KWMU Surpasses Fall Fund Drive Goal of $120,000

By the time the phones stopped ringing and the numbers were turned in Tuesday evening at 8:25 p.m., "Challenge '92," the fall fund drive for public radio station KWMU, had reached $124,877, almost $30,000 over the original goal of $120,000.

At the drive's need was about 8 a.m., umbrellas lined up to help KWMU cross the finish line kept the phone calls coming in consistently until 8:30 p.m. The added movement of having Harriet Woods of the Women's Political Caucus in the studio with KWMU General Manager Patricia Wenz during the last hour of the fall fund drive added to the buzz of ringing phones, as did a large challenge grant from branching.

In addition, an original piece of artwork to local Mary Hightower, who had been donated to KWMU to be given away to the donor of a $1,000 pledge, a pledge that came in the final minutes of the drive.

The fall fund drive, originally scheduled for Sept. 19-27, was extended only one day, and KWMU could reach its goal.

KWMU received 1,075 pledges of financial support (of which 42 percent were first-time givers) to the public radio station.

We were "St. Louis area organizations and businesses provided 1,000 credits in support of helping us attain our goal. It's important that the community is willing to support," said 300 community volunteers helped KWMU during the fund drive by answering phones, processing membership contributions and regular pledge breaks. Representatives of the area and business communities provided valuable support in aiding KWMU reach its goal.

Approximately 40 percent of KWMU's operating budget comes from membership contributions. Additional funding is provided by businesses, UM-St. Louis and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

Magic Returns

Talk about a “magic” trick. After officially retiring and taking one year off, Magic Johnson returned back to the spotlight with a one-year extension contract worth $13.6 million.

That’s right folks. That makes the highest paid player in team sports history. Yes, as is all of History, even in this one of multi-million dollar contracts, Johnson often stands above all. Johnson is a hero to America.

Johnson changed the way America thought about AIDS and doing so, he opened the tragic topic of how Magic Johnson in America. When Johnson announced he was HIV-positive, the story about the human being and the image maker should be watched when it comes to American basketball. The image makers should be watched when it comes to American basketball players.

But think big is the key word here. Magic Johnson in America is a hero of the modern sports culture. The image of Magic Johnson makes up his heroic persona, not his actions. Many hero of the 1990s will fit this category. All the right things (or wrong things in Johnson’s case) happen to him and become part of that image. The image makers should be watched when it comes to Magic Johnson. He is, after all, simply a human being with the AIDS virus.

Remember, Johnson is just a basketball player—a very good basketball player. It was not an admirable performance, on the beat that led to the life-and-death circumstances he finds himself in today. But now he is back. The only known player with the AIDS virus in the NBA, and the highest paid player in team sports. Johnson has an HIV infection and brought (you might want to sit down for this) $14.6 million.

However, we are learning from this. The issue resurfacing reminds us that the human being and the image are inseparable from the human life. Everyone that sees him comments on his now-the-cowt magic. But his life has been trumped by the press and society. They want him to go into the history books as the first black athlete to philanthropically respond to AIDS. Everyone wants Johnson to live forever, unfortunately, this is where the human being and the image part come. America must remember the difference between appearance and reality.

Magic Johnson could die from AIDS. A strong point can be cut down to achieve an appearance of a hero. Magic Johnson will continue to step to the top of every news broadcast and sports page in the country. America is where that person has a life is even shorter when that person has AIDS. Remember, Johnson is just a basketball player—a very good basketball player. It allowed a 12-year-old boy to ‘divorce’ his parents and have all legal ties severed. The boy, Gregory King, left his 15-year-old mother,8-year-old sister, 3-year-old brother, and mother for only seven months. This case is unprecedented in that it is the first time a child has brought forth a suit like this before. Circuit Judge Thomas Kilk made the rules the same. Clearly Johnson is a hero to America.

After Nine Long Years . . . It's Back! Homecoming!

by Robin Mayo
feature editor

The 1992 UM-St. Louis homecoming king and queen were crowned last Saturday night at the Knights of Columbus Hall in downtown Ferguson, 119 S. Florissant Rd.

