Dioxin Removal Slowed By Government

by John Kilgore
associate news editor

Dioxin waste currently being stored by the University will not be removed until at least the facility last week. The hazardous waste storage facility wasn't originally designed to contain or prevent migration of dioxin and therefore built to contain or prevent migration of dioxin and therefore

The facility is undergoing renovation for the next two years. The campus will be temporarily closed during this time to facilitate the renovation.

In addition to making changes in the facility, the University is also implementing several new procedures to prevent further contamination of the campus. These procedures include:

1. Conducting regular inspections of the facility to ensure that all dioxin-contaminated materials are removed and disposed of properly.
2. Implementing a new system for tracking and managing hazardous waste.
3. Training all employees who work with or handle hazardous waste on proper disposal methods.
4. Installing additional ventilation systems to prevent the spread of dioxin.

The University is committed to ensuring the safety and health of all members of the campus community. We appreciate your patience and understanding as we work to improve the facility and prevent further contamination.

ABC Hosts Series On Black History

Help Offered For Children Of Alcoholics

by Paul Thompson
news editor

Children who grow up in alcoholic households may suffer differently from adults who have not lived with similar circumstances. They may have problems in adult relationships caused by childhood behaviors that they learned as children.

UM-St. Louis' Counseling Service is planning next month's second-annual conference to address the needs of children of alcoholics. The conference, titled "The Adult Child of Alcoholics: A Biannual Conference," will be held next month in Webster University.

The conference will feature speakers from Missouri and other states who will discuss various aspects of the Adult Child of Alcoholics (ACA) movement. The ACA movement is a network of groups that helps children of alcoholics deal with the problems they face in their lives.

Student Voter Registration Drive Set

by Paul Thompson
news editor

UM-St. Louis students will have a chance to vote next week to register to vote.

The Student Association and MoPIRG (Missouri Public Interest Research Group) are sponsoring, in cooperation with the Webster Student Senate, a voter registration drive on campus.

Students who live in either St. Louis City or St. Louis County may be able to register on Feb. 9 and 10 from 11 am to 7:30 pm in the Student Center or in St. Louis County on Feb. 10 from 9:00 am to 3:00 pm in the Student Center.

Students who do not live in either St. Louis City or St. Louis County may register at the Thomas Jefferson Library during daytime hours.

Student voters are also encouraged to help their classmates register. For information on assisting in the drive, call MoPIRG at 534-7541.

The UM-St. Louis voter registration campaign in part of an NCVI office project and is intended to increase voter participation to UM-St. Louis, St. Louis and Missouri universities, as well as in St. Louis Community Colleges' three campuses with partnerships (local).

The NCVI, a non-profit, non-partisan organization, is an adjunct to the exhibit program of registering thousands of Missouri students over the last two years.

The significance of this year's drive is to get Missouri students to the voting booth. Call MoPIRG at 534-7541.

Major Library Expansion Will Begin This Spring

by John Kilgore
associate news editor

Construction on a 3.2 million library building addition is intended to begin sometime this spring. The new wing, half the size of the present library, will have more open areas, provide students with more efficient access to campus library officials said.

The two-story construction, on the east side of the campus, will add 18,000 square feet of construction will be completed in two phases and will provide increased services to students.

The new building will include a library reading room, a group study area, and a computer lab. It is estimated that it will be ready to use in 1986.

The library will be designed to accommodate the students' increasing needs for computer and research information. According to Rapp, in 1984 the library was handling 1.8 million circulation transactions; in 1985 the library was handling 2.5 million transactions.

that have not been imposed on other students for a similar wrongdoing. It is another thing to feel that student as an example. We have to ask why students have been held to different standards than others who have not been imposed on other students for a similar wrongdoing.

When specific concerns about how the matter is being handled and the responses were vague and noncommittal. We at first believed the student's concerns of the student's position in the campus community. However, after investigating the matter, we believe that the issue should be addressed. Could the student be seeking to be subject to a less routine administrative action?

The student's constitutional rights as a citizen have been compromised within the administrative guidelines regarding discipline. Has the administration been vague and noncommittal in this case? We want to believe that discipline is always applied evenly.

Stil Glowing

The issue of dioxin continues to contaminate the reputation of the University of Missouri central administration. Government employees are warning students of the serious dangers of dioxin being stored in a facility off campus.

