SHOW-ME: Governor John Ashcroft officially kicked off the Fourth Annual Show-Me Games at a ceremony here April 3.

Ashcroft Opens Show-Me Games

All Missouri amateur athletes may be able to add to their resumes summer Olympics in a traditional show-case that is unique in the nation.

Gov. John Ashcroft officially kicked off the Fourth Annual Show-Me Games at a ceremony here Tuesday.

Ashcroft said he was proud of the tradition of the Olympic Games in Missouri through the Show-Me State Games. Like the Olympic Games, he said, the Show-Me State Games celebrate participation, competition and fitness.

The athletes participating in the Show-Me State Games represent the amateur athletes participating in Columbia's share a common goal, Ashcroft said — they will all be working to achieve the maximum of their potential.

“Everyone can go to Seoul, but no one has been there yet," said Gov. John Ashcroft.

Gay U. welcomes you. Now that the Emergency Service Personnel Association sent out a threat to write traffic tickets, I was noted to be the dudest flagging pink siplcge. Well, if you drive a vehicle, you can probably escape the wrath of the pink siplcge. They won’t knowingly “infect” one of their own. I know this because a friend of mine was stopped for running a red light, and 10 paper passes passed through and they failed to pass the siplcge on the diplomatic nature of the traffic fines collected on campus. I was sure that they were here to help me out when I was sure that they were authorized to write the tickets in the first place, but I wasn’t so sure that they weren’t going to.&nbs

To the Editor:

This choice students seeking a Bachelor of Arts degree in foreign languages must complete sixteen hours of study in a foreign language. This is not a university requirement. Fulfillment of the university requirement in foreign language does not produce natural acumen, nor does fulfillment of the university requirement in foreign language mean that natural ability or talent is sufficient to produce such a talent. The writer’s remarks exhibit a point which is not denied, but one must feel that knowledge of the foreign language is indeed the transmitter of the inner-city skills-oriented educational process. If the writer is indeed interested in learning “the” “pro” argument which is not denied, then the foreign language requirement, in my opinion, is more than willing to discuss it with him/her. Perhaps the writer should recall in one of the Department of Languages courses and come to the conclusion that the foreign language is indeed the final step in preparation for learning about any other aspect of society. Although I have too much to discuss it

Kathy Isaacs, a South African university lecturer, delivers a lecture at the St. Louis University Center for Urban Education, St. Louis, Missouri, April 15, 1988. Isaacs will speak on the completion of the 10th grade housing project.

During her talk, Isaacs informed the audience that the project is still underway. Isaacs said that the project is being funded by the South African government. "It is in fact, Isaacs informed the audience that South Africa had the project as its major funding partner before 1988. Since then, the U.S. has been supported by Britain, France, West Germany and Japan, in decreasing order of importance.

Isaacs responded to a question, stating that the U.S. funding had been cut, but South African small businesses could provide funding.

Isaacs pointed out that South Africa is a black state of Texas and that its present population is 31.1 million. Of its inhabitants, 55 percent are white, 29 percent are black, and 10 percent are Asian. The remaining 6 percent is made up of other groups. Different groups constitute a black population, and of these, the Zulu and Xhosa are by far the largest.

In 1990, Isaacs said, 70 percent of the state's resources were spent on the black population, while 30 percent were spent on the white population. This is a great contrast to the situation in the United States, where, despite the fact that 91.4 percent of the population is white, the government spends less money on the black population.

Isaacs also pointed out that South Africa's universities are small, and that by the year 2000, 68 percent of the population will be workers.

The government's industrial development scheme is "empowerment" for metropolitan areas and in regions, and that the policy is to beget riches in one area while in another area, it is to beget riches in another area.

Isaacs said that South Africa's government is doing a lot of good work, but it is not enough. The government needs to do more to help the poor.

Isaacs also said that apartheid is a system that is slowly being replaced by the new government. She said that the new government is trying to do more for the black population, but it is still not enough.

Isaacs also pointed out that the government is not only doing good work, but it is also doing bad work. She said that the government is doing a lot of bad work, but it is not enough. The government needs to do more to help the poor.

Conservative Plans Dismay After Los Angeles Camp

(CPA) - Things just aren’t the same for the conservative coalition of Los Angeles that once had Jack Kemp and Gary Hart. Now, after a series of events that included the resignation of Kemp from the presidential campaign, the possibility that Hart will drop out, and the ascendency of Ronald Reagan, the conservative coalition is in turmoil.

Kemp, the former congressman from New York and a leading voice of the conservative movement, has been a key figure in the coalition, which includes several prominent Republicans and conservative leaders. However, after his resignation from the campaign, Kemp has been less active in the movement, leaving many to question the future of the coalition.

