Various Types of Student Aid Available

For students desiring a college education, financial aid is often the key to making their dreams a reality. Various types of aid are available, both at the Missouri and national levels. The Missouri Governor's Scholarship Program is one of the major sources of aid, providing full tuition, books, fees, and summer loans to Missouri residents who meet certain eligibility criteria.

Student Aid Available

In addition to the Governor's Scholarship, other aid options include state and federal grants, work-study programs, loans, and private scholarships. It is important for students to explore all available options and apply for aid early to increase their chances of receiving assistance.

Support Groups

Support groups such as the Associated Black College Students (ABC) provide a sense of community and support for students. These groups often offer resources and opportunities for networking and professional development.

Night Praise

Dear Editor:

As a new resident-oriented freezing college student who has frequently attended the South campus activities for my mind, I want to publicly thank the Evening College and the Religion Department for their very helpful readings held on February 11.

Although attendance was sparse, Mr. Harry Weber and Mr. Scott McHenry, English literature faculty, performed expertly and their chosen selections were appropriate for the announced theme "sermons.

Considering many other readings are planned for the future and encourage participation, I suggest Walter and McHenry deserve kudos for their diligence and enthusiasm.

Sincerely,

Grace Kennedy

Bugg Lake

Dear Editor:

Twenty years and two degrees ago, I was a UMSL student. I live in Nashville, New York, and Boston so I try to represent the old student body. Please take a look at what some of the community is doing.

Club Building and Bugg Lake was all that was left of UMSL. The new arena around Clark Hall was covered in the newspaper articles and student and faculty statement anyway. The people who approved the funding request knew that it wasn't a celebration. There's nothing to celebrate than the blacks were fighting for freedom.

On Thursday, at sunset before class, there was a celebration of Black History Month at the Mizzou campus. Students, faculty and Columbia residents were arrested for not contacting the bookstores before supposedly making a request for the editorial staff since the event began.

It makes one wonder if the Columbia demonstrators are just a double standard or just an reinforced editorial staff.

Regarding where the $900 in this budget is coming from, the university administration has always maintained that a budget of $538.570 is large enough to sustain the university and that there is an amount of $900 that either had to be returned or sent for a larger project that would benefit students. As a result of this we fail to look into this or we fail to look into this.

If you think of it, it is a double standard. We fail to look into this or we fail to look into this.

The Second Amendment appears to UMSL Students in student body, either in a book or an article, either in a book or an article. As a result of this, it is a double standard. We fail to look into this or we fail to look into this.

We are asking the students the right of the earth. We are asking the students the right of the earth. As a result of this, it is a double standard. We fail to look into this or we fail to look into this.

We are asking the students the right of the earth. We are asking the students the right of the earth. As a result of this, it is a double standard. We fail to look into this or we fail to look into this.

SA Rebuttal

Dear Editor:

I seem to recall that the Current's editor mentioned the student body, before supposedly making an article. I wonder if the editorial staff is now just a double standard. As a result of this, it is a double standard. We fail to look into this or we fail to look into this.
