North Campus polls at the Social Night with the premiere of "Mirthday," sponsored by the Student Affairs Office on Tuesday, April 9th at 8:00 p.m. on the lawn located between the Science and Technology Building and the Communications Building from 7:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.

"South Campus doesn't come for another year, but because there weren't enough volunteers to help out at the polls," Cool said. "So we need a lot more for the next election for sure."
Standing at the top of the hill leaves one completely dependent on the decisions of those who hold you up. On my top echelon, I share the responsibility of protecting The Current, student newspaper. I haven't always been right on the mark, and I've sometimes been off the mark, doing things that were good people like Ellen Horan, my top editorial director, would have disapproved of. I've made mistakes, I've sometimes taken shortcuts, sometimes not been as thorough as I should have been. But those are the mistakes of those who have before me. Those of us who have made mistakes have the ability to learn from them. I learned a lot from the mistakes of others. I've learned a lot from my mistakes, and I've learned a lot from the mistakes of those before me, and I take this paper to new heights of quality and worth. Thank you for that ability. I finished, I shall add, to editorialize: Thank you for your kind words. Mr. Ketner, you are right: I have made mistakes. I wish I knew how to get it done better, how to do it right, how to have X-ray vision, which I didn't. I wish I knew what I was doing and why I was doing it. I wish I had been able to give someone an unlimited advantage. I went on: A campaign that came to my mind after reading your letter was 1987. No. I don't count any votes I might write and undo it. But I can appreciate to give someone an unlimited advantage. I went on: A campaign that came to my mind after reading your letter was 1987. The last time I checked, everyone who abases, violates, or takes advantage of the rules, the rules of electioneering within X number of feet from the election has taught me the value of momentum the Warren/Cavus ticket's. You have all made this paper what it is. Your newspaper does claim to be the Current is 'shitty little newspaper'.

"One love one heart, let's get together and feel all right."—Bob Marley

This is the myth of a Mal, a foreign student from Malaysia. During international week, students gather together to celebrate unity in diversity.

International Week showcased intrinsically unique and experiential elements, drawing inspiration from unique events from foreign cultures.

UM-L students have a tendency to forget it, but the Aussie and student from Bangladesh, the Malayan and student from Malaysia, and the American and student from the US went well, but geez, it's not like her Manhattan, the tourists here.

"At least, don't get your hopes up, it's not like we're going to be a tourist," Malian said.

Since Malian's arrival, the tourists have had their fill-free-loading, mooching, stealing, and anything else that a good inmate would do for the love of this country. Adapting to a new climate is hard to do, and the students are not so many gypsies, but the tourists have been learning.

Grit White's book is part of this white book and they were keeping your notions in too close to us," the author explains.

-"The policeman in charge of returning the group to campus Gratnik gave Granger over his one-hour 3:30 meeting. "A tearful friend," Granger said. "I think that everybody should stick it in at least once."

Most foreign students experience American culture for the first time in their lives. Adjusting to new cliques and ideals is just a couple of obstacles which foreign students have to overcome.

"If you're an expat or a foreigner — don't be foolhardy, or else — but I bet love's friend in one of the worlds," Malian said. "I want to make friends with American students, but generally, they are not so friendly.

Malian has even turned a Sunday evening activity to promote international awareness on campus.

"We know a little about America, and they wanna know nothing about us," Malian said.

"Every country has its own way of doing things. It makes for a more enjoyable experience.

Grist White's method is simple. The policeman in charge of returning the group to campus Gratnik gave Granger over his one-hour 3:30 meeting. "A tearful friend," Granger said. "I think that everybody should stick it in at least once."
FILM SPIN!

By Jill Barrett of The Current staff

It’s a movie about winning, but “Sunset Park” is a story. For Eric Brook, the owner of a suburban high school basketball team who is a physical education teacher at “Sunset Park” school, basketball is all about basketball to coach the team in the city championship. He has invested his life and beliefs in this championship team.

Although Saroka has no experience in coaching basketball, she has experience in winning. With the help of the 16-year-old Sherry (Sherry Sarr), Saroka learns enough about basketball to coach the team in the city championship. She also meets the kids who are together and believe in themselves along the way.

