidates, and make sure that if the merger proposal does happen to get through the legislature, then what the governor does with that piece of legislation will be of critical importance to the survival of this school."

Rothman entered the campus. "I'm for higher education. I think this Republican administration has turned its back on education during the last four years and I am going to bring it back up to the standard it was at when I was speaker of the Missouri House of Representatives."

He said the Missouri budget spends 15 percent on education, down from the 19 percent spent during the years of Democratic governors Ted and Joe Teasdale. Rothman promised, "I will change that trend, and once again make our campuses competitive."

Rothman said that in 1963 he co-sponsored legislation authorizing the land for UMSL. This campus was a country club. "Maybe that's why the Republicans are doing all this," he added. "Maybe they're returning to country club mentality but we're not going back to country club mentality on this campus."

Rothman told the gathering, "It's time we had a governor who sees higher education for what it is: a growth industry that can provide an opportunity for all of its individuals."

In fact, there wouldn't be a University of Missouri in St. Louis if there hadn't been someone like me," Rothman said. "We decided it should be a campus of the University of Missouri system. It made sense then, and it makes sense now."

Rothman said the merger proposal was "taking two steps backwards in an attempt to take one step forward. The step forward is higher education. The two steps backwards are cutting Harris-Stowe and the University of Missouri-St. Louis."

"It doesn't make sense that the biggest metropolitan area of the state should be without a full-service university," Rothman said. He claimed that he had already begun contacting legislators in order to help block the merger proposal.

The candidate told the group that Harris-Stowe has a right to be given the public education needs of the people of the St. Louis area.

"I'm Kenny Rothman, and I don't know what that term means. You ought to ask John Ashcroft. He wrote it or used it."

The term was used by Ashcroft in a debate the night before Rothman's visit to UMSL. Ashcroft said the term meant that Rothman was similar to Democratic candidate Walter Mondale.

"I'm for the lottery, John Ashcroft is against it. We have $100 million paying for Illinois' higher education. I want to bring it here and pay for our higher education."

"I'm Kenny Rothman and I don't know what that term means. You ought to ask John Ashcroft. He wrote it or used it."

"I'm for the lottery, John Ashcroft is against it. We have $100 million paying for Illinois' higher education. I want to bring it here and pay for our higher education."

When asked if he was Mondale, Rothman chuckled and responded, "I'm Kenny Rothman and I don't know what that term means. You ought to ask John Ashcroft. He wrote it or used it."

"I'm for the lottery, John Ashcroft is against it. We have $100 million paying for Illinois' higher education. I want to bring it here and pay for our higher education."

CAMPAIGNING: Lt. Gov. Kenneth Rothman speaks to students and faculty members at UMSL last week. Rothman is the Democratic candidate for governor.

What the report reflects is that the report's authors don't feel that there's going to be a commitment to higher education, so they're retreating the whole system. They've given up hope."

About the lottery referendum, Rothman said, "I'm for the lottery. John Ashcroft is against it. We have $100 million paying for Illinois' higher education. I want to bring it here and pay for our higher education."

Rothman would address its previously scheduled town hall meeting.

However, Rothman was really never planning to address the town hall meeting. According to Barnes, the confusion was due to an assumption "that since we were having this town hall meeting anyway, it would be logical to tack him on the end of the program."

Rothman had always planned to hold a news conference instead of making an address.

He speaks out against gay organization

Dear Editor:

I am highly furious at the article, “Gay lesbian group forming,” UMSL Cur (Oct. 11, 1984). It is even more annoying not only that it was carried at the front page of the paper but also that the university administration — the Office of Student Activity — the University of Missouri-St. Louis has officially recognized this morally decayed, disgusting group of individuals as part of the student organization. May his/ her godly soul rest in eternal torment that the morally motivated students of this great institution should sit dumb and watch the UMSL community turn into the ancient biblical city of Sodom and Gomorrah.

This group claims that they are normal human beings, and so sought recognition on that ground. Unfortunately, they have no moral right to justify their practices. Where on earth has a man or a woman turned from its innocence in order that his/her sexual urge, and it turns out that such person is mentally fit to be termed a normal human being.

Of course, that these persons are diseased, sick and off the line of human track was well said by Bo Apollon, said gay leader, when he noted that these ungodly people labeled themselves normal, reasonable group to identify with.

Where on earth has a man or a woman turned to bis/her immediate sex to satisfy his/her sexual urge, and it turns out that this ungodly group is a proper sense. Allowing its image to be tarnished by some unruly radicals, because recognizing the gay will certainly undermine its good intentions of providing highly trained, disciplined citizens. It will also go a long way in the recognition of the UMSL's relationship with its foreign students who are here, because they believe in what UMSL says it can offer, namely qualified education and well motivated students. Should the administration recognize this group, I will quit the University of Missouri-St. Louis in protest.

To hell with the gays and the lesbians. Michael Okpara

CBHE to hold court on Thursday

The current day has arrived, and it's not like we thought it would be.

