Students charge University for everything
Identification card sounds like answer to campus freedom

A student identification card and a copy of your winter semester course schedule are needed to charge items at the bookstore. Buying books on the grounds without a card will be a thing of the past, according to Dr. Charles Schultz, director of the University Bookstore.

Currently, bookstore workers have to do the manual checkout process. Schultz expects the system to be online by February and bookstore workers will no longer have to do the manual checkout process. Students said they are not affected by the change.

"Students really seem to like the new system," Schultz said. "Especially when they have outstanding loans and do not have to pay their account balance until their student loan checks come in."

Another application of the Debit Card system allows Residence Hall students to charge food in the Undergraduate Commons.

"The system is really easy now for students from Residence Hall," Schultz said. "They don't have to carry cash with them." Schroedl said.

In future terms, the identification cards will offer even more opportunities for U-M-St. Louis faculty, staff and students. Students will be allowed to enter locked buildings with their identification cards and full students will be able to enter experiments with their cards. The cards will also be scanned in the computer labs and in the Mark Twain Building to ensure that students and faculty members are eligible to use the facilities. These features will be available when the stall reader is installed.

"I expect room changes to be made by the fall of 1995," Schroedl said.

Board expected to approve federal grant

by Jeremy Rutherford

The University of Missouri Board of Censorship is expected to approve a $1 million federal grant when it meets Friday at UM-St. Louis. The grant will be used to expand and improve the Center for Molecular Electronics.

The federal government authorized a contract with Honeywell Inc. Co. to begin construction of the building in the spring of 1995. The Board will cost approximately $77.5 million and the remaining funds will be used to purchase equipment.

Bernard Fieldman, Chairperson of Physics and Astronomy, is the point man for the project. He expects the building to be completed in 8 months after Honeywell breaks ground in March.

"We expect to be able to build the building in about 8 months. This is a rare opportunity," Fieldman said.

Chancellor reports to Senate

by Jeremy Rutherford

The UM-St. Louis Senate met Thursday to discuss the new center. The committee was able to get three things done.

One was to establish the building to honor King's birthday. Second, the Senate will move their laboratories into the additions. A boiler, chiller and cooling tower will be added to the complex, which will house 12 faculty and staff members.

The project was delayed two years. One of the reasons for the delay was the need to develop the valley to add to the natural setting.

"I am always excited when the day comes because they don't have to meet so many requests," said Sen. Larry Thomsen.

"I don't understand how people can ever use non-violent and non-violence," said Sen. Beth Robinson.

The Board will meet next Thursday and will be able to vote on the motions.

The annual building dedication for King's birthday will be announced this spring.

The new building will be named after Senator King.

Chancellor Blanche Todd capsule reported that the new building will be completed in two years. The building will house two of our scientists and two of our faculty members.

"It is a great honor to have a building named after Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.," Todd said.

Senators need to work for constituents

by Matthew J. Fonye

The UM Board of Curators are coming soon Thursday and Friday. The Board plans to vote on many things that will affect the University of Missouri-St. Louis. That means this meeting might influence your future too.

It is unfair that many students don’t have an opportunity to converse between campus politics and campus policy. Politics develop the policy. So when some kind of new policy is implemented by the University then a good idea has to be discussed for months or even years before it passes.

Now many students might bring their ideas to the political process on campus. I’m not many student are still being forced to deal with the stagnant [phrase “get involved.”] It is an important tool to be used for the political process, but not every student might work to start legislation and vote at the Senate meetings.

I interviewed one of the students and I asked what I could do to improve your interest in student government.

The senator, who I will call Mr. X, advised that he had only been in a Senate meeting for the past few years. Mr. X is a highly involved student on campus, despite his said that his poor attendance record at Senate meetings was justified. Mr. X said that he thought that the Senate meetings were boring and felt that if anything said pertaining to what UM-St. Louis students needed to know.