The solution isn't as desirable as removing the waste from the campus. The upgrading will not be a total waste of material that is a potential threat to the students and staff. The upgrade will be necessary to rid the campus of dioxin or other dangerous waste.

Enthusiastic Fans Aren't Ours; Why Not?

Dear editor:

Last night at the UMSL, St. Louis basketball game, the stands were filled with enthusiastic fans. However, in our discussions, these fans were not interested in the outcome of the game. No, inside our gymnasium was a sea of red, representing sports fans.

Last night's crowd of spectators was almost an embarrassment to the University. Many students are looking for recognition, especially if they played a part in team success. The student body is not a collection of sports fans.

It's Your Choice

How many times have you or someone you know complained about the present officials in local, state, and national government?

This year instead of complaining, register and vote. The liberal UMSL, St. Louis holds a voter registration drive every year. If you are not registered, you cannot vote.

Register now before you lose your right to vote. Or, if you are already registered, take advantage of your right to vote. The political change that is necessary. Without support from the government, higher education will revert back to the days of colonial times when only the rich and the desired individuals were educated.

For once, think of something besides passing your college classes or drinking yourself to oblivion at the next fraternity party and take control of your future by voting.

Search for the candidates who have a position on education that represents your views. If the candidates have no position ask them if they are for or against smoke-free campus.

The students need to have their voice heard and listened to. The people of this nation and their parents are the only ones that have any real power for the next four years. Are you willing to let someone without an education or political support into office, and programs and possibly destroy many students' futures? Maybe you can say that you want to vote.

Whose philosophy is the issue boils down to one thing: the vote. The ball is in our court. The students need to take a hard stand to the other side of the usual ballot heart that falls short of the nation.

Anti-Apartheid Update: All Quiet On Divestment Front

February 4, 1988

(CPS) About a year ago, the University of Pennsylvania police were arresting 41 people who had invaded President C. Peter McNeill’s office, demanding the university join 10 institutions in a divestment campaign against the South Africa. The arrests turned out to be the last of any on campus, where protest actions were repeatedly prevented by police administrators, complained of harassment.

But the divestment was quiet two weeks ago when, on Jan. 31, 50 students tried to tell the all South Africans stock in question.

The change was indicative of the anti-apartheid movement on U.S. campuses recently. It has, in short, been very quiet.

"The movement is a victim of its own success," said Mary Shaub, a grad student and anti-apartheid activist at the University of Pennsylvania, who will divest by June 1988.

It was three years ago, in January 1985, that the anti-apartheid movement—a sharply visible effort on a handful of campuses since the 1960s—along with a national phenomenon as diverse of campuses crossed in protests, rallies, and sit-ins.

Since then, of course, the issues has incited political interest at hundreds of schools, and many of these campuses have compiled with the students and faculty, and in some cases even acceded to the students’ demands.

"The suits against the university" into the event and "We are just leaving," said a student activist last fall from an EMU self-organized press.

Now, however, at the time of this writing, the movement is now facing a very quiet front. It’s hard to mobilize people, but the university is now doing a lot of preparation, said a student activist last fall from an EMU self-organized press.

Such movement is at first glance to deal with people’s daily lives, and "We are just leaving," said a student activist last fall from an EMU self-organized press.

Activists are now facing a very quiet front. It’s hard to mobilize people, but the university is now doing a lot of preparation, said a student activist last fall from an EMU self-organized press.

The reasons for divestment from South Africa and South Africa are very compelling, said a student activist last fall from an EMU self-organized press.

The San Francisco 41-dominant organization, according to them, is still working at some campuses through the university, said a student activist last fall from an EMU self-organized press.

Still other groups are shifting their focus to racism in the United States, said a student activist last fall from an EMU self-organized press.

African students against apartheid, for example, picked a Salt Lake City campus stop after the owner passed a sign on the front door warning, "People may not enter.

"Salt Lake is practicing racism, then how can we expect the rest of the world to solve our racial problem," asked a Salt Lake student Tom Price.

Meanwhile, the anti-apartheid movement has sparked a lot of pressure on campuses, said a student activist last fall from an EMU self-organized press.

One thing that has been helpful is that the movement is becoming a lot more visible, said a student activist last fall from an EMU self-organized press.

