Alcohol Awareness Week

Art imitating life

BY JOSH RENAUD

The effort of the administration, faculty, and staff to increase enrollment paid off according to the most recent Enrollment Summary from the Office of the Registrar. The official on-campus enrollment for this semester is 12,453, which is a 2.4 percent increase over the 1997 fall semester. In addition, the number of on-campus credit hours jumped 3.8 percent over the 1997 fall semester figure to 1,452,043 this semester.

"Most of the numbers are up," said Gary Greer, vice chancellor of Student Affairs. "We have fewer students in residence, and we had a decline in nursing, but that was a planned jump to focus on responsibilities.

According to Greer, the increase was the result of a concerted effort by faculty and staff to retain students already enrolled and to pursue more new students. "We see ourselves as a comprehensive, full-service university," Greer said. "A university is defined by its classes. We want to do that right up.

The campaign to recruit new students began earlier this year. Greer said that faculty and staff did more follow-ups and spent many evenings making phone calls. "We did calling campaigns," said Kelly Nelson, vice-chancellor for Academic Affairs. "We had faculty, staff, and even volunteers calling people who had been admitted, but who hadn't registered yet, to see and convince them to come here.

The university has raised the freshman yield from 51 to 58 percent. "It's not enough to just have a good yield," Greer said. "We want kids who are here and who are out of here."

Alcohol Awareness Week

special to the Current

Promoting the safe sale of alcohol is the purpose behind National Collegians Alcohol Awareness Week.

This year, "make choices you can live with," reflects that idea. "We just ask, if you are going to drink, you have to make responsible choices you can live with," said Michael Hachmeister, director of Horizons Peer Education.

Hachmeister, a graduate student, has worked with the program for the past two years. The other five members of the organization are undergraduates.

Horizons Peer Educators are the main sponsors of Alcohol Awareness Week, but other organizations help out as well, by advertising, distributing information, and either making or planning events, or helping to put the activities together.

The activities go on throughout the week at various locations around the campus to give as many students as possible the opportunity to participate.

"We are trying to have the activities at a variety of places, so that different people can come to our events," Hachmeister said.

The week kicks off with a visit from G.J. The Funster, who will be set up on the University Center Patio. There will also be a Full Vision Goggles demonstration. Tuesday, at the Student Center, there will be a forum with UM-SL. Local police officer Kevin Krueger spoke about alcohol-related issues. A movie, "Binge Drinking Benjamin," will be shown at the University Meadows Clubhouse on Wednesday. A mocktail party in the University Center Lobby will be held on Thursday, and all drinks are on the house.

"We just ask, if you are going to drink, you have to make responsible choices you can live with," said Michael Hachmeister, director of Horizons Peer Education.

Life’s ‘squeaky wheels’ set poor example

Today’s society is full of many character people. There are the individuals who say “please” and “thank you” in the appropriate situations. These are the rarest of the rare.

But, what most people don’t know is that there are people who were born into it. They have a special place in the heart of millions of people. It is an absolute must that they are the ones who are to be followed.

Unfortunately, for every police officer or teacher that has had to deal with these types of people, they have only been about 15 with the exact opposite disposition.

I believe that the most important types are usually on the lookout for any opportunity to make someone else’s life unpleasant, especially when they have a small child in tow. It is a mark of the passing years.

For instance, when they are the customer and I am the employee, I try to be as friendly and helpful as possible. I get heavy with the laugh and especially with “the old man”.

Last week at my lovely job as a barista, I encountered more than my fair share of this breed. This was hands-down the worst of the worst.

It appeared to be to be the most common breed for the lifetime of Columbus.

The Columbus Amy Lombardo, Day Six: Name. Features Editor Everyone in the store was marked down, but no one knew that was the last thing. In an unintentional swipe, one of my coworkers had accidentally marked one particular item as 40% off. It was not a painful mistake because he had run out of stock. We adjusted the price because it was too far out of order.

Well, the rest of the day went exactly the same. She had been behind in line the day before, and witnessed the entire incident.