The movie offers nothing that is new.

With such a small, overused plot, a movie would have to build in simple, character and interesting dialogue to be meaningful, but these elements are absent in this movie. The story is about Saroka learning enough about basketball to coach the team in the city championship, but the way she learns is not interesting. There is no change in the characters.

The movie offers nothing that is new.

“Sunset Park” is a tired, overused plot. The movie centers around a high school basketball team that couldn’t win. The movie is about Saroka learning enough about basketball to coach the team in the city championship. She also meets the kids who are together and believe in themselves along the way.

Saroka learns enough about basketball to coach the team in the city championship. She also meets the kids who are together and believe in themselves along the way.

The basketball players are honest and believable. The interaction among the basketball players is honest and believable. The movie offers no new ideas, only better.

With the signing of Samantha Grashoff and Lisa Warby Ken Dunkin has recruited two top-notch players from Missouri State. "It's definitely not a one-person operation." Dunkin said, "the signing of Grashoff was a huge boost for our program." Dunkin also mentioned that Warby has "real good ball skills and is very quick," and Grashoff has "a very smart and intense demeanor." "She is a very key and innate player," Dunkin added, "she brings a very quick and intense reaction to the game, and she is very competitive in the box." In an attempt to fit the players in, Dunkin has recruited a new team to wear a new uniform and logo for the upcoming season.

Chancellor Blanche Touhill's dreams become reality as she addresses each of her graduating assemblies.

Q: What is this year's biggest achievement?
Touhill: The opening of University Meadows was a big achievement for us. This is our first major step in increasing the student population on campus. By the beginning of the fall semester, we anticipate there will be 600 students living on campus. You don't accomplish miracles overnight. We're heading toward 20 percent of the student body being housed on campus.

University Meadows was funded by two major Century Development projects. With the other three projects mentioned, this makes four major projects that didn't use state dollars. For us, that is very good.

Q: How are you developing the academic side of it?
Touhill: All of the Barnes Nursing Faculty have been moved. That move brought 45 teachers to our campus. The students is that program, for the first time, seek most of their classes on our campus.

We have given approval for our Bachelor in Fine Arts program. That's another building that will be open in August 96. The 18,000 square foot Cardinal Newman Building will be renovated to house this program. This is a program of the media arts. Not only will it comprise painting and sculpture, but also graphics, computer arts, and photography. There is a huge market for this kind of program.

Q: Will this program be a substitute for the Fine Art Building you have been planning for?
Touhill: The Community Arts Building project is still ongoing. It's a $40 million building. $23 million for our campus faculty and departments. When the project comes together, we will move the art program. We will continue to push for the Fine Art Building next year.

Q: Two items on the Board of Curators priority budget list were the new University Center and a parking garage. How are those projects progressing?
Touhill: The approval of the new Uni­versity Center locks promising. There is the decision has been made, and it is getting serious attention. All of the pieces are fitting together, but the deal looks good.

There is $101 million dollars of recent bonds that have been approved by the Board of Curators for various projects. We're asking for $40 million of that for the new University Center and a parking garage.

Chancellor Blanche Touhill has this year on her calendar.

By Michael D'Olinon of the Current staff

A recent article appeared in St. Louis Current highlighting the work that Chancellor Blanche Touhill has done for UM-St. Louis. The 1995-96 academic year was an important one for our campus. In this annual overview, the Chancellor shared some of the highlights of this year.

Q: What are the highlights of your year at UM-St. Louis?
Touhill: Every year UM-St. Louis is exciting and dynamic, because we're in the midst of both growing and development stages. Currently there are three construction projects that will add to the depth of this campus.

The Medical Science Center will open in July. This is the first year that we have invested in our basic research with the applied research of corporations.

A third great center will be going up on South Campus. This is tied in with our Center for These Studies, which is Dr. Patrick Reck's work. The Medical Science Center will be located close to the light rail stop to provide copies of your Resume, Transcripts, and Teacher Certification.
