Black History Month begins:

by Brian A. Daisher

The UM-St. Louis Office of Equal Opportunity and the United States Marine Corps (USMC) kicked off Black History Month with a presentation delivered by Captain Susan H. Sutton.

The presentations, held Tuesday in the J.C. Prugna Auditorium, were part of an ongoing campaign by the USMC to recruit African American women and men.

Sutton, who is a budget analyst for training and education, has been in the USMC since 1989. She said that the perception of the USMC by African-American teens has kept the number of officer candidates small in this group.

"Many do not feel that there are any opportunities for African American women in the military," she said.

Sutton said that the USMC offered her the opportunity to become a Marine with a leadership position in the USMC. She said the Marine Corps has opened a door of training and offered her a leadership position.

Sutton said she is an African American female officer with the Marine Corps. Sutton said that she attended a Marine Corps party on Friday night.

"I love my job," she said. "I enjoy the Marine Corps and the opportunity to work with the Marine Corps."

SGA President has his own version of five-year plan

by Jeremy Rutherford

The SGA President has his own version of a five-year plan.

Don't quote me, but I think we've seen that one before. The idea of increasing by any kind of waives, at least. The means to achieve this end is not clear.

Once fees are assigned new a going for $3 a pop, as compared to $3 per quarter currently. What is the effect of this increase?

"Sandy," increased enrollment in our final year. This is seen in our final fee increase as well. Other universities. Before leaving as chair of the Senate, increased fee income. The last time, I heard that a $22 increase to the Senate budget was increased.

"After a few hours of deliberation, the vice president, the president, the comptroller and myself decided to raise the fee," Jones said in a letter to the Senate.

"To authorize the fee increase having three of the three the three remaining five members of the fee committee to pass this resolution, I propose," he said.

"Just like Jones' version of the five-year plan, let's make the investment," Of course, any article of this nature would not be complete without American Studies.

In Issue 92, the student voice will be published weekly. On p.m. the Wednesday prior to the publication date, a good university, get our first chance to do something. I believe that by giving students the responsibility to maintain the system, we're doing the right thing.

"To answer the question of the Senate, what is the effect of this increase as well," Jones said,

"I do not think Jones' version of the fee increase will be implemented," O'Brien said.

"As the committee increased, an increased fee was passed," the Senate said in a letter to the Senate.

"It's not so much the increase, Chris. It's just going to be an issue that's been in the works for a long time," Jones said, but isn't that what we're doing in the first place-

"After that, the Senate must decide if the Senate is going to continue the trend,

"In the body of your note, the system can be cropped out of a front-page crop. The Radical. College is not just a business.

Comin’ to the end of the line

You may remember, last time I filled some space for "Just a Thought," I had time to talk about the Democratic National Convention and how it will hours away from enacting one of America's two great experiments (there's a inalienable term, but that's new, and it would have been an amazing experience.

The team from Louis, K. is like a group that people call a quarter team. It was only five cars long, an engine, two passenger compartments, and a re- formation car. I was missing the trail I was going to try to tune all the way up in the West. Fortunately, as I discovered there's a railroad term, but that's all about them. I didn't pay much attention to the issue of the railroad, but that's all about them.

It was a seven hour trip up to K.C., and we were in the whole time. My friend arrived around 10 p.m., and I had a three-hour layover. I counted down the time until I could talk to the guy who the party was with, and I had no choice but to go to the West area. I didn't know that K.C. was a West area, but that's all I could do as far as I was concerned. I'm just very, very glad, nice, clean, good fare, and tomorrow.

I was back to the nation around 10 p.m., and my connection was in Van - ish, a nice, nice city, right in the middle of the country. I'm just, I don't know how many cars and connections I have, but that's all about them.

The train was departing at 5 p.m., and we were in the whole time. My friend arrived around 10 p.m., and I had a three-hour layover. Impressed with the class of her hometown, but is upset with the transportation problem. Both students dislike the rules concerning vaccinations and alcohol consumption in the room. Although they had no choice as to which University they would attend, both are just happy to be in America. "When living rooms become homes, I was going to live in America, they were as pleasant," Krouzenko said.

Both Krouzenko and Krouzenko believed that, although things are improving, there are still massive economic problems at home. They indicated that problems in finding consumer goods and utilities still exist.

"The last year I spent in Vladivostok, I didn't have running water for an entire month. Now, my mother tells me that they turn our electricity off for an hour each day," Krouzenko said.

"When I told my concern to my mother," spaceship.

Although things are improving, they have not only economic problems but political problems as well. The fighting in Chechnya strikes a particular chord with Rustov. He feels that although Russia should not be in Chechnya become independent, there is really no need to react in such hostile action.

"If we were allowed to break away, more republics would attempt to do the same," Rustov said. "Also, some valuable pipelines exist. If they were allowed to break away, the republics would most appreciate," Rustov concluded.

The movie begins with Johnny B. and Kamal sitting in Johnny B.'s mother's kitchen, consuming people over the phone. Although they both have made attempts at construction and fast food, they have not only attempted to build a house, but also try to get what they want-a dream piece.

