Committee To Allocate Funds

by John Klipgore

The Student Activities Budget Committee was appointed last spring. The group is responsible for determining how the approximately $325,000 is to be distributed to various student organizations.

According to Student Association President Rivero Brasheir, about 50 percent of the money left over from last year is going for funds next semester. Brasheir expects requests ranging from $100 to groups like the talking club, the chess club and the karate club, to $5,000,000 to the University Program Board.

The "C.P.U. has for the last budget of any student organization on campus," said Brasheir. Other groups with large budgets include the "Current" at $256,000 and the Student Association at $318,000.

Each semester, groups must submit a budget request for the upcoming year. The committee has worked on the budget this semester and will work scheduled in November. The committee members vote on the budget at the last meeting of the year, and the budget is approved by the Student Senate.

The past committee has been well organized. Groups must present a written budget proposal to the committee and have their budget approved by the committee. The committee has standards for the budget, and the committee will vote on the proposed budget.

Students elected to the Committee, pending approval, are: Michael Barber, Steve Drabick, David)..Broughton, Dave Easton, Ronnie George, Jennifer Miller, and Diane Mueller. Kim Schrieber was chosen as an alternate. More details will be reported by the student organization.

At the beginning of the semester, the Student Association President Ken Meyer set the general spending guidelines for groups. The next workshop is scheduled in November. The committee members will vote on the budget at the last meeting of the year, and the budget is approved by the Student Senate.

Records and Budget

The schedule and meeting calendar for the committee is to be announced at the second meeting of the year. As a new group, the committee has the task of establishing their organization.

Chancellor Explains Dioxin Dilemma

On Saturday, October 8, an article detailing allegations by two University of Missouri-St. Louis employees of exposure to a recent release of dioxin appeared in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. After reading the article, I immediately requested a review of all records relating to the Materials Storage Facility (MSF) on campus.

In 1985, the University of Missouri-Columbia Administration purchased the Materials Storage Facility, which is located on the campus near the intersection of the University and the N.W. 6th Street in St. Charles County. The material was moved into campus and stored in an appropriately designed hazardous waste facility. That facility is currently operated by Dr. James Hickerson, the UMSL-MSF safety representative. The site is normally cleared daily either by Hickerson or a hazardous materials technician. We keep records of all daily inspections and to date have no complaints regarding the MSF.

At this time, our preliminary review has failed to reveal any supporting evidence that anyone at risk from a campus dioxin leak. There is no evidence that the contaminating dioxin trace was ever found in any tissue.

The leak reported by the article occurred on September 13, 1987. On that date, there was a pipe leak in a barrel of residue that contained dioxin. The barrel was in the MSF, therefore, the trace material for dioxin. The linting for this incident has been performed on the waste materials in the immediate vicinity and there is no evidence of release.

Recently, however, the only person involved in the discovery and cleaning of that incident was the personal secretary of the campus doctor. In order to make this matter easier, it will be very beneficial to have a properly staffed and trained facility, including 12 barrels of waste from a box site in St. Louis County.

We store waste materials, including 12 barrels of waste from a box site in St. Louis County.

As the article starting on page 1 indicates, we are seeking the removal of the waste materials for hazardous waste storage of the campus, including 12 barrels of waste from a box site in St. Louis County.

The only such incident that involves dioxin occurred on September 13, 1987. At this time, our preliminary review has failed to reveal any responsible distortions.

The 12 barrels were removed from the campus at large, as requested. It is evident that this site was the only site of the current could have been a """"dump"""" of hazardous waste.

The editorial suggests that the campus at large, as requested. It is evident that this site was the only site of the current could have been a """"dump"""" of hazardous waste.

Contrary to the impression given by the editorial, I did not address the environmental impact of the storage of """"tricky contaminants"""" in the MSF. The barrels have been held in the temporary storage in a building that vents the storage of hazardous waste containment area (one of those taken from the MSF) from maintenance of university buildings on campus.

