Inside:

- Life is the Pits:
  Fight breaks out at annual "Sexy Armpits" contest and provokes the usual controversy at Pi Inyour Facea fraternity. See page 5.

- Goosed:
  Ostrich chancellor announces new program to clean up goose droppings around campus as alien light turns top faculty, administrators, staff and students into geese. See page 2.

Annual Parody Issue
New dept. takes on campus pooh

Problem exacerbated by UFO that changes DUMSLonians into geese

BY HAPPY APPEL
of The Stagnant staff

Due to the population explosion of geese on the campus of DUMSL there has been an outbreak of sidewalk clutter. The explosion, rumored to have been caused by a UFO which has allegedly turned many prominent DUMSL figures into geese, has caused a real problem for students strolling the sidewalks. Chancellor Branch Newhill was reportedly turned into an ostrich. Many members of the DUMSL community have voiced their concerns about having to navigate through myriads of dung. Some members of the community have gone so far as to propose changing the University's name from DUMSL to DUNGL.

However, many members found that to be a tad bit drastic. So the powers that be have decided to jump into the ring of crap and have opted to create yet another division in the bureaucracy of DUMSL. There will now be a new department solely devoted to turf scraping the DUMSL campus saving everyone's shoes from the peril of poop. Applications are currently being accepted for positions in the newly created department of Stool Management. For more information you can contact Stool Management at 555-DUNGL or by visiting their website at www.dumsl.edu/services/turd-scrape99.html.

RIGHT: A fowl offender walks causally away from the scene of the crime. Photo by Dot Warner

Campus to institute geese relocation program

BY SUE DONYM
of The Stagnant staff

After great protest by faculty, staff and students regarding the decision to have a goose barbecue, a relocation program has been approved to reduce goose population.

Bobby Goosewrestler, director of the DUM-St. Louis police, said grounds crews would begin the trapping of the geese within the month. He said that he disliked the idea of killing and barbecuing the geese but something needed to be done.

"Anyone who walks around the campus, or attempts to drive even, has to contend with these geese. Everyday we have some sort of complaint about them. 'I slipped on goose poop and bumped my elbow.' 'I was bitten by a mad goose and I think I have rabies.' 'I'm in love with a goose and it won't leave its mate.' The list goes on and on," Goosewrestler said. "The costs to the University for the medical and psychological treatment of students in these cases are skyrocketing. We had to do something and originally we thought the goose barbecue with proceeds going to the International Center for Topical Economy would be a great idea. But then the protestors stepped in."

Vice Chancellor Reinhold Shoogoose, said that the protests made clear the unease with the sale of barbecued goose meat on campus. He said the administration was somewhat surprised by the response but quickly responded with the present relocation plan.

"When we realized the level of emotion people had with our original plan we felt we had to do something," Shoogoose said. "So we decided to follow the lead of Town and Country and relocate them, as they did with the deer."

Neither Shoogoose nor Goosewrestler would comment on critics of the plan that say the geese will just fly back.

"Let's just say," Goosewrestler said, "that won't be a problem."

Chancellor turns into ostrich

BY DAVEY BOOGER
of The Stagnant staff

The administration denied late Friday that Chancellor Branch Newhill had been turned into an ostrich by a strange beam from a UFO that appeared over campus last week.

The beam reportedly turned many other DUMSL denizens into geese.

"It's a ridiculous assertion," said Bobby Rampler, director of University Propaganda. "There is no truth to it whatsoever. Where do you guys even get this stuff?"

However, an anonymous, unidentified administrator who wished to remain nameless talked to a Stagnant reporter off the record.

"I'm not saying anything to you," the administrator said. "Hey, don't write that down. Stop it! Stop writing down what I'm saying! CUT IT OUT NOW!"

Newhill could not be reached for comment but released a statement through a spokesperson.

"AWK!" the spokesperson said.

"AWK! AWWWWWWWWK!"

The spokesperson then bit the Stagnant correspondent repeatedly about the arms and face.

Meanwhile, students and faculty say they've seen the new ostrich chancellor, and many said they were pleased with the change.

"I started talking to her about the lack of classes, poor parking and high tuition and she just stuck her head in the sand," said student Johann Brickwood, who began growing large feathery wings during the interview. "It was kind of reassuring in a way."
Coup d’etat strikes SGA

Controller takes over Assembly

BY DAVEY BOOGER
of the Stagnant staff

SGA Controller Ren Nash announced at Thursday’s Stupid Government meeting that he had overthrown President Tim Bravery and declared martial law eliciting angry responses from the three student groups who bothered to attend.

