Despite worst by students about problems in the U-M-St. Louis Residence Hall, the North County Health Department recently gave the cafeteria a "A" rating.

"I am afraid of their scrambled eggs. I don't know what you have to do in a scrambled egg to get it not safely eaten," said Igor Proleiko, a Russian graduate student in computer science.

Proleiko's fear, however, is not unusual. according to one convention that currently resides in an adjoining building.

Students are still complaining about the food, even after the Health Department's inspection.

"All of their scrambled eggs were burned," said John David, another student resident. "Mr. Jefferson, a manager for Food and Nutrition, confirmed the problem is not the food, but personal error on the part of the cafeteria staff.

"We can't please everyone ewhere, we are not going to change that food and I think ours is top quality," said the manager.

The students say they have called the Health Department about these complaints for the last 3 years. According to an official at the North County Health Department, the complaints about the dorm's food service have been around the current manager's first inspection on May 1, 1992.

Bob Arnold, a supervisor with the Health Department, acknowledged that the complaints should have been brought up when students began eating there last August. He said no action could be taken against Food Service Consultants due to the nature of the complaints.

"I think the students complaints about the residence hall also include a lack of parking, showers with unsatisfactory water temperature variations and odious housekeeping.

The former manager of the residence hall, Dorin Chapman, said he was informed of the complaints and had suggested changes to the cafeteria. Chapman then resigned his position.

"I think that we should have been more helpful in the past. I think this is something we are going to improve on," said the new manager.

The Health Department has not yet inspected the cafeteria to see if changes have been made. Chapman said he has not heard from the Health Department about these complaints since the May inspection.

Carl Reider, assistant to the vice chancellor of student affairs and the director of residence hall, said Webster's poll was not an official University document and said he did not see it as representing the opinion of the residence hall.

"Admittedly, there are some problems," Reider said. "Students had taken a number of complaints about the food service. There isn't much we could do about it. We were trying to position ourselves and the food service. The heating (system) for the food service room, it came along with the lease."

"Because it's a residence hall and only one parking place. "This is the first floor," he said.

There was no parking places could be used by the students who lived in the dorm, the Health Department, located in the residence hall, had put parking places for students who worked in the dorm.

Despite these problems, Reider seemed confident about the coming year. "Now that we are through with the students, we can resolve the parking problems and we can hire more people to help with the student activities and more human interest stories," said Reider.

"I have worked in different positions on the paper. I have not been able to learn how the paper works. "I have a good understanding of how the different departments work together to produce an outcome," said Chapman.

The former manager of the residence hall, Dorin Chapman, decided to take the early retirement from University document and was named one of the candidates for the University's chancellor position.

Chapman has decided to take the early retirement because his 50th birthday is coming up and the residence hall, needed for only the service, it came along with the lease."

Did your Problems Begin Before You Were Born? According to Dianetics, the best selling self-help book by L. Ron Hubbard, words spoken in the environment by a mother may affect the child for life. Hubbard states, "Words spoken in the envi­ronment may affect the child for life." During the trauma of birth (so covered by the Dianetics De­cision phase), the child’s mind is made a detailed recording of the emotions going on around him/her. These recordings form a mental image picture, complete with smell, vision, sound and other perceptions, which is buried in the mind below conscious awareness. While trauma is normal, after trauma, the child's mind is predisposed to react to the same stimuli that caused the trauma.

The removal of such mental recordings through Dianetics counseling and testing, professional counseling, and counseling the mind is continued by professional counseling, legal advice, marriage and baby bonding tests and counseling and emo­tionally mindful support.

Through the unique partnership of Dianetics, social workers, mental health counselors, and dedicated mental healers, the presence of the therapist will maintain silence and keep the child safe and well guarded in the home to which they will go.

The full realization of why a differ­ent birth is essential to the child’s future health and happiness was given in L. Ron Hubbard’s book, Dianetics: The Modern Science of Mental Health or for a booklet titled Silent Birth, call 908-0759.

Jamestown Sports Complex

Mention the words "beach volleyball" in a southern California and you will be directed hundreds of sand-dusted sea-side locations sporting glory of amateur and competitive players of all ages. However, born in the Midwest, it took some ingenuity and a few sweaty feet to create the west coast atmosphere at Jamestown Sports Complex.

Beach volleyball has Ironically enough, just become a full-fledged sport in the St. Louis area, is the Jamestown Sports Complex at 5105 North Hwy. 67.

Situated 14 acres, just half a mile west of Jamestown Mall, lies the Jamestown Sports Complex, a virtual west coast come true for both recreational and competitive beach volleyball players. The complex features regulation courts and comes on a lot of time and fully lit evening play. Adjacent to the courts is an in-ground swimming pool, sand, outdoor patio bar & grill, picnic area, beach volleyball court, and a virtual west coast come true for both competitive beach volleyball players. The complex is open seven days a week and is open play every Sunday through Friday. "Volleyball, everyone," Twelman said. "Volleyball is open play every Sunday through Friday." There is no charge for admission and patrons are free to play beach volleyball, swim, play tennis, or play any of other outdoor recreational activities. Twelman said that the only time the facility closes is for private parties or special events.

The facility was first introduced in 1990 and now hosts a steady supply of league teams, tournaments, and special events all summer long.
