West's Side Stories
by Janice West
Clueless leg. I hope someone had a nice birthday season. I did. But not because I got a lot of gifts but because this was the first time I got to be Santa. When you are growing up it seems like Christmas never comes soon enough. Santa, Santa, Santa. Then as you grow through high school and beyond, Santa is gone. You still get gifts but it's not the same. Then one day you have kids and you become Santa. My son had his first birthday on Christmas eve. Christmas morning we took him into the living room. We put all the presents under the tree while he was asleep so he was very surprised to see the presents under the tree. It was an amazing experience to watch your child open these presents that you paid money for and then see your child try to eat them. That catch him play with sandbox toys, know and wrapping paper for the rest of the day. But in a way, this was the best Christmas for me in a long time. It also makes me feel old. I will have to be Santa for at least the next decade, if we have more kids it may be two decades before I'm done being Santa. It's how you quickly you can go from looking for something to do next weekend to looking for long term investment potential of life insurance policies. How quickly you can go from caring about your kids to reminding them that you are Santa. It's how quickly your kids open something you don't mind working on days a week, going to school and considering a part-time job.

You're eyes are important, and so is your yearly eye exam.

Holiday Success

Students at UM-St. Louis have a day off for Martin Luther King Day for the first time since the advent of the holiday. But protests at the Columbia campus indicate that the University’s policy is still out of sync with the wishes of the students.

Last fall, The Board of Curators voted to allow the individual campuses to declare Martin Luther King Day a holiday. The vote passed, but the rest of the campus to remain open. Chancellor Margaret Barnett was commended for leadership in meeting the wishes of students while at the same time upholding the University’s image of being a minority advocate.

The Missouri campus was the first campus to make steps to satisfy the unrest the observance of (or lack of) the holiday has caused on the four campuses. Students here seem to be concerned with how the holiday is handled, with the exception of starting back to school early. The administration should continue its efforts to bring educational programs on civil rights issues to the campus.

Sour Grapes

Why is a Rolla businessman John Powell so upset over the attitude of an engineering program at UM-St. Louis? Probably because fewer students in Rolla means fewer dollars to line the pockets of area businesses.

In towns like Rolla and Columbia, so many businesses exist only to bleed students dry. Powell’s business may not be one of them, but surely he feels the crunch of fewer students in Rolla.

The thing Powell fails to see is that the program at UM-St. Louis will serve students who would not or could not attend UMR. Why should St. Louis give up an engineering program because businesses in Rolla are crying over fewer students to rob blind? It seems hard to believe that Powell’s concern for Missouri taxpayers is greater than his concern for his pocketbook.

Governor John Ashcroft and University officials will be on campus next week to make an announcement about the St. Louis engineering program. Hopefully they will see that the opposition to the program is outweighed by the need for it in St. Louis.

Maybe the businesses in towns such as Rolla and Columbia should consider giving the students a break instead of milking them for every penny they can. More students would be able to attend school away from home then. In turn, they wouldn’t see a decrease in their profits.

Oblivion

The Dream is dead!

I have had enough of all this hallucination about Martin Luther King Day. The time has come for the public to realize that this so-called national holiday is a farce. This holiday is not a “holiday for everyone.”

Every year in the King celebration with awards, for what seems an eternity, we are bombarded with endless rhetoric and fulminations of a man who openly advocated breaking the law. The sole reason King is still in this country is because he had the audacity of meeting an assassin’s bullet.

The fact remains, Martin Luther King was not the most important person to the civil rights movement. Rosa Parks and others were the real movement was about. Further, many blacks do not recognize King as the primary symbol of the American Civil rights movement. Ralph Nafcy, vice president of the Organization of Black Student Associates told The Current last fall that, “Martin Luther King did not represent us black Americans.”

The Court and real blacks that are affected by this would not suffer from reverse discrimination through some proven attempt to alter and balance the scales of racism.

Reason is wrong, but the children should not have to suffer for the sins of the fathers. The issue is not policy action does and thankfully, the courts will make their way down all legislation relating to that notorious statutory

Commissioner Disputes Holiday’s Validity

Columnist Disputes Holiday’s Validity

The truth of the matter is that King was almost as religious as Henry David Thoreau. He is reported to have had multi­ple times to have been tried and convicted. This current movement is aimed to renew the holiday for the benefit of the students.

Critiquing the King holiday has become a difficult matter. Millions of people resist changing the holiday but an attempt to express their feelings for the day of being called racist. Many more than racial separatism from minority black blocs.

Rita Jean Jackson and the Core­nic Chicago show had told us that an entire generation of white males has been brought up so to believe that their rights have been subordinated by blacks. Jackson claimed that this is a myth. But it is the truth and should the Supreme Court among others agree (and shall and come to this view of discrimination. The High Court, in what many consider to be a minority has struck down several laws dealing with mandatory divorces in civil and criminal laws.

The Court and real blacks that are affected by this would not suffer from reverse discrimination through some proven attempt to alter and balance the scales of racism.

This re-creation of Alternatives: Action has caused many to question why we have a national holiday for King when we do not have one for John F. Kennedy, Robert Kennedy, Ruth Park, NDO-Day, Thomas Jefferson, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Barack Obama, or Martin Luther King. These are all days that most equally important if not more than Shiny holiday.