Next Thursday the Coordinating Board for Higher Education will hold a public hearing at the St. Louis County Library Headquarters on South Lindbergh Boulevard. The board is meeting for the purpose of hearing responses from state four-year public institutions on the proposals (including one which would merge UMSL and Harris-Stowe State College) made by the CBHE last month.

It is crucial that students and members of the St. Louis area — and the presiding officer of the CBHE — understand this hearing, that he/she will be able to present his/her case. The only way to do this is to attend. On the day of the hearing, the University of Missouri Board of Curators are scheduled to meet in Columbia. UM interim president Mel Goodreau was planning to fly in from Columbia to address the CBHE. UMSL's chancellor, not being a president of a four-year institution, was not even invited to address the board.

These circumstances make plain the fact that the CBHE is relatively unconcerned about the opinions of St. Louisans regarding the merger proposal. We are convinced of the necessity of intervention, which means that the board will hear two persons (not necessarily from UMSL) on the subject of the proposed merger. This is St. Louis' sole opportunity to express concerns about UMSL's chancellor on the list of speakers is just one more slap in UMSL's face.

There are two measures UMSL students can take to help the cause. First, you should plan to attend the hearing. The Student Association will hold a rally at 11:30 a.m. on Thursday in the J.C. Penney Auditorium, and from there will stage a “funeral procession” to and from our meeting, the better.

Just as important are the letter-writing campaigns taking place now. Since the board members won't have a chance to hear from us on Thursday, letters and other communications might be our only chance of making ourselves heard. Write a letter and take it to the Student Association office, 262 University Center. The association will copy and mail it to each member of the CBHE. Or mail it yourself.

Student Association's theme, “UMSL at 20 — too young to die” is a valid one. Lend your support — it's very much needed now.

Dear Editor:

It is definitely in students' best interests to support UMSL. The Coordinating Board for Higher Education has authored a report calling for a merger of UMSL with Harris-Stowe State College and the limiting of the graduate programs at UMSL. The most important part of UMSL — the faculty — we stand to lose because of this proposal. As the good faculty leaves, the reputation of UMSL will deteriorate.

Regardless of career choice, UMSL's reputation will follow students. If UMSL is properly supported, allowed to grow and mature into a fine, comprehensive institution, its students will benefit throughout their lifetimes. If it is forced to reduce its educational standards, students will be compelled to find excuses for attendance in the future.

Next Thursday, Oct. 25, 1984, may be one of the most important days of students' academic lives. There will be a protest rally at the J.C. Penney Auditorium starting at 11:30 a.m. followed by a caravan downtown to the St. Louis County Library on South Lindbergh Boulevard.

Students, if you can't attend the rally there are other ways to help: talk to your parents and neighbors — get them to write letters to the University of Missouri Board of Curators, the state legislators and the governor. Right now, we can't afford to lose. Do it for UMSL. Do it for yourself.

Sincerely,
Larry Wines, alumnae

They are on the outside of my sophomore year at UMSL. In addition to currently holding a GPA, I have seen many corrupting influences. American youths have been eating away at America's educational system. As a result, academic and moral standards are still rather low; they do not even hold a candle to the standards of 20 years ago.

Response to racism

Dear Editor:

In response to the dissemblers of Mr. Dennis, I write this letter addressing campus racism. The acknowledgement of bigotry's presence, Mrs. Khorashi, does not contribute to its perpetuation, but the fair and impartial analysis of its causes, which you provided Mr. Dennis with, does.

First of all, I am sure that your intentions are sincere, but this is precisely what makes your reply to Mr. Dennis' letter even more unfortunate. You seem to have unconsciously replaced racist epithets with equally offensive racial platitudes.

Over all, two strategies seemed to have been employed in answering Mr. Dennis' plea: (a) the denial of campus racism, and (b) a cynical pattern of victim blaming. The first strategy was also one adopted by Miss Denise Robinson. She even went so far as to call campus racism an "unreal" issue. To Miss Robinson: sweep in that bag under a rug still leaves a dirty house.

UMSL is legendary among black St. Louisans for the racist attitudes held by faculty and student body alike. Daily we endure mumbled insults, contemptuous gestures, indifference and hostility.

Your second strategy, on the other hand, blames the victim. You seem to be saying, Mrs. Khorashi, that they (minorities) have a problem dealing with this and the other way around. We are not covering their humanity in the shrub of "blackness"—they are. They are on the outside looking in because of their "bad vibes."

You are right on this last point, however, bad vibes are keeping us out but they are not emanating from us. Mr. Dennis' only flaw seems to be that he, and this is the real afford to most whites, seems to be inconvenienced with a sense of self-respect.

Sincerely
Carl Mitchell

Says American youths have been corrupted

In 1960, the pill gave women a choice.

In 1984, the sponge gives women a choice.

It's been a long time. Twenty-four years, and there hasn't been a sensible new option in birth control. Today, the 24-hour Contraceptive Sponge. Today is a soft, comfortable sponge that contains Nonoxynol-9, the same effective spermicide women have been using for over 20 years. The Sponge is easy to use. You just moisten it thoroughly with water and insert it like a tampon, and it works for a full 24 hours. With The Sponge, you don't have to worry about hormonal side effects. And no other non-prescription vaginal contraceptive has been proven more effective. It's been through seven years of extensive testing, and over 17 million Sponges have been sold.

