Nursing School Receives Accreditation, Independence

The University of Missouri-St. Louis School of Nursing has received full accreditation, independent status for the first time since its founding in 1958.

"This is a historic day," said Chancellor Blanche M. Touhill, left, and Vice Chancellor Roosevelt Wright Jr., right, presented the Chancellor’s Mediation Award last month to Representative William L. Touhill (center).

The accreditation was awarded by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing for the fourth time in the school's history. The school has been accredited since 1958 and was reaccredited by the commission in 1967, 1979, and 1989.

"It is a significant milestone for the school," said Touhill. "It is a testament to the hard work and dedication of the faculty, staff, and students who have made this possible."

Invasion Of Privacy

Whether you are gay or straight, HIV infected or not, everyone should have the right to be left alone. Dr. Charles Louderback, who has AIDS, The man, who is going by the initials T.E.M., has filed a lawsuit in U.S. District court for invasion of privacy. Congress Bank of Omaha issued a Visa card to a man, on which he became delinquent due to medical leave from work and the use of his card to pay for medicine. His attorneys, Charles Neigel, said in a phone interview that his client’s insurance would not cover his medical treatment, and when the bill went over $1,000, employee Barbara Lounderback began sending letters and calling the man to try to collect payment. On one occasion, T.E.M. Lounderback did not have any income and that he was terminally ill. He also told that his parents didn’t know about his condition. Lounderback took it upon himself to phone his father and tell him T.E.M. was unable to pay his bill, he was on medical leave from work, and wanted all of his medical bills paid. She also said he shouldn’t even be calling them about his late payment. His attorney, Charles Neigel, said. The company then reduced AIDS-related care to a terminal illness. The man informed his company that he had contracted AIDS. At first the company switched benefits to avoid the high cost of his illness. The company then reduced AIDS-related care to a terminal illness such as cancer. This could possibly leave a case brought by an AIDS sufferer whose company refused to hear his argument. LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Evening College Stirling With Class Schedule; Students Say:

Dear Editor,

Without going on a diatribe about all the problems I have experienced, the primary difficulty I have with the UMSL-St. Louis administration, I would like to focus upon my recent difficulties that I have had at the Evening College. This incident occurred in the first week of the spring semester and was indicative of the whole university administration. I am a graduate student enrolled in one graduate course this semester which began on the first day of the spring semester. When I went to the first class and attempted to register, I was told that I had to have a schedule that was not already taken. I asked to have a schedule that was not already taken. I asked to have a schedule that was not already taken. I asked to have a schedule that was not already taken. I asked to have a schedule that was not already taken. I asked to have a schedule that was not already taken. I asked to have a schedule that was not already taken. I asked to have a schedule that was not already taken.

UM-St. Louis Falls Short In Reputation
by Thomas J. Kovache
Current news reporter
University of Missouri-St. Louis is part of the area community college system.
Next to Washington University and St. Louis University, the third-highest graduation rate is at UM-St. Louis.
Those are a few of the misconceptions that some local residents have about the school, according to a survey of 600 people from the Metropolitan area.
The survey was taken over a six-year period. According to Thomas McPhail, chairman of the communications department, the university wanted to see how it stacked up against Washington University, St. Louis University, Webster University, UM-Coastal and local community colleges.
"There was one area where the university stood out and that is in the partnership with local schools and local institutions," McPhail said. UM-University Senate numbers noted last week.
The survey also said the university was ranked second-best for media coverage, he said.
But McPhail pointed to several misconceptions some people have about UM-St. Louis. In addition to those listed above, about 10 percent said they didn't perceive the school as part of the University of Missouri System. About one-quarter said they didn't know which system it fits.
"He said Washington University and St. Louis University are seen as the first and second, "so we are perceived to be the third best, if we see one at all."
By this, McPhail said, "We have the only community school."
McPhail said a committee of the Senate, University Relations, should "focus on long-run concerns, long run activities... in order to build a favorable image within the community."

locally, state-wide and nationally, attracting better quality students and potentially better faculty. Accreditation also offers opportunities for the programs to apply for grants. Students also benefit from an accredited program. Undergraduates are assured of acceptance into any graduate program, as long as they've met the necessary requirements. And graduates students find an easier road into doctoral programs later in their careers. Marini said she also said the work is complex and everything worked out for the best. "It is a great relief to have it over with. Everyone feels happy.
The next time we have to do this is in the year 2000," she said.

Alanna Beverly Stewart Anderson said the national and area "Lift Every Voice and Sing." Professor Robert Ray from the Music Department accompanied her on the piano.
Following the ceremony, the University hosted a reception in the lobby of J.C. Penney where many well-wishers congratulated Clay. The Medallion is been awarded in the University's history and the first presentation by Touhill.

"UPS HELPED PUT OUR KIDS THROUGH COLLEGE"

"Putting kids through school is a heavy task. But UPS helped us through. When our son was in college he worked 10-12 hours a week at UPS earning a $10,000 a year. He also gained valuable work experience that looked great on his resume. If he hadn't got that job he would not have been able to get his degree. Magazine says UPS is one of America's Most Admired companies. No wonder why."

"Now our daughter is in college. She works at UPS. Making good money and getting great experience. She also eligible for an Educational Loan up to $25,000 a year. That's a big help."

"UPS helped in many ways. They can schedule their work hours around their class hours - mornings, evenings or weekends."

"A major university study has even shown that students who work 20 hours a week actually get better grades than those who don't. That's true. Our kids have proved it."

by Carmen Chia

The Current staff

This Christmas, Twentieth Century Fox is going to cash in big with Home Alone 2, the sequel to Home Alone, which so much resembles the first movie, one would find it hard to believe it could be a moneymaker. But it is sure to be big time.