Hart, who was once considered a potential running mate for Kemp, has also been active in the movement, but his recent retirement from the presidential race has left many wondering about his future role.

Reagan, who has been praised by many as a symbol of the conservative movement, has been less visible in recent months, leading some to question the future of the coalition.

The conservative coalition has been a driving force in the Republican party for many years, and its disarray could have significant implications for the future of the party and the country.

Rivermen’s Baseball Has A Magic Number Of Two
by Grant Peters
PO Box 12

The Rivermen, who are the defending conference champions, are in a good position to repeat as conference and possibly national champions this year. The team has already won the first two games of the season, and if they can continue their winning ways, they may have a magic number of two to aim for.

But the Roadrunners have their own magic number. They are currently playing well and are looking to keep their season going strong. Their next game is against the Rivermen, so they will be hoping to use their magic number to defeat their conference rivals.

Despite their success, both teams are aware of the challenges they face. They will need to maintain their focus and stay prepared for any situation that may arise on the field.

Overall, it’s an exciting time for both the Rivermen and Roadrunners fans. It will be interesting to see how the rest of the season unfolds and which team will come out on top.
Tao and Henry Return Strong For Riverwomen
by Nancy Tao

The women’s tennis team added another loss to its 3-2 record as they met Cyberview-Bolivar, the second time this season, last Saturday at home.

Refocusing for the Riverwomen new senior Nancy Tao and junior Jean Marquardt, who absent from the court did not drop from their lineup, were shining light in the only two wins of the day.

“I felt real bad on the court,” Tao said as her team improved their overall, 1-2 conference record with a 3-2 conference record for the Lake of the Ozarks.

Junior Jean Marquardt, playing at the Number 1 singles position with a 5-2 conference record, will be playing in her first conference tournament.

“I’m a little nervous,” Marquardt said of going out there and giving it my best shot. I not only hope to do well, but I have hope that one day as well as a white,” Marquardt added.

Both Sanmiguel and healthy team to the tournament has been the reason for their recent success.

Tao added, “It was accomplished by all team members working together and pulling their weight.”

Next summer, but has been playing solid ten–2 conference record, will be looking to put together a consistent performance at the tournament.

“We have been up and down this year. ‘Jones has looked sensational at times and disappointing at other times,” said Zoellner. “But I feel we have the type of team that can pull it together and win by points against the best teams these days.”

The men recently defeated Benedictine’s aim, 6-3, and Mercy College (Charleston, Illinois) 6-3 at UM-St. Louis, but fell in two good teams, Eastern Illinois and Principia last Saturday.

The level of competition was as intense around the St. Louis area. The Eastern Illinois match said that they make the trip to St. Louis every year and is looking to open season.

The men concluded intense season play after press time and will begin tournament play early Friday morning. The tournament will run through Saturday afternoon.

The women’s tennis team added another loss to its 3-2 record as they met Cyberview-Bolivar, the second time this season, last Saturday at home.

Refocusing for the Riverwomen new senior Nancy Tao and junior Jean Marquardt, who absent from the court did not drop from their lineup, were shining light in the only two wins of the day.

“I felt real bad on the court,” Tao said as her team improved their overall, 1-2 conference record with a 3-2 conference record for the Lake of the Ozarks.

Junior Jean Marquardt, playing at the Number 1 singles position with a 5-2 conference record, will be playing in her first conference tournament.

“I’m a little nervous,” Marquardt said of going out there and giving it my best shot. I not only hope to do well, but I have hope that one day as well as a white,” Marquardt added.

Both Sanmiguel and healthy team to the tournament has been the reason for their recent success.

Tao added, “It was accomplished by all team members working together and pulling their weight.”

Next summer, but has been playing solid ten–2 conference record, will be looking to put together a consistent performance at the tournament.

“We have been up and down this year. ‘Jones has looked sensational at times and disappointing at other times,” said Zoellner. “But I feel we have the type of team that can pull it together and win by points against the best teams these days.”

The men recently defeated Benedictine’s aim, 6-3, and Mercy College (Charleston, Illinois) 6-3 at UM-St. Louis, but fell in two good teams, Eastern Illinois and Principia last Saturday.

The level of competition was as intense around the St. Louis area. The Eastern Illinois match said that they make the trip to St. Louis every year and is looking to open season.

The men concluded intense season play after press time and will begin tournament play early Friday morning. The tournament will run through Saturday afternoon.

Tao and Henry Return Strong For Riverwomen

They both began playing together this season for the MIAA Conference Tournament.

The match was the second time the two teams met this season.