Of course, you don't need a prescription for The Sponge. It can be found at your local drug store and at selected supermarkets. In the 3-pack or convenient 12-pack.

And the Today Sponge is the only contraceptive that comes with someone to talk to: our 24-hour Today TalkLine. If you have any questions, or you're just wondering if The Sponge is right for you, visit your student health center or give us a call at 800-223-2329. (In California, 800-222-2329.)

Finally, you have the spontaneity you want and the protection you need. But, best of all, you have another choice you never had before. Until Today.

ON TWO 3-PACKS OR ONE 12-PACK.

To Consumers: Use coupon per purchase. Data and rates are correct as of press time. No sales to outside agencies. Contraceptive Sponge products may not be resold. The Today Sponge products may not be resold. Today packaging and design are for purposes of identification. Void where prohibited. Coupon does not extend to prescription contraceptives. degenerate, and even unlawful activities take place on this cam­pus, and the administration or the police have done nothing to put a stop to them. The fact that the UMSL administration has allowed a gay-lesbian group to form on this campus, however, tops them all. I would hope that the university is supposed to be the moral straight people, and the administration or the student body would do a closer watch and crack down on these offenders.

As far as violating all the regulations concerning alcohol is concerned, the fraternities take the cake. Just for the record, there is a campus regulation prohibiting the advertising of events on campus that directly promote alcohol; it is just not enforced. The fraternities are in clear violation of this regulation, and the administration should take strong disciplinary action against the offenders. I would hold nothing against social fraternities if they were cleaned up and did not promote anti­academic behavior and illegal activities, such as under-age drinking, which I know goes on at all of the fraternity parties.

In conclusion, I feel that it is time that vigilant citizens start to band together to fight against all of this crime and immorality. Therefore, I am interested in forming a political organization on campus that would work to turn the tide against immorality and corruption. In addition to being a general right-wing interest group, I would like to see such an organization take an action-oriented stance against poor academic and moral standards and crime, and advocate reactionary action to bring back some of the aspects of the "good old days." I strongly urge anyone who is interested in helping to form this organization to leave his name and phone number in my mailbox, which is located in the mailroom of the mathematics department, Room 500 Clark Hall, so that I can contact them. After all, how can a person be truly free if he/she lives in constant FEAR of CRIME AND CORRUPTION?

Some schools opt for porn flicks

(CPS) — Several campuses once again have opted to approve just a campus fund and facilities to run pornographic movies during the last month.

Most recently, University of Virginia President Frank H. Hufeland has released a National Organization of Women invitation to view the movie "Deep Throat."

Now you want to emulate Hufeland's success in banning the film from UVA, where it was shown as a fund-raiser for the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity two weeks ago. Hereford, in a letter to Cynthia Taylor, president of the Charlotte­sville, Va. NOW chapter, said that while he "personally abhors this kind of thing," he feared it would violate the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, Taylor reported.

Also fearing it would quash free speech, an Indiana University Women's dorm student government last week approved a motion to let students keep showing X-rated movies in the dorms.

The anti-pornography forces have won a few times. The manager of a University of Texas at El Paso campus pub recently ordered I Love TV talk show to shut down at 10 p.m., when Select TV switched to blue movie programming.

And soon after the Indiana dorm council approved showing pornography, the campuswide Indiana University Student Association passed a resolution condemning pornography and offering to work with the dean of students to teach students "about the effects of pornography on society."

Generally, however, students and administrators reluctantly go along with the screenings, which are usually staged by fraternities or campus film societies: "This situation," observed William Fishback, an aide to Hereford at Virginia, "is not a winner in any respect."

Fishback said Hereford finally decided that "We're talking about an issue of freedom here. We will not ban movies because this could lead to book burning and such."

This is a very complex issue of values," Now's Taylor replied. "Hereford claims the school won't do anything that is against community standards, but in Charlottesville, this is against community standards."

"The cost of human dignity is too great to show the wrong type of film on public grounds of a state school especially as a fund-raiser."
Chinese Puppet Troupe performs

PUPPETING: The Hsiao Hsi Yuan Puppet Troupe of Taiwan performed in Room 100 Clark Hall last Friday. Their performance also included a demonstration of the musical instruments that were used and a brief introduction to this 300-year-old art of Chinese culture.

'A Man For All Seasons' opens UMSL theater season

Phillip H. Dennis

Fall is here, and with the fall comes the opening of the University Players and UMSL theater season. This year, the first production will be "A Man For All Seasons," an inspiring play by Robert Bolt about Sir Thomas More and his struggle for honor.

British history. The century, a British patriot and one of the most important roles of the play). Despite some initial fears that auditionees have, the supportive and helpful attitudes of the veteran actors on the set and the easy and suggestive style of director John Grassilli, eventually everyone relaxed and enjoyed the auditions.

