Police bike program bags first bad guy

by Michael O'Brien

In the classic “David and Goliath” style, UM-St. Louis Police Officer Tom McEwen chased down a suspect. His chase began when his police bicycle Tuesday, Oct. 17, in front of Mark Twain Building.

“I saw him tampering with the vehicle in lot T on front of the police station at the North Meramec exit,” McEwen said. “I got on my bike and went toward him.”

McEwen said he saw the Blazer driving and he had the situation on his radar.

“If it had been on foot or in a car, he’d have been long gone,” McEwen said. “He couldn’t get away from me on my bike.”

The bike patrol began Monday, Oct. 14, after the apprehension of James Smalley, a bike program suspect who had been on foot or in his bike, McEwen said. “We are looking at the apprehension that took place on my bike,” McEwen said.

EMERGENCY Vehicle Driver Jay Bess had received McEwen’s call for backup when he saw a man in front of Mark Twain. He turned north on Mark Twain at Interstate 44, in pursuit, as the suspect cut across the drainage ditch toward Oak Street.

McEwen and Bess both confronted the suspect at the first intersection.

“She looked at me and said ‘get lost’,” McEwen said. “I said I saw you run into the building.”

Bess said, “She just came right out of the building.”

McEwen came around the back of the house and he and Bess conferred with the suspect.

“We weren’t in a hurry to hit and hel…” Bess said.

“Right now, we are looking at the house from a legal standpoint,” said Donald McCarthy, co-advisor for the International Student Services Community Cooperative. “We have to consider liability as well as the student’s safety.”

McCarthy said that many students have entered the dorms in the past. He and Richard Billson, assistant director of the University, are considering drawing up a proposal which would ask that the house stay unoccupied until a review is conducted on the decision to protect merit-based scholarships.

“The senate committee on recruitment, admissions, retention and student financial aid is assessing many names in the past. Though it has been in existence for many years, it was only recently that the committee was formed into action.”

At the senate meeting on Oct. 15, 1995, a resolution came about regarding the near-termination of the University Scholars Program among University International Students. The resolution was brought about because the house is being used as an open house for congregating, the International Students Organization (ISO) has received information that the house is being used for an open house, for an open house.

The senate committee on recruitment, admissions, retention and student financial aid is assessing many names in the past. Though it has been in existence for many years, it was only recently that the committee was formed into action.

Another problem the committee had with the house, was the lack of security in the house. The ISO has been working on a solution to protect merit-based scholarships, and also the students involved were not contacted before any action was taken.

Joseph Martinich, professor of business administration at U-M-St. Louis for 37 years and member of the senate for over 13 years, brought up the motion.

“First I had heard about the termination of the program was in the Article in the Current a couple of weeks ago,” said Martinich. “I think that, I had no prior knowledge of the University’s decision to end the program.”

Martinich claimed that the onsen senate was strongly opposed to being away with scholarships. The Current's editorial director and a frequent contributor to the magazine, O'Brian's column is a blend of personal opinion and commentary on current events. His writing often focuses on issues related to politics, society, and culture, and he is known for his insightful analyses and thought-provoking perspectives. In this particular column, O'Brian discusses the impact of Homecoming events on campus spirit and how such events can foster leadership and organizational skills.

Student says editorial was slanted

In this segment of the column, O'Brian reflects on a recent student's response to an editorial he had written. The student expressed dissatisfaction with the perspective presented, feeling that it did not accurately represent their views. O'Brian acknowledges the student's concerns and emphasizes the importance of open dialogue and diverse opinions in the platform of the magazine.

Homecoming was more than a way to show school spirit. It is an elegant evening at a banquet price. Some of us have to work around for a dinner dance to get married before we can go to an evening of dinner and dancing at the Hyatt. Homecoming provides an excuse to buy a new dress, clean up a little and use more than one fork to eat a meal. (Or using silverware at all.)

Of course, we also have to set us we're used to eating in ballrooms.

No moshing allowed.

You've come a long way, baby woman

by Julie Pressman of The Current staff

If I had been born 50 or 60 years ago (or even yesterday), I probably would not be the person I am today. The women's movement has opened doors and opportunities for women of my age that my mothers, mothers and grandmothers never even dreamed about. The movement inspired me; it gave me ideas about what I could be and what I wanted to be. It showed me that anything was possible if I worked hard enough and tried my best.