Second runners up for king and queen were Lance Ficken and Jill Grimmer, followed by first runners up Steve Roder and Patricia Graziani. King Rick Stifler and Queen Trezzette Stafford lead the first dance following the coronation. Other candidates joined in, and in time, the rest of the crowd moved onto the dance floor.

Music was provided by Complete Music Inc. Elvis Varsity. Music ranged from disco tunes from the Village People, to Earthquakes, to The Knack, to R.E.M. and on, in hotels and bars in the midst of it all, realized that since the world seemed to be revolving around me, I realized that since the world seemed to be revolving around me, I realized that since the world seemed to be revolving around me, I realized that since the world seemed to be revolving around me, I realized that since the world seemed to be revolving around me.

UM-St. Louis Joins Crusade To Save Planet

by Ron Turner
Current features reporter

With one ton of recycled paper saving seventeen trees and three cubic yards of landfill space, there are more concerned people are conserving the earth's resources by recycling.

Wanting to aid in the cause and to comply with state mandate, UM-St. Louis has joined the recycling bandwagon.

Nearly two years ago, two buildings—Woods Hall and General Services—began recycling wax paper placed in a special container under each desk. The containers are emptied by the custodial staff and the waste is taken to an off-campus recycling center.

Currently this program has expanded to include the majority of buildings on campus.

The recycling program does not produce any revenue for the university but also does generate cost savings in trash pick up.

"In 1991, the recycling program yielded a reduction of 31 percent in the quantity of material in trash receptacles over the previous year," said Mary Vosevich, manager of Grounds and Custodial Services.

Vosevich said recycling fulfills a two-fold purpose—to complete the environmental cycle and to create a market for recycled products. Many custodial supplies and much of the material used in the university print shop are made from recycled products, Vosevich said.

Students soon will be able to enjoy campus wide placed picnic tables and park benches made from recycled plastic. Vosevich hopes to someday see an off-campus recycling center in operation—time and funds permitting.

There are many other ways in which UM-St. Louis activity is involved in the recycling war including the active participation in Project Redirectory, a Southwestern Bell Telephone sponsored event. Old telephone directories may be left outside each office door and be collected for recycling.

Many student organizations such as the Biology Club and Access to Success have aluminum can collection barrels located throughout the campus.

It is up to everyone to preserve the environment not only for ourselves but for future generations. An excellent way to achieve this is by recycling.

Law Of Averages: Riverwomen Go 2-2 In Tampa Tournament

by Cory Schroeder
Current sports reporter.

Deep South, in Tampa, Fla., was where the Riverwomen hoped to ride the wave of their five game winning streak. But the Riverwomen split the four games played.

"We were disappointed with the results, but Tampa was a lot of fun," freshman setter Ginger Heaton said. The Riverwomen, 11-4, couldn't back their impressive showing, with both losses to nationally ranked opponents, a good sign for the year. The University of Florida Southern hosted the tournament. The Riverwomen were swept by Tampa, 3-1, 3-15, 4-15, 7-15.

"We were overmatched, but we just didn't play hurt," junior lib opp Debbie Kunaszewski said.

Despite struggling against the Florida Southern, the Riverwomen played their trump card with victories over Barry and Rollins. The key to the Riverwomen's season has been their ability to bounce back from being down games--such as the Barry, 15-6, 5-15, 16-15, 15-15, and Rollins, 14-15, 15-15, 15-15, 15-15, 15-15, 15-15.

The Riverwomen, who have been playing fast four weeks, will get a week off before it's back to the Metroittle Region Tournament (Oct, 15-17). The hills of the Mark Twain Building will be awaiting their return on Oct, 16-17 for the NCAA Tournament. "We are mentally tired," said Kunaszewski. "The week off will give us time to prepare."

Oakland Crusades U-M-St. Louis Homecoming

by Jack C. Wang
associate sports editor

The Oakland Crusades, the University of St. Louis, hosted the Crusades on October 3-4, 1992. The Crusades lost the game, 23-32, in overtime, but they were heartened by the fact that they have scored the first goal of the year for the Riverwomen in each of the past two seasons.

"We had a few tricks on them," said coach Mike Robben. "They were surprised that they didn't have a chance."