The director must listen to hours of cumberose readings ranging from the superb to the brutally bad. The director chips off the auditionees, the whole ordeal of what Norfolk was like. I didn't know how to audition with a different idea for. What did Grassilli look for? "I look for the ability to take direction, the physical correctness for the role, and the relationships between the various castable people," Grassilli said. "I must also consider that spark of theatricality that is not really definable, going under the guise of presence, or stage worthiness, or any number of the other internal qualities that form an individual." Many people tried out.

Grassilli was never short-witted or inconsiderate of the less talented auditionees. He gave equal time and attention to all. "In the university theater, one of your jobs is a teaching function that can't be ignored. It is important that everybody get a chance at the experience," Grassilli said.

After all the auditions are done Grassilli then picked his cast, and began rehearsals. The rehearsal is to an actor what roadwork is to a prize fighter. The longer and more extensively he trains, the more tired he becomes. Yet, it is through this exhaustion that he may emerge victorious. Often the hours of tedious stage direction may seem to go unrewarded. The glory and glitter of the stage is gone in the rehearsals; only the work remains.

"I find that it's so difficult to relate to my character, the conflicts, and the issues, that the rehearsal has become a labor to see "Play," page 9.
Peer Counseling offers workshops

Mike Luczak

If you've been walking around the UMSL campus lately, you've probably noticed a few obstacle courses in your way, and it's making you mad, isn't it? Believe me, you're not alone.

In observing all these obstacle courses, I wonder if UMSL is preparing to host the next "Battle of the Network Stars?" While talking with UMSL administrators about these obstacle courses, they say they're "repairs." Can you believe it?

C'mon, let's be serious. Are these really repairs? It looks like amateur patchwork to me, and it's ugly. Has anyone ever thought of what this campus will look like when they're finished? I wonder who's behind all these repairs? Don't you?

Well, there's certainly a rumor going around campus that says the Coordinating Board For Higher Education is to blame. According to this rumor, UMSL students are being graded on these obstacle courses by specially marked CBHE aircrews. And you thought Lambert was just busier than normal, didn't you?

So how do you grade us on these obstacle courses? As far as I know, it's only a rumor, but honestly, who really knows how the CBHE does anything? If you're a rational individual, you probably can't even imagine.

Let's talk a look at some of the obstacle courses. The most formidable of all seems to be the one located on Mark Twain Drive. Those guys sure must have tried going through that one. Chances are you've almost turned into the "Road Closed" sign, but I don't think "almost" counts. Well, maybe it does, but you'll have to check with the CBHE. Remember, they're the ones who are supposedly grading, I'm not.

But what about the other obstacle courses on campus? It seems as though they're everywhere, doesn't it? If you walk by the library, it looks as though they're digging for dead bodies. My guess is, though, that since UMSL was once a golf course, they're probably looking for old golf balls. And at the rate they charge for golf balls, it doesn't surprise me.

Maybe you have a point there, but I'm afraid the rumor is incorrect. The CBHE has never even thought of such a proposal. It just wouldn't make sense.

Luczak: Forgive me if I'm wrong Mrs. Aery, but wasn't it the CBHE that made the proposal of merging UMSL with Harris-Stowe?

Aery: Yes, that's correct. I'm proud to say that both the students who proposed to merge UMSL with Harris-Stowe, and I don't see what our proposal has to do with any of your obstacle courses.

Aery: C'mon Mrs. Aery, it's only a rumor, but I don't think "almost" counts. Well, maybe it does, but you'll have to check with the CBHE. Remember, they're the ones who are supposedly grading, I'm not.

But what about the other obstacle courses on campus? It seems as though they're everywhere, doesn't it? If you walk by the library, it looks as though they're digging for dead bodies. My guess is, though, that since UMSL was once a golf course, they're probably looking for old golf balls. And at the rate they charge for golf balls, it doesn't surprise me.

Perhaps I'm out of line. Perhaps this is something we should discuss in private. Anyway, let's get back to the CBHE. Rumor also has it that they're planning to build even more obstacle courses in the future. They say it has to do with burying our education, or something like that. You see, the CBHE's motto apparently is "A hole in the ground is where the holes in our heads." Catchy motto, don't you think?

What would Shaiba Aery say about this column, you ask? I'm glad you brought her up, because just last night I dreamed I actually had a real phone conversation with Shaiba Aery, and here's how it went:

Luczak: Hello, Mrs. Aery (for some reason that name sounds ironic), I'm Mike Luczak, a student at UMSL, and I was wondering.

Aery: UMSL, isn't that an undergraduate school? Have you ever seen there before, but I swear someone told me it's an undergraduate school.

Luczak: No, I'm sorry Mrs. Aery, but I think you must be thinking about Harris-Stowe State College. UMSL, you see, offers students what they call a graduate program.

Aery: Oh — what's the difference?

Luczak: Well, anyway Mrs. Aery, there's this rumor going around UMSL that accuses the CBHE of making obstacle courses on campus, and that you're grading students on them. Now I'm wondering, is this true?

Aery: Certainly not. Now where would anyone get that idea?

Luczak: Well, to be perfectly honest with you Mrs. Aery, who else would propose to have these roads and walkways repaired in the middle of the fall semester?