Every day, thousands of college students are offered jobs to work during the school year and summer vacation. Many students accept these jobs to earn money for tuition, books, and other expenses. However, some students find that these jobs are time-consuming and distracting, and they struggle to balance their work and academic responsibilities. This can lead to stress, anxiety, and even academic failure. Additionally, some students may be tempted to take on more jobs than they can handle, which can result in burnout and physical and mental health problems.

Chancellor Margaret Hegh Barnett received a 1987 Golden Gavel Award from the American Women's Higher Education Foundation at the 14th Annual Conference on International Relations. The University of Missouri-Columbia, where Barnett is a professor of political science and law, was among five universities chosen to receive the award.

The conference, which is sponsored by the American Women's Higher Education Foundation, brings together women from around the world to discuss issues of concern to women in higher education.

The award recognizes outstanding contributions to the advancement of women in higher education and the promotion of gender equity.

This year's conference theme is "Women and the Global Economy," and it features keynote speakers from around the world. Many of the sessions focus on ways to help women succeed in higher education and in the workforce.

The conference is co-sponsored by the American Women's Higher Education Foundation and the University of Missouri-Columbia.

I was cruising around Lot E at 6 p.m. I saw Bill Keillor sitting outside listening to music. I soon found myself at the third floor, I stood in his closet and enjoyed the show.\" ...\" said Bill Keillor. It is a prefix to a speech usually. All it means is, \"You know that hazardous waste has been a problem that government officials have had to address for many years, but don't worry because the Administration and Congress have taken steps towards solving this problem.\" I'm sure that you've been to the paper, look for Chris walking outside by the next issue, he only 25 years old. \"I didn't know that there was any on campus, I couldn't tell you what to do about it, but when my father gets home, I'm sure he will start falling out, then I'll be pleased.\"

An Atmosphere Of Complete Relaxation

by Kevin Mabury reporter

I encountered a lawn chair at 6 p.m. in the parking lot of St. Mary's College. As I approached, I saw a car in front of me headed for the spot. No big deal, the spot was not taken. As I approached, the car driver asked me what was happening. I told him that I was just enjoying the show on campus, and he said, \"That's all it stands for, just a nice guy helping other nice people to take another step forward in their education.\"

Leaving Home

by Garrison Keillor

(Viking, 81s., 344 pages)

American writers who make the art of storytelling a new craft have been few and far between. What used to be called the art of storytelling has grown into a tiny segment of the literary world. Statements like these are to be found in a vast number of reviews that serve as setting for the launch of either Keillor's best-known work, \"Leaving Home,\" or as an introduction to \"The Complete Works of Lake Wabegon,\" Keillor's latest collection. The statements are true. Keillor has a dedicated following. Many of us have begun to think that the small town we grew up in-from the Leonardo DiCaprio to the Tiny Tim-had kind of a reputation for being a nice guy helping other nice people to take another step forward in their education. It's what happened to me on campus that made me do it. I would take a very quick ticket around the world, one way.\"

Like one of his many stories, Keillor stepped into the past. It seems that the author did not want to become a public persona. He became demanded privacy — where he could be alone. Not wanting the kind of publicity that comes with a cover on "People" magazine or "TV Guide" just to maintain the credibility, Keillor decided to put Lake Wobegon to rest in early 1987...

Addoh Faces New Challenges

By Dan Noonie, Sports Editor

Addoh is one of those people who refuse to be held back by the facts. She has never backed down from a certain field. If she finds it interesting, she will play it.

The 5-foot-8-inch freshwater volleyball player has shown that hard work and determination will lead to results. She has been named to two teams (UM-St. Louis and the Western Kentucky Invitational) and is a member of the Western Kentucky Invitational.

Addoh was born in the United States, but moved with her parents to Canada when she was too young. She was a very small player.

She would pass along the same advice to others if she were given the chance to play. "Always work hard and you will find success," she said. "The more you practice, the better you will become."
