"Open or Closed" Issue Resolved At "Open" Forum
Amendment Allowing For Open Court Proceedings To Be Introduced At Next Assembly Meeting

by Jeremy Rutherford

The Student Government Association (SGA), Student Court, and The Current reached a tentative agreement on the Liberal of "open or closed" Student Court hearings on Wednesday. Students could attend or watch the meetings online for the first time.

A meeting between the SGA executive board and UM-St. Louis administration was held Feb. 9 to find a method of receiving feedback from a large group of people. Both SGA and the administration agreed on open-to-the-public court hearings that would allow students to watch the meetings online. The hearings would also be recorded and made available for viewing on the university's website.

Although SGA and the administration agreed to open-to-the-public court hearings, the issue still needed to be discussed by the Student Government Association, which is the student government board. The Student Government Association was scheduled to meet on Feb. 10 to discuss the issue further.

UM-St. Louis Chancellor Thomas Stoffel expressed his concern toward the issue, and asked "Island" Sandy McAllen, UM-St. Louis vice-president for Student Affairs, to address the issue.

"I don't know if there are any problems with holding open court proceedings, but it's a good idea," McAllen said.

Because of the large amount of publicity Davis's decision has had, Matters said that the general public might take it as an indication of the university's stance on the issue. The decision to hold open-to-the-public court hearings is in response to the concerns of the student body, and it is the university's way of addressing the concerns.

The Fraternity Executive Council defines having "any irrevocable action or moritorium declared, whether on one university campus, that produces physical or mental discomfort, harassment, hate, or ridicule." Part A and B of UM St. Louis Local policy on hearing cases, "An individual or an organization may file a complaint," whereas "The university will provide a hearing and a hearing officer will be appointed," according to the policy.

"Young people tend to think of behavior. They don't realize behavior is detrimental to their safety," Rick Blanton, associate director of University Center, said. "Sometimes people get in trouble because they don't realize they're in trouble."

"There are two types of groups - registered and unregistered," MadLan said. "Some groups don't want funds, they just want to use the facilities on the campus." Ross, however, said he doesn't see any need for SARC funds. "No, because any organization can access funds outside of SARC," he said. An SARC attorney, however, said that there is no legal basis for such a claim.

absences from SGA meetings were a result of personal reasons, that is what would be written in the newspaper."

"I think all students should be able to attend," Zwerdling said. "When you close the meetings, you are excluding 10,000 other students." Meanwhile, Ross said that a press release could be issued at the end of the meeting, "But that is second hand reporting," Zwerdling said. "The main reason for not attending the meetings is accountability, and that will be missing if the hearings are closed."

Zwerdling and others in another important reason why the meeting should open. The Student Activities Budget Committee (SABC) is the committee that allocates funds to various organizations. This is the same money paid by each student who attends M-St. Louis. I think we have a right to see where the money is going," Zwerdling said. "Again, I think there should be some accountability."

Graduate Student Wins $5000 For Short Story

by Jeffrey Struky features editor

"One afternoon, I was channel surfing around and came across this special on PBS. It was Bill Moyers' interview with a young lady from the Vietnam War. She was a myopathologist and she bared her soul. What she said to me, what she revealed in that interview is a story that has stayed with me ever since."

"I've always been a liberal activist," Adams said. "I think I write my first novel when I was a junior in high school. I've kept it in the drawer ever since."

"I'm a graduate student in the English department at UM-St. Louis, one of the first graduate students in the Minerva Arts Council 1993 kitty watershed."

"And it almost never happened. I had actually quit writing fiction altogether," Adams said. "I had burned out of school for a while, I was writing stuff and taking the occasional workshop. My stories just weren't going over that well. So I started writing for fun. I was writing for no other reason than to just get away from writing fiction."

"But I didn't like that. It took a long time to figure out what I really loved doing. But I eventually got there." Adams said. "And now I'm a published author."

"There's no avoiding it. You've got to do it. That's what it takes to get published."

"Private Parts" is the first full-length novel that Adams has written, featuring the world of the five, Minerva Arts Council winners.