Aery: You have a point there, but I'm afraid the rumor is incorrect. The CBHE has never even thought of such a proposal. It just wouldn't make sense.

Luczak: So maybe you have a point there, but I'm afraid the rumor is incorrect. The CBHE has never even thought of such a proposal. It just wouldn't make sense.

Aery: Certainly not. Now where would anyone get that idea?
Exhibit is on display

An exhibit or photographs, textiles, and jewelry titled "African Patterns on Body and Cloth" will remain on display at UMSL through the end of October. The exhibit focuses on the similarities of two distinct methods of personal adornment found in Africa. The exhibit is located in the Summit Lounge area on the second level of the University Center. The Summit is open from 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 7 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday. It is closed on Saturday and Sunday.

Photographs on loan from the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial and the Missouri Arts Council present the bold colors and forms in the face painting of the Nuba of Southern Sudan. The cultures of West Africa present the same colors and forms through fabric, rather than paint. These textiles and jewelry are on loan from the collection of John Works, Ph.D., associate professor of history at UMSL.

Trevor to perform here

Jazz vocalist Jeanne Trevor and the St. Louis Jazz Quartet will perform at UMSL on Thursday, Oct. 18, at 8 p.m. in the J.C. Penney Auditorium. Trevor is a jazz vocalist who follows in the tradition established by Ella Fitzgerald and Sarah Vaughn. Performing with the St. Louis Jazz Quartet, her voice is featured as another instrument in the group.

The quartet features Terry Kippersberger on bass, Ray Kennedy performing on keyboards and guitars, saxophonist Willie Alkins and percussionist Kevin Giamino.

Play

In addition, Sharer and his colleagues enlist the aid of scores of UMSL students to also help in building the sets. As they help, students learn about the theater mechanics and develop skills that may prove valuable in their futures.

Darryl Maximilian Robinson leads the play in the role of Sir Thomas More. Robinson is an extroverted craftsman who constantly displays his talents. A well-spoken man of experience, Robinson said this role is the most desirable.

"Thomas More is everything that I'd like to be, but am not," Robinson said. "He's very good, very righteous, and very serious about life. He has an absolute and unshakable belief in God. He's known to be honest, I admire him very much."

Robinson seems quite comfortable in the role, and well he should be. A native of Chicago, Robinson is definitely a big-town person, Robinson is sort of on a sabbatical here in St. Louis.

Currently, I am touring with the Muny Student Theatre Project as Prince Whipple in the play "Give Me Liberty," Robinson said.

Grassill, thus, has reason to be optimistic about the play, Grassill, however, still has a few fears to overcome.

"Anytime you get a chance to do a play like "A Man For All Seasons," you go at it with some trepidation. It's a huge play. It requires a tremendous amount of work on getting it to work. This is an important piece of work," Grassill said.

"You have to try to realize what Bolt felt when he wrote the play and get that across. That's my job. There is a tremendous amount of expectation about it. You, the director, are the instigator of the playwright's vision."

"A Man For All Seasons," by Robert Bolt, will be running on campus Oct. 25-28 in the Benton Hall Theater. (Room 105). Performances will begin at 8 p.m. People interested in seeing the play can get tickets by calling the theater ticket office at 533-5773.
Another of Preston Sturges’ Classic comedies, “Hail the Conquering Hero” (1944) is one of my personal favorite films of all time. It is one of those films that is often dismissed by modern audiences as being too obscure or not being relevant today. However, “Hail the Conquering Hero” is a film that speaks to the human condition in ways that are still relevant today.

The film tells the story of a man who is falsely accused of a crime and is sentenced to death. However, he manages to escape and sets out to prove his innocence. Along the way, he meets a variety of colorful characters and has many humorous adventures. The film is a classic example of Preston Sturges’ unique style of comedy, which is characterized by its quick wit, sharp observations, and irreverent humor.

One of the most memorable scenes in the film is when the central character, played by Robert Mitchum, encounters a group of farmhands who are picking tomatoes. The scene is not only funny but also highlights the contrast between the rural working class and the owner of the farm. It is a scene that is both humorous and poignant.

In addition to the humor, “Hail the Conquering Hero” is also a film that deals with serious themes such as justice and innocence. The film explores the idea that the truth can sometimes be hidden and that the innocent can be punished. It is a film that is a testament to the power of perseverance and the importance of standing up for what is right.

Overall, “Hail the Conquering Hero” is a film that is both entertaining and thought-provoking. It is a film that is worth watching multiple times and one that is sure to make you laugh and think. It is a film that is a true classic and one that deserves to be remembered for many years to come.
"Out of the Darkness" starts off reeling on a straining synthesizer line but is swept away by Little Steven's guitar bullies its way in and the song fizzes out soon after.

album review

"Justice" and "Los Desparaceados" thankfully work around this naivete by way of the crafty bass riffs of Jean Beauvoir. There's an enjoyable break during "Los Desparaceados" when Beauvoir, percussionist Monti Louis Ellisson, and keyboardist Pee Wee Weber dive into a hot outbreak of Latin-funk. The Disciples of Soul rhythm section is hard at work throughout the album, welding a leaner, harder sound, evident on such shakers as "Fear" and "Undefeated (Everybody Goes Home)." "Fear" has a background vocal mix as ominous as a gust from the North, searing ground vocal mix as ominous as the thundering bass line but is swept away when Little's bullies its way in and the song fizzes out soon after.