I’ve been to my own Senate meetings and I would have to disagree with X. X is wrong. Neither of what is said does not pertain to an average student, but wouldn’t I say that for all of the students? Senate meetings can be a busy time for many students in regards to their own student affairs.

I asked Mr. X if he thought that students should be just using his jobs as menial workers. They have a responsibility in representing the student body as a whole. Most students should know that what is being done is to be able to contact a senator and ask for information about Senate meetings. All senators, no matter what political party they are, for any material is the writer’s property. The use of any material is at the editor’s discretion. Editing may be necessary for space and clarity. Ideas we have not used do not prevent us from using similar ideas in the future.

"Before Sunrise" is a movie that asks the question, "Can the scenery redeem your life on a lonesome night?"

It's a good question. This movie answers the question by providing an answer. Jesse (Blekko Halway) and Celine (Julie Delpy) meet in Vienna and decide to take an impromptu trip into Europe.

As they walk through the city, they become closer and more understanding of each other. They share their dreams and aspirations, and they begin to develop feelings for each other.

The two of them decide to take a train to Paris, where they plan to stay for a while. As they make their way to the train station, they have a heart-to-heart conversation about their lives and their futures.

"Before Sunrise" is a romantic comedy that is both funny and heartwarming. It's a movie that will make you laugh and cry, and it will make you think about the importance of love and friendship.

HOW TO KEEP PEOPLE'S HANDS OFF YOUR MONEY.

1. Carry only enough cash to last the day.
   Anyone who tries to borrow your last five spot isn't a friend, anyway.

2. Label your spare-change jar “beetle farm.”
   Then, put your beetle farm in a jar labeled “spare change.”

3. Mark up every space on checks.
   Don't leave room for someone to fill in their name and extra zeros.

4. Keep your wallet in your front pocket.
   It discourages pickpockets. So does wearing really tight pants.

5. Put your picture on your credit card.

Riverwomen finally win, end six-game skid

Riverwomen assistant coach Nancy Hesemann is playing a key role on the bench this season. She has been doing a great job of keeping things on the court and helping the team stay focused. In practice most coaches stand off to the side and watch the players, but Hesemann actually walks around the court and helps with the game.

"This is a fun game," said Hesemann. "I love being out there with the girls. It's a great way to contribute to the team and help them improve."

"She's very motivational," Christ said. "She has the experience from last year, so she knows the difference between seeing the game from the side and being on the floor. She's really a good person for us right now on the bench. Without her we would be lost. She's the face of the foundation of our team."

certificate of insurance and a performance bond, Meckfessel said. "That will take a little time, but as soon as the weather is satisfactory for working, they should get started."

"Artwork begins," said the soccer field is going to be entirely upgraded, and new sand will be used. Meckfessel is hoping the job will be done around the first of May so that the sand will have time to set and grow. The news of the field finally getting started is something the UM-St. Louis soccer programs have been waiting for a long time.

"I feel very good about what's going on," said Riverman head coach Tim Redmond. "It has moved well beyond any phase that it is going to last year. It's really going to happen." The players are also relieved to see progress being made. "I'm really looking forward to the field coming down," said Riverman forward Todd Rick. "It was so bad last year.

Riverman head coach Ken Fleshner feels that the new field should help his running.

"Last year, I told everybody that we were getting a new playing field and it isn't happening," Fleshner said. "This year, I'll do the same thing because I've got confidence that it will get done. This is a big plus for the soccer programs."

LoGrad is happy to see unity in the Athletic Department.

"Even though I spoke out earlier, I am very happy that Mr. Meckfessel is coming through and showing some support to the soccer programs," he said. As sports editor of The Campus, I think it's great to see people working together for a common goal.

The new prefix is part of improvements to the campus phone system, which includes more lines for incoming and outgoing calls for quicker response time and better service.

Now that she had the opportunity to be an assistant coach, Heesemann has better ideas of what she wants to do with her education.

"At first I wanted to work with elementary kids," Heesemann said. "I never experienced working with older kids, but I know now that's what I want to do."