I am now in control," Nash told the crowd. "There is nothing to fear unless of course you oppose me."

Outraged supporters of President-in-Exile Bravery, numbering by some estimates in the high single digits, reportedly arranged for the President to protest the move by standing on a tank outside the SGA offices.

“It wasn’t really a tank exactly,” said Moorhead Yodeler, a sophomore in Graphic Chemistry. “It was actually my ’87 Honda Civic but we mounted a broomstick on the top.”

Bravery never showed up at the rally but organizers did attempt to drum up support by playing a recorded message from the president over loudspeakers aquired from the TV club.

“I’m not in the office right now, but if you’ll leave your name, number and a short message . . .” the recording said.

Yodeler called playing the recording “probably a tactical mistake” but said that they wanted to have the president say something.

“It seemed to sum up his presidency,” Yodeler said.

It was unclear whether Bravery was aware of Nash’s actions since nobody had seen him for a couple of weeks,” Yodeler said.

“That’s not unusual,” Yodeler said. “But I’m sure he’ll be very upset to learn of his overthrow, next time he drops by the campus.”

During his frequent absences, Bravery has reportedly devolved all executive governing authority onto his voice mail.

Reaction elsewhere was mixed. Interviewed at her home, Chancellor Branch Newhill expressed respect for Bravery.

Controller Ren Nash announced at Thursday’s Stupid Government meeting that he had overthrown President Tim Bravery and declared martial law eliciting angry responses from the three student groups who bothered to attend.

I am now in control," Nash told the crowd. "There is nothing to fear unless of course you oppose me."

Outraged supporters of President-in-Exile Bravery, numbering by some estimates in the high single digits, reportedly arranged for the President to protest the move by standing on a tank outside the SGA offices.

“It wasn’t really a tank exactly,” said Moorhead Yodeler, a sophomore in Graphic Chemistry. “It was actually my ’87 Honda Civic but we mounted a broomstick on the top.”

Bravery never showed up at the rally but organizers did attempt to drum up support by playing a recorded message from the president over loudspeakers aquired from the TV club.

“I’m not in the office right now, but if you’ll leave your name, number and a short message . . .” the recording said.

Yodeler called playing the recording “probably a tactical mistake” but said that they wanted to have the president say something.

“It seemed to sum up his presidency,” Yodeler said.

It was unclear whether Bravery was aware of Nash’s actions since nobody had seen him for a couple of weeks,” Yodeler said.

“That’s not unusual,” Yodeler said. “But I’m sure he’ll be very upset to learn of his overthrow, next time he drops by the campus.”

During his frequent absences, Bravery has reportedly devolved all executive governing authority onto his voice mail.

Reaction elsewhere was mixed. Interviewed at her home, Chancellor Branch Newhill expressed respect for Bravery.

SGA Controller Ren Nash announced at Thursday’s Stupid Government meeting that he had overthrown President Tim Bravery and declared martial law eliciting angry responses from the three student groups who bothered to attend.

I am now in control," Nash told the crowd. "There is nothing to fear unless of course you oppose me."

Outraged supporters of President-in-Exile Bravery, numbering by some estimates in the high single digits, reportedly arranged for the President to protest the move by standing on a tank outside the SGA offices.

“It wasn’t really a tank exactly,” said Moorhead Yodeler, a sophomore in Graphic Chemistry. “It was actually my ’87 Honda Civic but we mounted a broomstick on the top.”

Bravery never showed up at the rally but organizers did attempt to drum up support by playing a recorded message from the president over loudspeakers aquired from the TV club.

“I’m not in the office right now, but if you’ll leave your name, number and a short message . . .” the recording said.

Yodeler called playing the recording “probably a tactical mistake” but said that they wanted to have the president say something.

“It seemed to sum up his presidency,” Yodeler said.

It was unclear whether Bravery was aware of Nash’s actions since nobody had seen him for a couple of weeks,” Yodeler said.

“That’s not unusual,” Yodeler said. “But I’m sure he’ll be very upset to learn of his overthrow, next time he drops by the campus.”

During his frequent absences, Bravery has reportedly devolved all executive governing authority onto his voice mail.

Reaction elsewhere was mixed. Interviewed at her home, Chancellor Branch Newhill expressed respect for Bravery.

SGA Controller Ren Nash announced at Thursday’s Stupid Government meeting that he had overthrown President Tim Bravery and declared martial law eliciting angry responses from the three student groups who bothered to attend.

I am now in control," Nash told the crowd. "There is nothing to fear unless of course you oppose me."