Van Zandt's high-pitched guitar begins to sour on songs such as "Justice." "Out of the Darkness," and "Los Desparaceados (The Disapp- eared Ones)") simply because it's the same thing over and over again.

"Voice Of America" speaks out

Mark E. Bardgett

Little Steven

Voice Of America

Steven Van Zandt pre-cipitously sets out on his latest album "Voice Of America," to create a new image, an intensely political image clearly voiced protest against Salvadoran death squads, the state of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, the disregard of human rights, and even the Berlin Wall, among numerous other issues.

In order to enhance his message, Little Steven works on a heavier, harder frequency, weaving the upbeat horn section which gave his last album, "Men Without Women," such an intoxicating Motown shine, and relies solely on his guitar to fill the void. To his advantage, the lead guitarist for the Boss car ries it off on much of "Voice Of America," though it tends to waiving the upbeat horn section.

The album is brought to a simmer on the serene "Checkpoint Charlie," an indictment of current East-West relations, and specifically, a yearning for the downing of the Berlin Wall, a wall "so wide, can't get around it ... so high, can't climb over," a wall that's "Gotta come down.

The feeling turns brighter in the thundering "Among The Believers," a cut well-defined by Beauvoir's slapping bass and a loose-handed guitar sliding in safely for a soulful sound. It takes in all the elements of the album and channels them into a refined style easily setting it off as the best cut here.

If you liked the spirited soul of "Men Without Women," you might be taken aback by the crude roughness packaged in "Voice Of America" but there is hardly a doubt in Little Steven's lyrical ability. His stinging rebuttals to society's ills are bounded by music that is still alive and vibrant.

Every spring, Washington University holds its famous Thirteenth Carnival. And every spring, St. Louis. The riverwomen were crushed by UMSL.

I think UMSL took SIU-E for granted," UMSL Coach Ken Hudson said. "This weekend, we beat them rather easily before in their tournament last week, and I think you can see that this would be a very easy game.

Consequently, the Cougars drew first blood. At 15 minutes, 16 seconds, SIU-E forward Sam Balota took a quick pass from Helen Holloran and zipped in on the goal with a quick finish. The ball from five yards out past goalkeeper Ruth Harker to put SIU-E up 1-0.

"It was a really hard shot," Hudson said. "Ruth didn't have a chance to do anything.

Raising the Cougars' lead to 2-0, Robinson was credited with her second goal of the weekend.

Women defeat SIU-E, 5-2

John Conway reporter

For 45 minutes last Friday night, the women's soccer team was worried about doing something it had never done before — lose to the Cougars of Southern Illinois University — Edwardsville.

The lady kickers had to overcome a 2-0 deficit, but managed to post an impressive 2-5 triumph over a respective Riverwomen squad. Despite losing, SIU-E now ranked 17th in the nation among Division 2 schools.

As of the "win" situation, a loss to SIU-E would have doubled the chances of a post-season action.

The Cougars, on the other hand, had nothing to lose and could symbolically be a team of UMSL's caliber.

When action started at 6 p.m. SIU-E clearly became the aggressor, and was able to maneuver throughout the Riverwomen, who appeared rather lackadaisical.

Women defeat SIU-E, 5-2

John Conway reporter

For 45 minutes last Friday night, the women's soccer team was worried about doing something it had never done before — lose to the Cougars of Southern Illinois University — Edwardsville.

The lady kickers had to overcome a 2-0 deficit, but managed to post an impressive 2-5 triumph over a respective Riverwomen squad. Despite losing, SIU-E now ranked 17th in the nation among Division 2 schools.

As of the "win" situation, a loss to SIU-E would have doubled the chances of a post-season action.

The Cougars, on the other hand, had nothing to lose and could symbolically be a team of UMSL's caliber.

When action started at 6 p.m. SIU-E clearly became the aggressor, and was able to maneuver throughout the Riverwomen, who appeared rather lackadaisical.

"I think UMSL took SIU-E for granted," UMSL Coach Ken Hudson said. "This weekend, we beat them rather easily before in their tournament last week, and I think you can see that this would be a very easy game.

Consequently, the Cougars drew first blood. At 15 minutes, 16 seconds, SIU-E forward Sam Balota took a quick pass from Helen Holloran and zipped in on the goal with a quick finish. The ball from five yards out past goalkeeper Ruth Harker to put SIU-E up 1-0.

"It was a really hard shot," Hudson said. "Ruth didn't have a chance to do anything.

Raising the Cougars' lead to 2-0, Robinson was credited with her second goal of the weekend.

It was close to the awards presentation of the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics — and the Senior Olympics have witnessed more prestigious events. Even pro and college baseball players receive trophies for excellence.

But when the basketball-oriented Rivermen fired that last shot of sweat, buried that last muscle, for the last time, it was worth it. Basketball shoes, Slim. You know, high tops.