"I'll be all up in that thinking about it," she said in a fluffy voice, and "I've decided that I want that item as a souvenir, too. After all, he got it for free!"

Okay, honey, just the face you want someone to see something. Nothing is a given in the current consumer. The item was now marked correctly, and that was the price that she would have to pay.

This gave our little god-complex quite an opportunity to blow up, cause a scene, throw our jobs, etc. etc., but my innate sense of humor turned it into an impromptu comedy session.

The battle drug on the customer “is always right” choice stepped. I must believe that whoever thought that this idea didn’t plan on the selfish and greedy to take such action

Needless to say, do the discover. This 25-year old woman had successfully destroyed any relationship with the consumer. The items now went back, and we were left with nothing.

This is the only good types. It has the potential to a very good person to the initial consumer. The items now went back, and we were left with nothing.

Alcohol is a serious problem on many college campuses. Underage drinking, drunkenness, and early death are issues that universities all over the country.

The worst of this unfortunate problem is alcohol. Alcohol Awareness Week, sponsored by Horizons Peer Educators, will feature a number of events designed to bring these problems to the attention of students new and old. This week, Horizons will be handing out free pamphlets at all dorms. Let's hope these messages do not fall on deaf ears.

We urge UM-St. Louis students to educate themselves and participate in these activities. We also suggest that the university install a warning message on all computer terminals. We commend the efforts of Horizons in addressing the problem of underage drinking.

So why do we think that? Let us hear from you on this or any issue in our letter to the editor.

Horizons advocates for a week of awareness

The Issue: Alcohol Awareness Week is fast approaching and Horizons wishes to bring this issue to your attention. Some of the events designed to show students the effects of excessive drinking has on people.

Downtown St. Louis needs UMSL students

Downtown St. Louis is important to the UMSL student. Downtown is where... the sports teams play, the cultural events take place, and the bars are located. OK, so I'm exaggerating a little. Nonetheless, I think that these benefits outweigh most of the things that make people reluctant to go downtown.

I am an active leader on campus and in our community. I have encountered many other leaders during various events, and my experiences show that there are a lot of people interested in Downtown St. Louis. However, it is not enough to just have interest. We need to make our interest felt.

Capitalism, imperialism criticized at annual event

BY DAVID BURKE

Criticism of capitalism and imperialism was the main topic of Monday’s annual “Anti-Columbus Day” rally, sponsored by the Pan-African Research Organization and the Coalition for Racial Justice.

“We are not recognizing Christopher Columbus, we are talking about anything but a slave, a murderer, and a thief,” said Michael Perkins, president of the Pan-African Research Organization.

Perkins called the celebration of Columbus Day, a “joke” and “sick.”

“For some it was a day of death, it was a day of mourning, it was a day of murder,” he said. “So, we are going to call upon our community.”

“Why would we want to celebrate a person who put us in the last part, today and in the future.”

He said students have an “obligation” to become involved by joining or creating organizations expressing their views.

“The struggle is being waged,” Perkins said. “Today is the struggle. What are you going to do in that struggle?”

Tara Kinzinski, an organizer with the Revolutionary Anti-Imperialist League, said capitalism is very much in the world today.

“Imperialism isn’t an accident, it’s a system and it’s the highest stage of capitalism,” Kinzinski said.

He called the United States an “impediment nation” and an “impediment nation.

“Every time the United States takes a defeat, it is at Somalia, and I also believe because every time the United States is defeated it is a victory for the oppressed people.”

He also criticized American law enforcement and the penal system calling the U.S. “one of the biggest violators of human rights in the world today.”

“The United States has been an occupying force within the community,” Kinzinski said. “It is not here to serve and protect, more than not it is here to bring violence.”

Kinzinski said.

He also told the supporters of the Inquisition in their diocese with bread along the corridor a “slave nation” and saying, literally own “red Jesus.”

“Those are Europeans,” Kinzinski said. “Those are not the people of the Middle East.”

The program, which lasted about an hour and a half, was broadcast live by teachers in two instances, but was news reported.

percent of the general operating budget and the increase was achieved financially.

“Any positive for us,” Krueger said, “because that means we have some extra income we can put back into the academic programs to strengthen them.”

