Hepatitis Reported In Campus Cafeteria

by Krista Goodin

Student Curator Stephanie Patterson has resigned from her position on the UM Board of Curators. At the end of the meeting of the Board on Jan. 28, the Board elected Ashcroft, who has been the Acting President, to finish Patterson's term.

Patterson, who had been the Acting President, was appointed to the Board in January by the Governor, who has the authority to appoint any non-voting member to the Board. The Governor appointed her to the Board in January because she had been the Acting President, but she had not yet been elected to the Board by the voters.

Patterson had been the Acting President for about six months, and she had been appointed to the Board in January. She had been the Acting President for about six months, and she had been appointed to the Board in January.

Poor Lighting Is Problem For Campus

Students at UM-St. Louis are so anxious about campus safety they’ve increased the number of off-campus dorms and increased the number of emergency phones, the increased number of non-traditional students taking night classes creates a "target-rich" environment for criminals. There are lights in almost every part of St. Louis campus. Much of the lighting, however, serves a mere aesthetic rather than practical purpose. The lights for East Drive, for instance, are lit on a timer, so they provide hardly adequate light for these streets. The parking lots are marginally better and the parking lots in other housing are even worse. In fact, the tallest of the half-dozen barracks, which had been hardened by decades of use, was still referring to the Vietnam War, I wanted to play my service trying to recapture my lost youth. I couldn’t...

If you say no, it’s over. Sometimes people die when this is the case. Yet your government is missing the point...the idea of youth was... Mom... Our "in-law...-

KWMU Story Reported Fair; Reader Says

Dear Editor,

Thank you, Kristen Goodwin, for your article about the racial discrimination lawsuit against the Board of Trustees. It is a well-done piece.

Given the court’s decision, we believe that you have a right to know about the lawsuit against the Board of Trustees. Therefore, we would like to express our support for your coverage of this issue.

We appreciate the way the article was written. We are satisfied with the way the story is handled. Your description was warranted and fair.

The story was written in the wrong way. The wrong way to approach the issue is to focus on the legal aspects alone. It is important to consider the broader context of the situation.

Thank you for your hard work and dedication. We are looking forward to more coverage of this important issue.

Sincerely,

COMING SOON TO A THEATRE NEAR YOU.

"Look who's in town!" someone says. "It's VanDerZee!"

"How many people can you name?" asks a reporter. "VanDerZee!"

a. What is the main theme of the article? The main theme of the article is the history of African-American photographers and their contributions to journalism.
b. Who is interviewed in the article? The article interviews a number of people, including magazine editors and historians.

c. What is the significance of VanDerZee's photographs? VanDerZee's photographs are significant because they captured the everyday lives of African Americans during a time when they were often portrayed as stereotypes in the media. His photographs showed the diversity and complexity of African American life.

d. What is the role of the photographer in the story? The photographer plays a crucial role in the story because he captures the moment when VanDerZee is recognized by the people in town. His photographs are later used to illustrate the article about VanDerZee's contributions to journalism.

d. How does the photographer describe VanDerZee's photography? The photographer describes VanDerZee's photography as capturing the everyday lives of African Americans in a way that was not often seen in the media. His photographs were highly praised for their creativity and their ability to capture the essence of African American life.
Band’s Latest Album Proves Critics Wrong

Magazines have been downgrading Extreme’s third effort, Sides To Every Story, because of its highly experimental side, but the boys in the band are not discouraged. In fact, they believe in pushing the music in new directions, so maybe what any critic has to say about it. Besides, record sales count just as much as any review, and so far, Ill Side has sold more than 3 million copies.

"I knew this was going to happen," guitarist Nuno Bettencourt said, "I said right before [the record] came out, either they’re going to really love what we’re doing and love the record, or they’re going to understand what we’re doing to the point where they don’t see we can handle it. Either way, they’re going crazy. Who do you think you are, thinking you can do something like this?"

"Another reviewer said, "The third side was making too much, and I admit, Bettencourt. "It can’t be making too much, it is what it is. We are who we are. These standards for what the third side is supposed to be? They look at Nuno, here’s a rock guitar player, and now he’s trying to reach out for something he doesn’t know拉动!"

Most reviewers of the new record agree with Bettencourt. Although it is a far cry from the second album, Ill Side stands on its own with its own attitude. And it’s related to the third side because Bettencourt is determined to document the whole thing in 30 pages. What is probably most intriguing to Bettencourt isn’t the review reviews of Extreme’s latest LP, but the review of what the magazines are saying about that record. The entire third side is called “Everything Under the Sun,” an exploration of fantasy, morality, and reincarnation. And the emotion couldn’t be more perfect conveyed by the music. In Extreme age of turning off people because of some of their song topics. "Everybody’s scared of religion," said Bettencourt, "they say it’s boring... It’s not. Boring... The little lies to be looked at as common sense. It comes down to how you communicate with people.

One thing the critics all do agree on, and that’s Extreme rocks hard in concert. In this concert, the critics are on one of the best bands to see live. No, no, no, not the usual, any run-of-the-mill. Just one more band building their national career. Extreme is appearing Feb. 18 at the American Theater. Bigger kick open, and the show starts at 8 p.m. Portions of this article were reprinted from Billboard Magazine, Sep- termber, 1993.

Automotive Advice
Save $3,000 A Year in Auto Expenses
by Nick D'Amato of Vee World

For most people, a house is their biggest investment. Flu-cially speaking, it is a good investment because you simply can sell for it more than you paid. The second biggest investment of the average American, his or her car, can not truly be considered an investment at all, but a 100 percent expense. After eight years in value is minimal.

The idea is to minimize the cost of owning and operating a car. AAA estimates the cost of loan payments, depreciation, insurance, gas, repairs and maintenance will work out to average 39 cents a mile. And assuming you drive 15,000 miles per year and sell the car after four years, it would cost you $5,830 per year and almost $50,000 over your eight-year period. You could save $3,000 or more per year by following these nine tips.

1. Always buy in two to two and a half year-old car. One main reason is that a new car will depreciate in value by 50 percent over the first two years. By doing this, you can avoid the expenses that are built in to a new car's price like loan payments, depreciation, extended warranties and taxes.
2. Buy your car from an individual. An individual will usually sell a car for whatever they would be offered by the dealer on a trade-in, about $1,000 less than what the dealer would sell the car for.
3. Finance the car for no more than 36 months. This way the car will always be worth more than you own, plus you will save yourself from paying a lot of interest. Because you are paying the car two years old, your monthly payments will be even less than what you would have paid for the new car over 60 months.
4. Reduce the cost of owning and operating a car by 20 percent by keeping the car clean. A clean car will always be worth more than a dirty car.
5. Keep the car clean and looking new. This is important when you try to sell the car.
6. Outdoors you have more space and time, whereas indoors it's more a constant concern. A car, which is slightly cheaper to run than a personal transportation device.
7. Keep the car for five years, or more. The older the car, the more depreciation it experiences. Once you own all of the car, you will be paying the higher rate through depreciation of the car
8. Lessen the cost of comprehensive and collision auto insurance by 40 percent, by raising your deductibles to $500. Most people get into an accident only every 10 years, and half of the time it's not their fault. So there is only a one in 20 chance that you will have to pay the deductible. Drop comprehensive and collision insurance when the value of your car is under $2,000.
9. Reduce the cost and frequency of repairs by finding an independent repair shop that is familiar with your make of car, capable of performing the full range of repairs, not just an oil change.