Cardiac Skaters: Rivermen split pair of games

Warning: The Surgeon General has determined that attending UMSL hockey games may be dangerous to your health.

Jim Goulden reporter

The UMSL hockey team narrowly escaped last week's action with a 3-1 record. UMSL dropped a heartbreaker to St. Louis Community College-Meramec, 4-3, and then rebounded to hold off a late Saint Louis University surge, 7-6.

Last Thursday at the Affton Ice Rink, UMSL had all its fans' hearts aching as they cheered on the Goalbusters, but UMSL came up 25 seconds short as Meramec scored at 15 minutes, 25 seconds of the third period to snatch a victory from the Rivermen.

Butch St. George put UMSL on the board at 3:37 of the first period with a perfect pass from the back. Lesley Mirth made the rebound past a surprised SIU-E goalie, putting the puck home. Chris Rainieri and Pete Serrano assisted on the goal.

SLU scored with just over two minutes to go in the game and again sweaty palms were evident in the stands, despite the freezing temperatures inside the North County Recreational Complex.

Never fear though, Goldkamp, who should have been in the penalty box, scored an empty net goal with 1:22 remaining, with St. George tallying his fourth point of the night with the assist.

SLU made it interesting again, as it scored 38 seconds after Goldkamp's goal. UMSL was able to survive the final Billiken assault and skate off with a 7-6 victory.

The fans walked out gasping for air and grasping at their hearts, but were relieved nonetheless, that UMSL survived this battle.

Hockey notes: Starr expects high scoring center Jim Demos to return to the lineup soon. Demos has been out with pneumonia and has yet to play a regular season game.

his offense. He moved Jan Getemeyer from back to forward, and back Theresa Klaus to sweeper, in pressure and confuse the Cougar defense.

Roche risked a strategy paid off. The Riverwomen doubled their shots on goal in the second half and limited SIU-E to just three.

The Riverwomen finally began capitalizing when Roche grabbed a pass from back Leslie Mirth and fired a shot into the SIU-E net at 8:42 to even the score 3-3. From there on out, the wall began to cave in on the Cougars.

After backs Klaus and Sue Hudea easily funded off a SIU-E scoring attempt, Klaus's Kathy Goulden broke away down field and easily put it past a diving Cougar goalie, putting the Riverwomen on top for the first time in 2-2. "Kathy had a great game," Hudson said. "She and Cathy Roche really were impressive. Impressive." A storm of two straight goals pushed the Cougars once and for all, with a perfect pass from the back. Leslie Mirth from 25 yards away, making the final tally one of the strangest happenings of the season. After scooping up a muffed SIU-E shot, goalie Jordan kept the ball out for an unpenalty SIU-E defense. Gassen then grabbed the puck and kicked it past a surprised SIU-E goalie for the final score. Believe it or not, Harker was given the assist on the play.

"It was really a terrific pass," Hudson said. "It sailed clear over their backs' heads."

The victory lifted the Riverwomen's record to 8-4. UMSL, which outshot the Cougars 17-4, takes on the Miners from the University of Missouri-Rolla at 4 p.m.

goals and UMSL had to wait until 10:07 of the second period when Bob Janemeyer ripped the cords to tie the game at 2-2.

Jim LaPorta put UMSL back on top as he scored 2:56 into the final period, with Ken Witbrodt and Mark Aegerter getting credited with the assist. Roche really were impressive."

"That's and Cathy SLU game," Hudson said.

"It made it interesting again," Roche put UMSL back on top with a perfect pass from the back. Leslie Mirth from 25 yards away, making the final score 4-2. Klaus was credited with the assist.

Aegerter ripped a shot past the Cougar goalie, putting the puck home. Chris Rainieri and Pete Serrano assisted on the goal.

and not finding bad and not blaming one another, but because it was fun. It was the type of fun you appreciate when something "unfun" is over. Conditioning is over: what fun. "I think the're having fun," Meckfessel said, timing a circuit of "unfun" sprints.

It took forward Ted Meier, a junior college transfer before joining UMSL last season, a little while to give in: "Oh, it was another day of workouts," he hesitated. But when his color returned, he said, "It's not that we're doing a lot of different drills that we didn't do in practice, but it's a chance to show everyone on the team that you're working." Remember the Olympic ideal? Sure. Competition for the sake of competition. Games for the sake of games. Spiritmanship for sportsmanship—what that was here Friday afternoon on a much smaller level than the nationally glittered battle of athletes. They wish they had sold baseball caps, banners, some kind of souvenirs.

Meier and Downe Young might have been on your next box of Wheaties, Slim.

Young was the overall Gold Medal winner in the Small Man Division, and Meier took top honors in the Big Man Division. Young finished first in the bench press and agility run. Meier did his best Carl Lewis impersonation in winning the 5,000-meter run, agility run, sprints and bench press.

Other winners in the "Medal events were Ron Porter (sit-ups, Big Man), Greg Williams (vertical jump, Big Man), Bob McCormack (5,000-meter run, Little Man), Joey King (agility run, Little Man), and Dellindo Fox (sprints, Little Man).