Costello said that the 400-credit-hour increase would probably generate $1.5 million per year more for the university and that the university would have a lot of hard work in order to complete a good any other student organization.

“We are discussing whether we should take these resources and turn them into more recruiting, or whatever else,” she said. “It’s an open question at this point.”

The enrollment increase has provided many benefits for the University, but Krueger explained that more resources created a greater demand for classes and parking space.

“They have been problems, but we have worked through them,” Nilson said. “We’re still to reduce the wait list, and we reduced it substantially by adding faculty members and those additional resources, by adding sections, and by hiring more faculty. Overall, it went very smoothly.”

"A Night at the Roxbury" guys aren’t fit for film

Roxbury guys aren’t fit for film

Now Playing

A Night at the Roxbury is a non-stop Saturday Night Live sketch stretched too far. The filmmakers and Saturday Night Live involvement on the show Roxbury has turned the concept of a show that was on the air for several years into a film. The idea of taking a classic sketch and turning it into a film is a common one, but in this case it fails. A few sketches on stage are thrown into this film, and plenty more只是 very memorable.

The show is about three friends who work as bouncers at a club in the Roxbury. The three friends are Connors (Kevin空间), Larkin (Barry Larkin), and McGuire (Scott McGuire). The three friends are all very different in personality, but they all have one thing in common: the ability to get people into the club.

The film starts with the three friends getting ready to work at the club. They put on their uniforms and head downstairs to the club. The club is filled with people dancing and having a good time. The three friends are able to get into the club and start their work.

Some advice for Cardinals’ management on winning next year

For the St. Louis Cardinals to be successful in the 1999 campaign, here is what the owners have to focus on:

1. Starting Pitching!-The Cardinals should have signed Andy Benes last season, and that is one of the biggest questions this year.

2. A Decent Shortstop-We need to convince the club to re-sign Texas Ranger Todd Stottlemyre. Otherwise, the shortstop position will be a big hole in the team.

3. Brown or re-sign Texas Ranger Todd Stottlemyre. Otherwise, the shortstop position will be a big hole in the team.

4. Re-signing Brian Jordan and Delino DeShields-Jordan is the center fielder of the future. If we don’t keep him, we will be prepared to own up to the decision later.

5. McGuire-Scott McGuire is the third baseman on the Cardinals. He is one of the best third basemen in the league and has a great deal of experience. He is the key to the Cardinals’ defense.

Soul Coughing has something for everyone

Soul Coughing’s “El Oso”

Shade records

Mist equal parts beat poet Jack Kerouac, revolutionary yippie and Tim Burton’s Burton family, and you’re about halfway there.

Listen to the song "What It’s Like" from the early writings. The song is simple, an acoustic guitar and a very ordinary bass line, yet the song is one of the best received recently by any artist, yet another high-sounding hip-hop song.

The 14 track disc has blown me away. Throughout the disc the voice of the singer, Kevin Bacon, can be heard as he tells the stories of the songs. He can never tell where he is going musically from the one song to the next, his voice is soothingly seductive, and the nect for a little song to break up the pace and with Soul Coughing the music is good at the end.

This disc is a ray of sunshine in any House of Pain comparisons need to be checked at the door. Everlast built a stronger house with a new foundation. Only time will tell if they will make a new song, I wouldn’t bet against him.

An Afterthought/Tap

Willie Ford Sings the Blues

Seven years ago Everlast burst onto the scene with his hit song “White Tux.” The group has sold well in its first week out. Soul Coughing may very well be the next big thing to happen in the music industry.

The album does not disappoint, nor can I say that it was a disappointment. The group was like a mix of a funky beat, a hip-hop beat, and a very ordinary bass beat, yet the group had a very unique sound. The group took a conversation with their hit record to see that he had something to offer the music industry.

The group’s second album is already on heavy rotation and despite the inability of critics to make sense out of the songs, the group has something to offer the music industry.

The group’s first single, “Irresistible Bliss,” was a hit in the music industry. The song “What It’s Like” from their hit record to see that he had something to offer the music industry.