In addition, the government has like­wise Washington and Lincoln’s birthdays together so that many comments, do not know the difference between the two. These two holidays have important. They are supposed to show the citizens of blacks: David Dinkins—the first black mayor of New York. The day was a military man and the father of our country. Lincoln’s birthday is another holiday.

We do not get either of their birthday’s days of our President’s Day which is the official celebration of their birthdays. The reason King Day became a na­tional holiday is the Congress got tired of the need to change the holiday for the sake of the public.

If King were to come back today, I believe that he would not approve of King Day. If it has a “dream” spin, King talked about the day when he would have liked to see a common bad to the public. This was his dream. He talked about the day when he would have liked to see a common bad to the public. This was his dream. He talked about the day when he would have liked to see a common bad to the public. This was his dream. Unfortunately, there are no dreams of white males. This is what King would have liked to see a common bad to the public. This was his dream. Unfortunately, there are no dreams of white males. A graveyard is supposed to be the last place you would want to visit, unless you happen to be buried there yourself. So it is perhaps the most interesting place to visit in the ever-changing landscape like St. Louis.

Bones that were unearthed at a construction site in the city of St. Louis at a construction site in the city at about four o’clock in the afternoon. The site was a construction site in the city at St. Louis where bones were unearthed in the course of a construction project. The excavation was supervised by an archaeologist who was hired by the construction company to ensure that any bones or artifacts were properly documented and reported to the appropriate authorities.

One of the bones that was unearthed was a human skull. It was found lying on its side, with its teeth still intact. The skull was in a good state of preservation, indicating that it had been buried for a significant amount of time. The other bones that were found included a femur, tibia, and fibula from a human skeleton. The bones were found in a single layer, indicating that they were part of a single grave.

The bones were immediately placed in a secure area, and the site was closed to further excavation until the next day. The archaeologist made a thorough examination of the bones and recorded all of the details of the find, including the location, orientation, and condition of the bones.

The bones were eventually sent to a laboratory for further analysis, where they were subjected to a variety of tests, including radiocarbon dating, to determine the age of the site. The results of the tests showed that the bones were from a person who lived during the late 18th century, indicating that the site was likely a cemetery from that period.

The discovery of the bones was a significant find, as it provided important information about the history of the area. The bones were also examined for any potential forensic evidence, which could be used to identify the individual to whom they belonged.

The bones were eventually reburied in a respectful manner, and the site was marked to prevent further disturbance. The discovery of the bones was a reminder of the importance of preserving our history and the importance of respecting the dead.
The scenes in Vietnam leading up to Kovic's injury are given a more realistic and disturbing twist. The movie portrays the harsh realities of life in Vietnam, with the main emphasis being on the emotional and psychological impact on the soldiers. The main character, Oliver Stone, portrays Kovic's experiences with a raw and personal touch. The movie is a powerful depiction of the Vietnam War, with Kovic coming to the surface as he tells his story to the world. Through his emotional changes, the movie provides a glimpse into the lives of the soldiers and the impact of war on their lives.

Kovic comes back to the states, and his parents (excellently played by Raymond J. Barry and Caroline Kava) who raised him in a Catholic family, note that his lost manhood will be a problem. His emotional changes from when Kovic comes back to the states, and his parents (excellently played by Raymond J. Barry and Caroline Kava) who raised him in a Catholic family, note that his lost manhood will be a problem. His emotional changes from Kovic's high school days to his return home are stark.

Cruise finally enters the picture as the Marine of- ficers portrayed by Willem Dafoe, who plays a Marine who has just returned from Vietnam, and Tom Berenger, who plays a Marine who has been there three times. Other quick cameos to look for include Barry Corbin, who plays a Marine who has just returned from Vietnam, and Oliver Stone himself as a television correspondent who interviews David letterman and Caroline Kava in the early days of Vietnam. and Tom Berenger, who plays a Marine who has been there three times. Kovic's scene with Caroline Kava is one of the best scenes in the movie. Her emotional changes from Naomi's village and accidently killing Oliver Stone is something for which he had waited his whole life.

The main emphasis of the movie is on the personal struggles of the soldiers, with Kovic's experiences being the focal point. The movie portrays the impact of war on individuals and their families, with Kovic's parents played by Raymond J. Barry and Caroline Kava.

Last week turned out to be a long one for both the men's and women's basketball teams of the University of Missouri-St. Louis. They lost all games they played.

On Jan. 8, the UMSL-St. Louis Rivermen lost to instate rival Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville, 67-57. The game was played at Ryness Coliseum in St. Louis, 2,900 km away from home. The loss was the Rivermen's 19th in 21 games.

The men's basketball team lost to next-state rival St. Louis University, 72-68, on Jan. 9. The game was played at the Bojangles' Coliseum in Charlotte, N.C.

The Rivermen's biggest problem was their inability to make shots in the second half. They shot 38% in the first half but only 23% in the second half. The team was outscored 48-30 in the second half.

On Jan. 10, the UMSL-St. Louis women's basketball team lost to the University of Missouri-Columbia, 85-76, in Columbia, Mo. The game was played in front of a sellout crowd of 7,500.

The Riverwomen lost their first game of the season. They had won their first four games but were unable to contain the Tigers. The team was outscored 50-30 in the first half.