"Meier should be as good during the last two minutes of the game as he is in the first two minutes," Meckfessel said, giving credence to the importance of the game as he is in the first two minutes, "He has excellent strength and endurance which will make him a steadier and more consistent player.

OK. But what does a two-minute sit-up mean to you? How do you feel about popping a 15-footer? It's not really 5,000 meters on a drive to the hoop, is it?

What does basketball and sit-ups have to do with each other?" Meckfessel asked, before answering the question. "Abdominal strength helps you to move laterally and that's important on defense. A good defensive player can do 75 to 80 sit-ups in two minutes, and so on.

Don't laugh, Slim. Meckfessel knows what he says. Conditional athletes are better athletes, they say. "I think by far this is the best bunch of athletes since I've seen here," Meckfessel boasted.

They may be the best, but not World Class. One only needed to look at the Riverwomen after each event, at McCormack following the day's ordeal. Their exhaustion was part of my fun. "I'm always like this," McCormack said, still panting and reviving with a sudden flux of color to his face. "I'm always red, I'm Irish. I look like this in a few weeks, serving only as 'The Answer.'

He must have been kidding because he said he would turn green for the start of the UMSL basketball season which tips off Nov. 18.

"I'm a senior," McCormack added. "I can't keep up with those big guys and the young guys. But us little guys are better athletes because we have better endurance."

Well, Slim, I'm sorry you were unable to be here. There was an abundance of free tickets if you had any connections. And when the National Anthem was played at 5 a.m., on Channel 4, I got goose bumps. Traffic, though, was backed up because of the untimely road construction from Columbia to I-4.

But it's over for the Rivermen, and that's fun. As always, the winter sports begin in a few weeks, serving only as trivia answers to the 1984 UMSL Basketball Olympic questions.

But these guys hope the season will be fun. Slim. That's what all of this was about—The Season.

"We're going to be a better team than last year," McCormack promised. "We have experienced players (many of whom are JUCO transfers) coming in."

"The key to the season is how hard we worked on conditioning and how hard we will work in practice now," Meckfessel said. "He was happy with the Olympic results and had as much fun as anyone with that comical stopwatch in his hand.

It was patriotic, Slim.

men continued to blast away at the Bears' net. In fact, UMSL would fire at the Washington U. goal 14 times before the buzzer sounded at halftime. In the meantime, UMSL was busy setting up its next goal.

As Washington U. was trying desperately to clear the ball downfield, Craig Westbrook intercepted, dribbled through a maze of players and passed to McAlone who rocketed a shot into the net from 20 yards out at 4:52 for his second tally of the evening. The goal allowed UMSL to lead 2-0.

In the meantime, Chopin began to outplay the Rivermen during the first half form, which ultimately led to intercept.

As a result of the goal, the once-dead offense of Washington U. accelerated its attack and began to outplay the Rivermen for most of the second half. At 69:29 Chopin tied the score by blasting in a shot from 20 yards out unassisted. It was his second of the evening and 13th tally of the season. Chopin has scored at least one time in each of the Bears' last nine games.

With the score now tied 2-2 and regulation time running out, tensions grew between the two teams and tempers flared. Consequently, several "yellow card" cautions were made. Rivermen forward Hantak was given a yellow card at 79:08 for an unnecessary foul and Washington U. midfielder John Brili was given a yellow card at 80:58 for making a cross-body block on UMSL goalkeeper Stahl when Stahl clearly had the ball in his possession.

Time ran out in regulation and so did Washington University's luck. In the first of two overtime periods, the UMSL offensive attack, apparently absent in the second half, returned in its first-half form, taking control of the game.

Once again, McAlone proved to be bad luck for the Bears. McAlone was fouled as he was driving toward the Washington U. goal. The foul set up a free kick for Craig Westbrook which turned out to be the winning score. At 92:53 Westbrook sailed the free kick through a wall of defenders and into the Bears' net to put the Rivermen on top to stay, 2-3.

A second overtime period was played but neither team scored. Washington University failed to take a shot on goal in either of the two overtime periods.

The Rivermen outshout the Bears 26-7. It was the 11th victory of the season for UMSL and only the second loss of the season for Washington University. Now 6-2-2, UMSL leads the all-time series between the two teams 11-1-1.

Two days after the victory, the Bears traveled to Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville on Friday. And for the third straight year, UMSL defeated the Cougars by a score of 2-0. SIUE dominated the early minutes of the game, peppering the UMSL goal with shots from all angles, but Stahl, who made 16 saves and recorded a shutout, kept the Cougars from putting points on the board.

"If we play like that, there's not too much luck one (lucky for the Bears, that is) . After UMSL's record to 12-1-1, tying the school's record of 12 regular season wins previously set in 1980 and 1983. SIU-E, which outshot the Rivermen 20-14, dropped to 6-4-1. The Cougars, though, still hold a 10-5-2 series lead over UMSL.

UMSL returns to action tomorrow night when the Rivermen battles archival University of Missouri-Rolla at 8 p.m. They're scheduled to wind up regular season play against Quincy College on Oct. 27, but may have to play a make-up with Southeast Missouri State University after that date.