Gov. Cuomo Proposes Free Tuition To Poor; Middle-Class Angered

ALBANY, N.Y. (CPD) - Gov. Mario Cuomo's proposal to provide a free college education to poor children is drawing mixed reactions from some class and others from New York education. Cuomo has proposed the state guarantee any state scholarship grantee who graduates from high school and goes on to college costs for a New York public college.

"It's a nice as a lot of money, but not enough money that any undergraduate student would be in difficulty," said Cuomo.

The Cuomo administrators, would not agree that the plan would be a saving of $100,000 million to fiscal year 1984-85, when the proposal would be offered.

Students could also see the same amount of money to attend a private college in the state. Tuition, room and board would cost about $5,000 a year at a New York public college.

"We would be very glad to provide this plan," said Cuomo. The proposal, however, would only be accepted on a first-year basis and could be extended to other students who would be accepted on a second-year basis.

"If the state can provide a free college education for all students, then the state should also be able to provide a free college education for poor students," said Cuomo.

The state also has the opportunity to provide a free college education for poor students, but it should be extended to other students who would be accepted on a second-year basis.

"We would have to be careful about the money," said Cuomo. The proposal would also include a plan to provide a free college education for poor students, but it should be extended to other students who would be accepted on a second-year basis.

Grassilli Directs Latest Production

by Lynn Stephens

Jane Grassilli is the guest director for the University Players production of "Bathwater," which is on stage Thursday through Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in the Boxer Theatre.

Grassilli is the assistant director of the Theatre Department at UMSL, and has been involved with theatre at UMSL for seven years.

Grassilli said that the production is to expose theatre majors and theatre students under 23 to the leadership of associate director, John Grassilli, who has directed 35 plays and is associate director of the Theatre Department at UMSL.

The role of炳ine in the Grassilli directed "Bathwater," was to expose theatre majors and theatre students under 23 to the leadership of associate director, John Grassilli, who has directed 35 plays and is associate director of the Theatre Department at UMSL.

"Bathwater" is about bringing up a bunch of kids in an IRS non-prescription look at family life.

The problem of raising a child is exaggerated, it's a really, really, wild satire," he said.

"In this play, there are a few scenes that are really funny, but there are also some really serious moments that are very moving," Grassilli said. "I think that this production is going to be a real hit for the audience."

The Crest of a Knave Jethro Tull

Racially, few if any bands have released an album which upon first listen, make an as strong an impression as Jethro Tull's new release, "The Crest of a Knave." The latest LP from Jethro Tull can justly be called a modern musical tour de force, comparable to the musical masterpieces of the Beatles and the Beach Boys. Jethro Tull, being one of the best known bands in the world today, has been able to, through the years, develop a musical style that is both musically and lyrically sound.

The Crest of a Knave contains one of the most musically creative arrangements of the release. The LP flows easily from one musical style to another, maintaining a sense of unity throughout the album. The Crest of a Knave is the first album that Jethro Tull has released that is about a listen-er's notebook in the recording and arrangement of the release. The band, in conjunction with radio stations in various cities, held listening parties in radio stations throughout the country. The band also gave interviews to the music programs proposed for the LP and then gave the band their opinion of the record. The songs the people liked were used on the LP. This input was a major factor in the fact that the songs appeared on the LP as well. All other people also participated in the making of this album, with Ian Anderson's thanks. This approach apparently worked well for this release. However, the idea of average radio listeners having such a major influence on an artist's work, particularly a musician of Anderson's quality, makes me nervous.

The Crest of a Knave is performed well and continues in the tradition established on the earlier albums. From the beginning of the album, the driving electronic beat of "Hriam's March," the brooding nature of "Bedbug," and the overall concept "Fair and Farm on the Freeway," Jethro Tull proves in ability to cover a variety of musical areas satisfactorily. These songs are based heavily in Anderson's compositional style performances and are backed by some excellent guitar work by Martin Barre. The LP ends with "Stepping Stones," a track that may be the closest the band gets to freeform improvisation.

This band is one of the best bands in the world today, and they have released an album that is awaited by fans. This album is a definite must for Jethro Tull fans. However, this album is not recommended for new fans, as it is difficult to come to terms with the music and its style without a background in the band's history.

Rivermen Win Over SEMO With Plitz On The Free Throw Line

by Pam Watz

SPORTS editor

Downs by six points at halftime, the game came down to tying the last ten seconds for Eastern Illinois when Mike Pizz loved a 3-point shot and missed. Chip Pitt caught the rebound and was fouled at the four-foot line.

