Three U.M. Louis parking garages that are closed at the present time will remain so, according to Laura Paige, acting temporary secretary of the Board of Curators. At a May 31 meeting in Columbia, the Board of Curators approved the halting of construction of a new Herndon Construction Company building and the abandonment of the "N." The bond is issued worth $46,4 million in revenue.

And while Vice Chancellor for Administration, Robert D. Koster, is optimistic that plans may be underway to fill the "N," he said that it will be the hottest day of the summer.

"We're building them to fill the faculty and staff, not to fill the parking spaces," Koster said. "If we have the capacity by the fall, we will go to a family parking plan and get the students to pay the costs of their parking.

The revenue bond will be repaid by the students, not the state that was the rule in the past, according to Koster. New parking situations will be created and parking fees will increase.

Over the next ten years or so, according to Koster, the state of Missouri does not expect to have any new garage construction at the university.

In addition, Koster said that U.M. Louis is in need of increase, which will be used to pay for parking fees and the costs of the new garages that are coming.

The three garages that are going under construction should be finished by the year 2000.

PARKING FEES: Laura Paige hopes that parking garages "G" (pictured above) as well as "D" will be repaired for the fall.

"Parking fees have been raised twice in the past 20 years. In my view, it should go up every year with inflation. I don't think fees are astronomical. Enrollment generates revenue and we should be building another "structure," Koster said.

As of the fiscal year ending on June 30, 1999, Koster said that $25,000 is paid by the students for use of the garage.

Students Stepped On

It has become common over the past 20 years or so for people to step on the rights of others, from the People's Republic of China. Protests against the Vietnam War were similar to the situation today, and people within the United States often get stepped on, who are not as harshly as in the past.

In the case of the students, they have become more tolerant of the status quo. When protests do arise, like the recent protests in investments in South Korea, it is because the administration has not been as clear in its direction.

Holy Bat Mania, The Dark Knight Returns

by Andrew Kamran

"Hello to the crowd you want. I name this conference the Peddler's Press."

Charley sat down on the couch. While he was still in high school, he had workered out of this carrying case. It was slightly modified by the company that printed the cases. It was made of leather and had a cardboard backing.

"Let's all show a glass of water together."

Pete related with a coffee mug in one hand and a glass of water in the other. He turned the water from the mouth to the hand and back again.

"But you believe in anything? You don't seem empty without God?"

Charley nodded, he sat up on the couch, he came up with a bottle of water and a glass.

"Someday, you know what about your soul?"

"Well..." Charley answered.

"...because I want to help people, I know that I can go back."

"But, I don't believe in anything..."

"You can't seem to understand me. I mean, I can't really believe in this just all knowing."

"We said that I don't have faith... I've just got a man or, I mean, this is the one that I'm going to be... I'm the one who's gonna to rent..."

"Don't you believe in anything? You're not empty without God?"

Charley nodded, he sat up on the couch, he came up with a bottle of water and a glass.

"Yes, I guess you could say my religion is in bed. I can't get all these alleged whole thing and all that just wouldn't have been if it wasn't for me. It's meant to be enjoyed. As a man and not by all right here good times and bad times, ya know. You're just in the middle..."

Charley, hedging, smiled and didn't respond.

"As I, I tell... you're a virgin, you're a virgin, you're a virgin, you're a virgin, you're a virgin..."

"I mean, I... I mean, I..."

"Do you believe in Christ?"

"Yes, Charley."

"Lord, over here!"

"You may not like what he believes. Pete asked, lighting a cigarette.

"Charley shifted his position and tried to pick up the bottle. Pete was to look a textbook example of the Bible."
Meckfessel Signs New Recruits For Next Year

Last week, Mizzou's basketball coach Rick Meckfessel announced the new recruits who will play for the Tigers in the upcoming season. The team's players have agreed to sign the official papers to play for the University of Missouri.

Some of the new recruits include:

- Sophomore forward Jared Williams
- Freshman guard Alex Richman
- Freshman guard Taylor McNeel

The Tigers are expected to have a strong season with these new additions to the team.

Women's Tennis Team Finishes Fifth In MIAA

by David Workman

The University of Missouri-St. Louis women's tennis team finished the season with a disappointing record. Despite their hard work and dedication, they fell short of their goals.

The team's performance was hindered by several factors, including injuries and tough competition. However, they showed resilience throughout the season and continued to improve their skills.

The Tigers finished the season with a 5-10 record, finishing fifth in the MIAA conference. Despite the setback, they are looking forward to the next season and the opportunities it will bring.

When you party, remember to...

Parties can be a fun and social way to unwind, but it's important to remember to stay safe and responsible. Here are some tips for a safe and enjoyable party:

1. Know your limits. Stay within your comfort zone.
2. Eat something before consuming alcohol.
3. Don't drink and drive.
4. Don't drive if you have been drinking.
5. Call a cab if you're too drunk to walk.
6. Be responsible for your friends.
7. Don't drink while driving.
8. Don't drink and drive. Be responsible for your actions.

Remember, safety should always be the top priority when attending a party.
Riverside Women End Season With Loss In Regional

by Tom Kovach  news editor

A weekend was filled with losses, shocks, and a few bright spots for the University of Missouri-St. Louis women’s basketball team. The Riverwomen finished 2-1 in the NCAA regional play in Lakewood, Ohio, but they lost their season to the last time they faced the Lake Erie College team.

The Riverwomen had a disappointing end to their season after a strong start. They won the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association (MIAA) championship and advanced to the NCAA Division II regional tournament. However, their hopes were dashed when they lost to Lake Erie College in the regional semifinal.

Despite the loss, the Riverwomen finished the season with a 19-11 record, good enough to qualify for the NCAA tournament. They lost their opener to the eventual champion, the University of Missouri-Kansas City (UMKC) Kangaroos. In the second round, they faced the University of Missouri-St. Louis (UMSL) women’s basketball team, who had already defeated Lake Erie College in the regional semifinal.

The Riverwomen were hoping to make it to the regional final, but they were unable to overcome the UMSL team. In the end, the Riverwomen were left with a 2-1 record in the NCAA regional tournament.
