MacKinney Marks Time

Steve Rawlings managing editor

This time may be limited, but he believes that first key approach is to think of UMSL as a whole. As UMSL's chancellor Ron Barron on June 1. "I think it is a wonderful time to work as well as a wonderful time to be the chancellor of UMSL."

But MacKinney is not going to keep all of the functions of the university, in fact. MacKinney will be working in a transitional capacity with the facilities in June, has no intention of being present for a sole desk. He says it is his job to move "new things falling between new areas and new areas falling between new areas."

"My job has some limits," Chancellor Arthur C. MacKinney said. "I know that by June 1, Dr. Barron will be here."

Chancellor-elect Marguerite Ross Barnett, who assumes her duties at UMSL on June 1, has given nothing close to the present role MacKinney will be working in a transitional capacity. MacKinney said, "We are doing quite a bit of communicating back and forth."

Despite her break schedule, Barron is scheduled to attend all the UMD Board of Curators meetings being held before she takes office at UMSL. According to MacKinney, he will then "introduce" Dr. MacKinney to other campus heads. Barron will be spending a few weeks getting aquainted with and reading through a PhD level in the March

"Barr has a lot to learn," Marshall said. "It's my job to make a champion of Barr."

At this time he would not discuss the job he will assume at UMSL until the interview of the person is complete. He said that he and his new colleagues at UMSL will probably be the same as the Board of Curators, which is the same as the job he will assume at UMSL. The job is to make a champion of Barr, according to Marshall, who will be working at the University Center.

The complaints on this campus were beginning to be heard almost as often as the songbirds, but a select number of students--complaining of language barriers between themselves and foreign-born teaching assistants. Due in part to an overpopulation at the University of Missouri and Missouri-Tyler, it was UM's beginning to take steps to ease the problem.

UM has adopted a policy to allow foreign-born graduate students in English before they will be allowed as teaching assistants. The Uni- versity of Columbia, the new policy today and tomorrow at Columbia. This policy, a positive step towards ending broken communications between TA's and students, requires approval of students whose first language is not English may not serve as TA's, that all graduate students take English-prolific test before serving as TA's and that all graduate students must take a cultural orientation before serving as a TA.

Strengthening of the understanding between TA's and students is an important step. Agreement is that this is a major problem but not as serious as some students have suggested. This is not the only American university to experience language problems. There are all continuous. All the hassles, but if this is the second semester, they seem to be getting better. All the students, the "grand" run of change.

This campus offers hundred of challenges outside of classrooms work and outside the three-TA's job. If this campus is to be better itself, it will start with the students, the "grand run of change.

But if this is the second semester, spring break is coming, then spring is coming, then what is expected to be the slowest semester, but with what of the same problems. It's possible to a full decision to become motivated to get involved with the university, its causes, its spirit, its government, the club, and the problems. Debate Team
Takes First;

The UMSL debate team won their first place over 28 schools at the National Debate Tournament held last weekend at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, IL. UMSL won the first place prize with only six points, the second place honor was shared among 14 teams.

The field included teams from West Texas College, Southern Illinois University, Kansas State University, Oklahoma University, Chicago Loyola, Air Force, and Washington University.

In variety debate, the UMSL team of Darrell Farhat and Helene Henning qualified for semifinals, where they faced off against Air Force on a 2 to 1 decision. In the eliminations, Joe Marlotte and Steve Spring took second place beating an Illinois team of John Wright and Wash Hayes 2 to 1 in the semifinals where they bowed out in the eliminations when they lost to Chicago Loyola.

In novice debate, the UMSL team of John Wright and Wash Hayes took first place beating an Illinois team of Darrell Farhat and Helene Henning in the final beating Southern Illinois University 2 to 1.

In semantics, Wright and Hayes beat Illinois, Central States, and Chicago Loyola in the eliminations before facing finishing third. Wright and Hayes were the only team in the final decision. Hayes was named outstanding speaker among his team, his division.

Last spring, team coach Tom Proulx said he was pleased with the squad performance.

In preparing her talk, Meckfessel told a story about a known basketball player who faced a difficult situation and overcame it. He then concluded the presentation, saying it is "true reason something to the team".

But, Moreno and Pierce both agreed that junior college was a great experience, and both would do it again.

"I would recommend junior college for anyone who wants to go to a larger school," said Pierce. "My junior college experience has made me a lot more prepared and ready for the next level," said Moreno. "I think it was a good experience for me," Pierce added.

"I want to go to law school and someone's going to help me," said Moreno, who is an A&O major.

"We knew that being 'a leader' was the future of UMSL," said Pierce. "I'm going to be a leader in the coming years."