At the free throw line, Pitt missed the first shot which put the team ahead by one point. Pitt missed again. A buzzer sounded at the buzzer ran out.

The last game in the season, January 31 in the Mark Twain Gym was won by the University of Missouri - St. Louis Central Missouri State 89-74.

Last week, the team suffered a disappointing two loss to Southeast Missouri State on Wednesday, January 31. Kevin Brooks was the highest scorer in that game with 21 points and 7 rebounds.

Pickoff to finish second in the Missouri Valley Conference, the UM - St. Louis Rivermen (24-1, 4-3 in the MIAA), outscored their foes through the conference.

The second half of the conference season begins this week as the Rivermen host Southeast Missouri State (9-10 overall, 3-4 in the MIAA), and journey to Northeast Missouri State.

VOGT SCORES HIGH

by Ariel Lestat

Lifeline and season best seems when Dan Bolini combined with Stuart Vogt's first place finish led the Rivermen to a third place finish in the University of Washington, Saturday.

The meet, hosted by Washington University last weekend, consisted of nine men's teams and 10 women's teams. The squad from UM - St. Louis placed swimmers in every event for the men and women.

Junior guard Jeff Wilson is back in action after recovering from a hip injury. Coach Masters said he is healthy and is making a contribution to the team.

"It's good to have him back," Masters said. "He's a key player for us, and we have more scoring out of Jeff.",

The Riverwomen hope to advance in the MIAA conference.

"It's an excellent opportunity to recognize the accomplishments of our female student athletes for what they have done both on and off the court," said UM - St. Louis Assistant Athletics Director, Don Silvestro.

Twenty-one of the 37 student athletes are programmers or math students, and another 4 are cumulative grade point average of 3.5 or above (on a scale of 4.0).

"There are so many difficulties in trying to be a successful team, and I think it's a great accomplishment," said Silvestro. "It has gotten tougher because of the expanding and tougher competition.

Women's athletics are programmed by Rachel Anderson, Nancy Hopper, Leslie Masters, Kelly O'Neill and Kris Wiltshier.

Some athletes include Marlen Reimer, Donna Barthel, Cheri Barr, Kathy Camo, Sue Darro, Stephanie Gabler, Kathy Geiner, Mary Pat Guinn, Amy Wiltshier and Jennifer Zieg.

Basketball honorees are Lauralee Aldy, Marlene Baric, Linda Borrie, Carrie Cyberg and Melanie Wynn.

Swimming honorees are Marlen Reimer, Cynthia Fumetti and Linda Vogt.

Honor for tennis include Lisa, Nancy Reddi and Nancy Tao.

Volleyball honorees are Cheryl Adair, Joyce Bowersfield, Denise Brain, Chris DeHart, Karen Ellingson, Sharon Kuech, Janet Mielke, Rene Kuehn and Gret Wiltshier.

RIVERWOMEN HOPE TO ADVANCE IN THE MIAA CONFERENCE

The Riverwomen, 8-10 overall, are holding on to fifth place in the Missouri Valley Conference, after losing to Southeast Missouri State, 74-64, and Central Missouri State, 70-59.

"We didn't play bad," said Mike Linn, head coach. "But Southeast Missouri State (3-7) was just in better form than us and it showed up in overtime as we just couldn't get past them.

This week, the women hope to move into the fourth place ranking as they travel to Kirksville and take on Northwest Missouri State (5-3 overall, 3-3 in the MIAA), on Feb.-21, 7 p.m. and host Quincy College on Monday, February 4. Game time is 5:30 p.m.

"It's almost every must win for us," said Larson.

Nominations for the games include Kris Wiltshier, Michelle Pennington, junior, Lisa Bert, guard, freshman, Kathy Coon, guard, junior, Kris Wiltshier, guard, freshman; Caution, forward, freshman; and Denise Masters, forward, senior.

Kris Wiltshier has changed her game since December and has been an important factor in this season.

"Kris has improved because she is playing more," said Larson. "She has improved in every aspect of the game. She is more aggressive and has stepped up in every game." said Davis.

"She wanted to win big. We wanted to prove we have a good team," said Davis.

"I think we will prove it this weekend."