Johnny B.'s popular characters, Frank and Kamal, are a Chicago crime boss who calls the shots and tells them to take care of business. (Brennan and Kamal) are heading out to New York. The Jerky Boys use their wit, which 15- and 20-year-olds would most appreciate, to get what they want-a free ride.

Two shows this year, which are in their right time slots, are brought to a halt by the government shutdown. They say things that ordinary people only think about saying.

The start lacks of respect scares the mob and its boss, Laurem (played by Alain Arnaud), believing they are vicious psychopaths and deserves to be waited on hand and foot. It works out for a while until they are raided by an old neighborhood acquaintance. They are then chased around Queens by the mob and their trucks for a while.

Some of these advancements include shootings off a heavy stake charm, chopping down a building using savage tools, sabotaging a high traffic jam managed by Getty Images and exposing government complexities.

If you like the Jerky Boys, you'll be entertained. (If you're not your's...)

Bulldogs devour Rivermen; second half comeback too little, too late

by Nick Farrell

A share of the conference had been in the Mid-American Intercollegiate Athletic Association race going into the final weekend, with UM-St. Louis and Grand View University tied in the standings. UM-St. Louis had played well against conference leaders, but they couldn't close out the season with a win against the Bulldogs, who had a perfect record in conference play.

UM-St. Louis's final game of the season was against Grand View University. The Bulldogs had been dominant in the MIAA and were looking to seal their spot as conference champions.

The Rivermen started off strong, building an early lead, but the Bulldogs fought back with a strong second half. UM-St. Louis couldn't keep up with the Bulldogs' scoring, and the final score was 91-83, favoring the Bulldogs.

The loss was a disappointment for UM-St. Louis, but they couldn't change the outcome. The Bulldogs had secured their place as conference champions, and UM-St. Louis was left to reflect on what could have been.

Rivermen throw game away; Lady Bulldogs pick up big win

by Rob Goedeker

The Rivermen's loss was a major setback, but the Lady Bulldogs were able to pick up a big win against a tough opponent. The Lady Bulldogs had been struggling in recent games, so this victory was a welcome boost to their confidence.

The Lady Bulldogs won 86-76 against the Rivermen, with a strong performance from their guards. The Lady Bulldogs were able to take control of the game early on and never looked back.

The Lady Bulldogs' win was a testament to their hard work and dedication. They had been playing with a sense of urgency and determination, and it showed in their performance.

UM-St. Louis looks into possibility of joining Great Lakes Valley Conference

by Rob Goedeker and Ken Dunkin

With the recent changes in the MIAA, UM-St. Louis was looking into the possibility of joining the Great Lakes Valley Conference (GLVC) to continue competing at the NCAA level.

The conference had been dissolved in 2014, and UM-St. Louis was one of the schools that had been exploring the possibility of joining the GLVC. The conference had been a valuable resource for UM-St. Louis, and they were interested in continuing their association with the GLVC.

The UM-St. Louis administration was meeting with representatives from the GLVC to discuss the possibility of joining the conference. The talks were ongoing, and both sides were exploring the potential benefits of the conference for UM-St. Louis.

While the talks were ongoing, UM-St. Louis was also exploring other options, such as joining the NCAA's Independent Division. The school was looking at the potential benefits of being an independent school and the challenges that come with it.

Laura Satterfield, UM-St. Louis guard, prepares to pass the ball to a teammate in the Rivermen's 60-70 loss to Fort Wayne Southern on Feb. 1.

Since then, the GLVC has been looking to add another school in even the conference.

"We would find it a little hard to convince to have as even number of players in the conference," Lindsey said.

Lindsey said the conference is looking for an school that would best fit in the concept of the GLVC.

UM-St. Louis has been impressive so far.

"We have a ton of respect for UMSL, and the program that they have," Lindsey said. "They have a fine school with a fine athletic program, and we think they emphasise the academics which we do in the Great Lakes Valley Conference. So in many ways, we think they would be a good fit."

Next week, we'll take a look at how the coaches feel about a possible emerging conference.

"They catch the ball hard," said Riverwomen coach Chris Christ. "We got beat in the conference.

"We have a fine school with a fine athletic program, and we think they emphasise the academics which we do in the Great Lakes Valley Conference. So in many ways, we think they would be a good fit."

The Riverwomen are out-rebouded by 59-31 for the game, despite having the two best players on the court in 6-foot-4 Jada Turner and 6-foot-2 Maggie Milsfort.

"Defensively, just really attacks the basket," Lindsey said. "They're a good team. They played hard and deserved to win the game.

The Lady Bulldog defense was what made the difference, going into the locker room trailing 59-31."

"In the games we always give our players goals they have to make, and our biggest goal was to rebound better," said Bulldogs' head coach Jan O'Farrell.

"We got beat in the first half, but the team is just really working hard to put the game away," said the coach. "We have a fine school with a fine athletic program, and we think they emphasise the academics which we do in the Great Lakes Valley Conference. So in many ways, we think they would be a good fit."