Outraged supporters of President-in-Exile Bravery, numbering by some estimates in the high single digits, reportedly arranged for the President to protest the move by standing on a tank outside the SGA offices.

“It wasn’t really a tank exactly,” said Moorhead Yodeler, a sophomore in Graphic Chemistry. “It was actually my ’87 Honda Civic but we mounted a broomstick on the top.”

Bravery never showed up at the rally but organizers did attempt to drum up support by playing a recorded message from the president over loudspeakers aquired from the TV club.

“I’m not in the office right now, but if you’ll leave your name, number and a short message . . .” the recording said.

Yodeler called playing the recording “probably a tactical mistake” but said that they wanted to have the president say something.

“It seemed to sum up his presidency,” Yodeler said.

It was unclear whether Bravery was aware of Nash’s actions since nobody had seen him for a couple of weeks,” Yodeler said.

“That’s not unusual,” Yodeler said. “But I’m sure he’ll be very upset to learn of his overthrow, next time he drops by the campus.”

During his frequent absences, Bravery has reportedly devolved all executive governing authority onto his voice mail.

Reaction elsewhere was mixed. Interviewed at her home, Chancellor Branch Newhill expressed respect for Bravery.

SGA Controller Ren Nash announced at Thursday’s Stupid Government meeting that he had overthrown President Tim Bravery and declared martial law eliciting angry responses from the three student groups who bothered to attend.

I am now in control," Nash told the crowd. "There is nothing to fear unless of course you oppose me."

Outraged supporters of President-in-Exile Bravery, numbering by some estimates in the high single digits, reportedly arranged for the President to protest the move by standing on a tank outside the SGA offices.

“It wasn’t really a tank exactly,” said Moorhead Yodeler, a sophomore in Graphic Chemistry. “It was actually my ’87 Honda Civic but we mounted a broomstick on the top.”

Bravery never showed up at the rally but organizers did attempt to drum up support by playing a recorded message from the president over loudspeakers aquired from the TV club.

“I’m not in the office right now, but if you’ll leave your name, number and a short message . . .” the recording said.

Yodeler called playing the recording “probably a tactical mistake” but said that they wanted to have the president say something.

“It seemed to sum up his presidency,” Yodeler said.

It was unclear whether Bravery was aware of Nash’s actions since nobody had seen him for a couple of weeks,” Yodeler said.

“That’s not unusual,” Yodeler said. “But I’m sure he’ll be very upset to learn of his overthrow, next time he drops by the campus.”

During his frequent absences, Bravery has reportedly devolved all executive governing authority onto his voice mail.

Reaction elsewhere was mixed. Interviewed at her home, Chancellor Branch Newhill expressed respect for Bravery.

SGA Controller Ren Nash announced at Thursday’s Stupid Government meeting that he had overthrown President Tim Bravery and declared martial law eliciting angry responses from the three student groups who bothered to attend.

I am now in control," Nash told the crowd. "There is nothing to fear unless of course you oppose me."

Outraged supporters of President-in-Exile Bravery, numbering by some estimates in the high single digits, reportedly arranged for the President to protest the move by standing on a tank outside the SGA offices.

“It wasn’t really a tank exactly,” said Moorhead Yodeler, a sophomore in Graphic Chemistry. “It was actually my ’87 Honda Civic but we mounted a broomstick on the top.”

Bravery never showed up at the rally but organizers did attempt to drum up support by playing a recorded message from the president over loudspeakers aquired from the TV club.

“I’m not in the office right now, but if you’ll leave your name, number and a short message . . .” the recording said.

Yodeler called playing the recording “probably a tactical mistake” but said that they wanted to have the president say something.

“It seemed to sum up his presidency,” Yodeler said.

It was unclear whether Bravery was aware of Nash’s actions since nobody had seen him for a couple of weeks,” Yodeler said.

“That’s not unusual,” Yodeler said. “But I’m sure he’ll be very upset to learn of his overthrow, next time he drops by the campus.”

During his frequent absences, Bravery has reportedly devolved all executive governing authority onto his voice mail.

Reaction elsewhere was mixed. Interviewed at her home, Chancellor Branch Newhill expressed respect for Bravery.
Basketball faces elimination at DUM-St. Louis

BY J. MANGO
of The Stagnant staff

In response to Rech Wrestler's recent resignation, and the River Rat basketball team's lack of success in recent years, DUM-St. Louis has decided to end the program all together.

DUM-St. Louis will now sponsor the River Rat chess team.