I think that the women's movement has had a profound impact on the way we think about ourselves and the world around us. It has helped to break down barriers and stereotypes and has encouraged women to pursue their dreams and aspirations. It has allowed women to take control of their own lives and make choices about their careers, families, and lifestyles. It has given women a voice and has helped to empower us to fight for our rights and for equality.

Despite all of the progress that has been made, there is still work to be done. Women continue to face challenges and obstacles, and there is still much to be achieved. But I am proud of the progress that has been made and I am confident that with continued efforts and dedication, we will be able to overcome these challenges and achieve even greater progress in the future. For me, the women's movement is a constant reminder of the power of hope, determination, and hard work. It is an inspiration to keep moving forward and to never give up on our dreams.

UM-St. Louis to change athletic conference

by Ken Dunkin

The Current staff

What a week. Homecoming at UM-St. Louis was a huge success; the student body was out in full force. The teams were energized, and the weather was perfect.

The biggest story of the week was undoubtedly the hockey team. Coach Wayne Ghoulson's team had a great week, playing well against the Rivermen from the University of Missouri-St. Louis. The team's confidence and ability to handle pressure were on full display.

The hockey team's success was not limited to the ice. The team's fans made their presence known. Led by Captain Steve Wolfe, the fans were a huge support for the team, making the home games more enjoyable.

The team's success also had a positive impact on the university. The hockey program's growth has led to increased attendance and support from the student body.

The homecoming weekend was a huge success for UM-St. Louis. The students, faculty, and fans all came together to celebrate the university and its achievements.

Rivermen soccer at the feet of Wisconsin-Parkside for Homecoming

by Ken Dunkin

Cold weather, lots of fans and a second year. Those conditions made up the Homecoming game for men's soccer. It was the best game of the season, according to Head Coach Tom Redmond.

The UM-St. Louis soccer team took on Wisconsin-Parkside in the third game of the season. The team had been performing well, but needed to prove themselves against a tough opponent.

The game featured a mix of experienced players and newcomers. The team started off slowly, but began to find their rhythm as the game progressed.

In the second half, the Rivermen took control of the game. They scored two goals, one each by senior forward Kevin Smith and junior midfielder Chad LeCour. The goals were the result of great teamwork and determination.

The win was a huge boost for the team's confidence. It also put them one step closer to qualifying for the playoffs.

The team's success was not limited to the pitch. The fans were out in full force, cheering on their team and creating an electric atmosphere.

Hockey Club fights way through season openers

The UM-St. Louis Rivermen Hockey Club opened their 1995-96 season two weekends ago in Lexington, Kentucky. Although the Rivermen lost both games, the women overcame the challenges and setbacks that faced them from the beginning.

"We have a head of new players this year that I never played with," said Rivermen head coach Ryan Rogers. "This may not prove to be a problem." We do have a lot of talent up front, but we also have a solid penalty killing unit, but that weak," Rogers said.

Unknown at the Rivermen at that time was the fact that Kentucky woman was the first female collegiate hockey last season. That role added pressure.

But team president/president Dan Dagmara was positive despite the fact. "I have confidence that our club can play this year," Rogers said.

We made the same mistakes they have made

The team's performance in the first period was commendable. They scored off a rebound from the goalie to make it 1-0. The fans made the same mistakes they have made in the past. The team's performance in the second period was not as good. They scored off a rebound from the goalie to make it 1-1.

Some of the players were excited that the game was going well, but others were not. The team's performance in the third period was not as good as in the first two periods. They scored off a rebound from the goalie to make it 1-2.

Where your money goes

A closer look at the $78.8 million campus budget

by Michael O'Brien
of The Current staff

How much does it cost to run UM-St. Louis? This year’s budget rounds out at $78.8 million. The recurring general operating budget is the amount of money that is required to run the University for one year. That money comes from a combination of three sources:

The largest amount of the money, according to the “Statement of Financial Year ’96 General Operations,” comes from state appropriations. This money is what the University receives from the State of Missouri, and it includes student fees, academic affairs, and general and administrative services. Student fees for fiscal year fiscal year 1996 make up 47 percent of the overall budget and amount to $37.3 million.

Two percent of the University’s operating budget comes from fund raising and other sources. For fiscal year ’96 that amount came to $1.5 million.

Once the three funding sources come together, the money is then distributed to the various administrative divisions.

According to the “Detail of Fiscal Year ’96 General Operations,” 13 percent of the University’s operating budget is required to run the University for one year. That money comes from the State of Missouri.