Vass Soccer Classic Leaves Fans Thirsty

by Jack C. Wang
associate sports editor

This past weekend's '92 Vass Soccer Classic held at the Don Dallas Memorial Field wasn't the usual fare for sports reporter Tom Reddick. For Reddick, the classic was a chance to see some of the country's best soccer teams compete.

In total, there were 13 teams competing in the tournament, including the defending national champion, the University of St. Louis, and the University of Illinois-Chicago. The tournament featured some of the best teams in the country, including the University of Notre Dame, the University of Southern California, and the University of California-Berkeley.

The tournament was a success, with over 10,000 fans attending the games. The atmosphere was electric, with fans cheering on their favorite teams. The games were played in front of packed stands, and the level of play was exceptional. The tournament was a great opportunity to see some of the best soccer being played in the country.
Shooter Heads North With...

You expect pleasant surprises in life. Often enough, you can forecast where and when those surprises will pounce on you, even whilst the manner of the attack remains a mystery. Such a surprise recently hit me.

I allowed myself a routine assignment the weekend of September 25, or rather was allowed by coach Ken Hudson, the opportunity to ride along with the women's soccer team. The trip took us to Chicago, where I watched the ladies beat Loyola University 5-0.

Following the match we drove on to Green Bay, Wis. After little rest and sleep, I watched the team brave the rain to play University of Wisconsin-Green Bay, before returning to St. Louis.

While traveling and during meals, I became acquainted with many members of the team and coaching staff. They are all, for the lack of better words, pure treasures. Hudson and his assistant, Karen Merlo, have built such a special rapport with the ladies on the team. I have watched them care and nurture the team throughout this season, in wins and losses. Hudson has never let his sparkling demeanor drop for a second and Merlo, always effervescent yet supportive.

What else came of the trip? I learned of nicknames, heard jokes about tattoos and a mouse, witnessed antics and generally, had a great time when I wasn't shooting or taking notes.

You know you're with a closely-knit team when you're trying to take a nap, while traveling on the interstate and suddenly, upon intrusion by a sound that can only come from THAT body crevice, you hear giggling. The giggling is followed by hysterical laughter upon the intrusion onto yet another of the senses associated with odor.

These little surprises that come along once in a while and leave you gasping, do wonders to keep you going. Barring unpleasant accidents, I will attend all remaining borne games and any away-ones that I can force my car to.

I'll be the photographer with the big grin.

St. Louisans Take AIDS Quilt Panels to D.C.

by Michelle McMurray

More than 100 St. Louis-area residents will travel to Washington, D.C., this weekend to stand up the AIDS Memorial Quilt Display. Visitors from all over the world will absorb an unfolding of more than 21,000 quilt panels made by friends and families of those who have died of AIDS.

The quilt only represents approximately 1 percent of those who have died, said John Higgenbotham, coordinator of the St. Louis Chapter of the NAMES Project.

"Over 200,000 have died from AIDS. The quilt shows the enormity of the epidemic. The quilt is so big, this will probably be the last time it is displayed at one time," he said.

The AIDS quilt was started in 1987 in San Francisco by an organization called CARE (Committed to Aid the Epidemic Response). The panels were started with a $5,000 grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

A portion of the quilt has been displayed in St. Louis twice.

Many of the volunteers who are going to Washington held up their quilt panels and tearfully talked about the loved ones whose panels are represented.

Deborah Gillam and Carol Rengebush, two sisters who made a colorful panel designed with pictures and artwork showing the life accomplishments of their brother, who died 18 months ago, said, "This is a traumatic experience. But everything should be preserved."

Most people think it is a gay disease so no one does anything. After his death we took classes at St. Louis Litgift for AIDS and became a buddy to someone who has AIDS," Gillam said.

Pat Levy's son died from AIDS in 1987. She has been involved with the project since the beginning.

"My son's panel is number 52. When I go to see the quilt I have my son among people who care. It is a wonderful way to remember somebody you care about," she said.

Levy said she was going to limit her volunteer work with AIDS. "It is hard work for many wonderful friends. I can't say goodbye anymore," she said.