"We know it seems like a sudden decision but we've been pondering this for a long time," DUM-St. Louis Athletic Director Pat Roland said.

The chess team will get the funding that the basketball team used to get. They will practice and compete at the Mark Train Gym, just like the basketball team did.

DUM-St. Louis Chancellor Branch Newhill is ecstatic about the decision.

"I'm tired of being disgraced," Newhill said. "Everywhere I went people harassed me about the basketball team's poor record. I've had enough! Now we have a very strong academic institution here. Brains before brawn. We have no deal from our strengths and from here on out our strength is chess."

The poor record Newhill referred to was the combined 19-600 record the River Rats have posted in the past three seasons.

Roland welcomes the change and sees it as a fresh start.

"Well it certainly is no skin off of my back to not worry about hiring a successor for [Wrestler]," Roland said. "Besides, the team would still be bad for a couple of years before the new coach can have an influence. With the chess team, we can be good right away."

While no strong coaching candidates have emerged to lead the chess team, several names have been tossed around. They include Alex Trebeck, Dan Qualye, and that guy who ran with Ross Perot in 1992.

Bill Gates, owner of Microsoft, was rumored to have an interest in funding the chess team. However, it turned out that he really wanted to buy the University instead.

The new DUM-St. Louis pep band will still play during the chess meets. During opponent's moves they will play the Jaws theme or any Barry Manilow classic. However, they are prohibited from playing while a River Rat player is making a move.

Tryouts for the chess team will be held next September. The team begins play in November.

Both men and women are invited to participate. The only requirement is that you have to know how to spell your name correctly and fill in the corresponding bubbles on a scantron sheet, as well as having exorbitant amounts of free time.

"I would encourage women to go out for the team," Newhill said. "Women can play this game. Haven't you ever read Amy Tan's Joy Luck Club?"

Roland said anyone who is interested in coaching the chess team should apply in the athletic office, but there are a few requirements.

"The chess coach needs to be innovative enough to know how to use these rules so we can only get the best chess players. The last thing we need is an NCAA investigation into our chess program."

Two River Rat basketball players are attacked by a goose in the Mark Train Building Gym late last semester. Frequent goose assaults were only one of many problems which plagued the DUM-St. Louis basketball program.

Major Bookstore theft foiled

BY CASPER WILLY
of The Stagnant staff

Wednesday, around 8:30 p.m. several students reported to campus police having seen a man trying to run as fast as he could while pulling a cart full of stolen textbooks from the DUM-St. Louis Bookstore.

"He wasn't going very fast, but I don't think I would be either lugging all those books around like that," said one of the students.

When asked approximately how many books had been stolen Tori Schmutz, director of Hillary Services, claimed there was no real way to tell. "We don't keep a very accurate inventory of [textbooks] but we estimate somewhere around 350 were stolen." Schmutz claims that would come out to be over $10,000 in sales for the Bookstore.

The perpetrator was caught and arrested that evening while he was trying frantically to wheel the books to his car located in Garage D. Officer Barry Brinkenhammer of the campus police said he didn't put up much of a fight.

"Some students called us and told us what they saw, so we finished our lunch and drove over as fast as we could. The poor guy wasn't getting anywhere very fast with all those books so we just walked over and arrested him," Brinkenhammer said.

The man was identified and taken to the police station, however, he was only charged with a misdemeanor since the actual dollar value of the books only came to a mere $673.22. Schmutz had no comment on this.
of the Stagnant staff

Campus police made several arrests after a fight broke out during a fraternity rush event on Saturday.

The controversial annual event, known as the "Sexy Armpits" contest, is sponsored by the Pi Inyour Facea fraternity. Fraternity President Biff Boffo defended the integrity of the contest against allegations that it's sexist and horrifically stupid.

"Nuh-uh," Boffo said.

Saturday night's event began calmly enough as contestants were judged in a variety of events, including Shaving, the Sniff Test, and Miss Congeniality. Trouble ensued, however, during the Best Armpit Fart event when a group of protesters stormed into the fraternity house and demanded to be heard.

The protesters, members of a local organization called the Citizens' Revolution for Armpit Protection (CRAP), argued that the contest unfairly discriminates against those who choose to sport long armpit hair. They protested by simply raising their arms in the air and overwhelming the participants with fumes.

In an interview following the event, CRAP President Lana Beansprout spoke of the importance of the group's cause.

"If you let it grow long enough, you can make cool little braids out of it. See?" said Beansprout.