A winning formula for the first Home Alone gave it its rank as the third highest-grossing film in motion picture history. So the movie leaves Kevin at the end of Christmas, and has a crazy new plot.

Kevin returns as an 11-year-old Kevin McCallister, the odd child in New York. The most majestic hotel in New York is played by Dana Ivey. The movie so parallels the first Home Alone that even the reason of their departure is the same. Kevin is played by Macaulay Culkin. The trio of hotel employees, the snooty concierge, grinch-like lady, and nosy desk bellman and the know-it-all desk clerk is played by Tim Curry excellently plays the savvy concierge, grinch-like man in his ways, "Saturday Night Live" Rob Schneider plays the know-it-all desk clerk is played by Tim Allen. The movie is sure to be big time.

Kevin does a snowjob on this film, convincing them that his stay at the Plaza is accompanied by his father, who is in town on business. Tape recorders and outtakes from old movies come into play while pulling the wool over the trio’s eyes, sound familiar? Also included in this slightly off copy of Home Alone are the Wet Bandits Harry and Marv, played by Joe Pesci and Daniel Stern. The notorious thieves have escaped from jail and are on the prowl in downtown New York. Their big plot is to rip off a toy store on Christmas eve. Needless to say they run into Kevin and the chase is on. He outsmarts them time and time again, and with the help of the Pigpen Lady, played by Brenda Fricker, they decide put an end to the Wet Bandits reign of half-witted thievery.

Kevin befriends the Pigpen Lady, and reassures her that it’s okay to love Home Alone 2. However, if you want to save some money, and get the same basic laughs, gather round the gang and save quite a few dollars to rent the original.

Solutions from your Apple Campus Reseller:

The Apple Computer Loan.

"Why should I wait in line at the computer lab when I can own a Macintosh for $15 a month?"

Kevin Campbell

Aerospace Engineering Major

What allowed Kevin to own an Apple "Macintosh" PowerBook 145 computer for such a low monthly payment? The Apple Computer Loan. Kevin knew that owning the power and portability of a Macintosh PowerBook for his full course load and his work in the Civil Air Patrol was a smart thing to do. And the Apple Computer Loan was the smart way to do it: easy application, fast turnaround, and low, flexible payment terms. So Kevin went to the only place that offers the Apple Computer Loan, his Apple Campus Reseller.

Macintosh. It’s more than a present, it’s a future.

President John F. Kennedy delivered his famous "Ask not what your country can do for you, but what you can do for your country." message in January 1961.

Kennedy's message was heard by young people around the world, inspiring them to take action in various fields, including education and community service. The Peace Corps was one of the organizations that Kennedy's call to action helped to establish. The organization sends volunteers to work in areas around the world, often in areas that are in need of assistance.

The Peace Corps was established in 1961, shortly after Kennedy's famous speech. The organization's mission is to provide support to local communities and to help to improve the lives of people in need. Volunteers are sent to work in areas around the world, and they often work on projects related to education, health, and community development.

Kennedy's message has been influential in inspiring young people to become involved in community service and to work to make the world a better place. For Past 14 Years Chico Has Been The Man For Rivermen

by Dana Oook
Current sports reporter

Scoring the most points and grabbing the most rebounds isn’t the only good U-M-St. Louis men’s basketball player Rich Jones has achieved during his career. Being able to recruit and retain bench pressers is just one of the many job-related responsibilities Jones now possesses.

First, to explain the “bench press”—something most people who follow the Rivermen thought about only in the last few weeks. “You have to be a benchmark for your teammates in the weight room,” Jones said. “Players who can out-bench press him are better than average for us. It’s a good one because people want to be the best of their group. We all want to keep up with him or we wouldn’t all be out here trying to press him one day,” Jerome Moom said.

Jones, 43, has been an assistant coach for 14 years, and he can bench press more than 300 pounds and run the 500-meter time in less than sixty minutes. “We’ve never had a basketball player who could out-bench press him.”

Jones is responsible for the players conditioning and is a motivating influence. “I hope by this close Ill be 20 that I can be if not as good of shape that he is,” said Mark Finley, a corner transfer from Bradley University. Jones nurtured the conditioning in Memphis, Tenn. He played football and basketball while living in Memphis to stay competitive.

“Even if we just sitting in the neighborhood everybody was always competing against each other,” Jones said.

Jones says he stays in each good shape for a number of reasons, such as tension relief, but most of all he works out for what he calls the “life purposes.”

“If I happen to leave this earth tomorrow, I don’t want to be in one part, Jones said. “I would like for it to be something I have some control over.”

Meckfessel said Jones’ knowledge of basketball and his enthusiasm are only two of the many qualities Jones adds to U-M-St. Louis’ basketball program.

Jones is a team member rather than a coach. Instead of training the players from the sidelines, Jones works out with them and said he feels like family to them. Even his locker in the players’ locker room included having it in the coach’s locker room. He said he does this in order to feel close to the team and be available if a player would someone to talk to.

“Coach Jones is an unique individual,” Morrison. “He’s running with the lindos just like he is one of them.”

Jones started his athletic career at Normandy High School where he starred in football and basketball and was the 1981 Missouri Class 6A Parade High School football player of the year. Jones later attended Bradley University where he played football, basketball and ran track. Jones was the 1985 Missouri Class 6A Parade High School football player of the year.

As a career assistant coach, Jones has helped the Rivermen by training the players from the sidelines. He often calls the players to the side of the court of the locker room. He said he likes to train the players from the side of the court of the locker room.

“I’m his biggest fan,” said Meckfessel. “I tell him to keep going and I know he will.”