The protesters, members of a local organization called the Citizens' Revolution for Armpit Protection (CRAP), argued that the contest unfairly discriminates against those who choose to sport long armpit hair. They protested by simply raising their arms in the air and overwhelming the participants with fumes.

In an interview following the event, CRAP President Lana Beansprout spoke of the importance of the group's cause.

"If you let it grow long enough, you can make cool little braids out of it. See?" said Beansprout.

Other fraternity members were asked if steps would be taken to prevent such clashes at future Sexy Armpits contests.

"I dunno," said Dirk Diggem, chairman of keg refills. "I can burp Purple Haze by Jimi Hendrix. Wanna hear it?"

Police were called after the fight broke out and arrested the protesters and fraternity members involved. The remaining fraternity members decided to carry on with the event, awarding the Grand Prize to Muffy Mayberry, a freshman in her sixth year at DUMSL.

As winner, Mayberry will get a year's supply of Ban Roll-On Deodorant in her choice of Mountain Spring or Fresh as a Daisy Scent.

When asked if the earlier melee had put a damper on her evening, Mayberry responded, "What's a melee?"

Mayberry also said she was thrilled with her win.

"Being named this year's Miss Armpit is an honor I'll remember for as long as I can," Mayberry said.

The DUMSL Office of Shameless Ploys to Look Important is pleased to announce the formation of these new Endowed Professorships:

- The Leroy Dee Endowed Professorship for the Study of Dandruff, Toejam, and Belly Button Lint
- The Richard Lemming Endowed Professorship for the Study of Urban Sidewalk Cracks
- The August Cush Endowed Professorship for the Study of Single-Ply vs. Two-Ply Toilet Tissue
- The Ron Eagleson Endowed Professorship for the Study of Goose Dung
- The Don Janforth Endowed Professorship for the Study of Third World Nations whose Names Begin with "X"

If you know anyone who has actually taken a class with an Endowed Professor, please let us know so that we may stop this immediately. These professorships were created just for show and were not intended to actually be useful to students.
Stagnant editor to get intern

BY J. MANGO
of The Stagnant staff

Davey Booger, Tyrant-in-Chief of The Stagnant, announced today that he has hired a new intern. The intern will serve as Booger’s personal secretary dealing with The Stagnant’s internal management issues.

Monica L. is what she calls herself. She has a history in the political arena and is from the Washington D.C. area. Monica said during her interview that she wants a fresh start in journalism and chose the St. Louis area because she was tired of the Washington D.C. scene.

"I want to be the one asking questions instead of being asked," Monica said.

When asked what she meant by that statement, Monica said she didn’t recall and then mulled something about a star.

Nevertheless, Booger was impressed with Monica during their interview.

"She just blew me away with her oral presentation," Booger said.

Monica admits that her oral communication skills are one of her strong suits and that she likes talking on the phone. But she said she is very careful about what she talks about during her phone conversations.

"You have to be careful about the information you give out over the phone, because you never know when you’ll be tripped up," Monica said.

She also takes pride in her wardrobe selection, especially her berets. She boasts that she has the largest beret collection in the Midwest.

Booger was concerned about the change in professions. "It’s a huge transition from the political field to journalism, they’re actually on the extreme opposite ends of the spectrum," Booger said. "However, Monica already seems to know a lot about how reporters gather information, especially in the investigative journalism field."

Monica said she is excited about the opportunity Booger has given her at The Stagnant. She said she plans to begin at the bottom and slowly move to the top.

"Experiencing different positions is fun," Monica said.

She said Booger promised that she will get her first story assignment within a month.

"I had to literally get on my knees to get him to do it," Monica said.

Monica said the journalism field offers more challenges and exciting people to meet.

"I’m tired of having politicians, I mean politics," Monica said. "The journalism field gives me more men, I mean opportunities for me."

It is not clear what Monica’s first responsibility will be at The Stagnant, but sources say it may involve organizing Booger’s cigar collection.
New Center to be open to elite Honorary College students only

BY SUE DONYM
of The Stagnant staff

The chancellor's office announced Friday plans for the division of the available hours of the new student center, allocating them almost exclusively to the students of the Honorary College. Despite protests by students and some staff of the main campus Dr. Robert Morose, dean of the Prairie Laledo Honorary College insists the plan is best, not only for the students of the Honorary College but for the regular DUM-St. Louis students, faculty, staff, the entire University, the St. Louis community, and our society as a whole.

“We aren't talking about your average student, or person for that matter,” Morose said. “We have to take into account the amount of money invested into the new student center and the particular needs of the more intellectually and socially advantaged, the lack of real needs for the lower-level students, and the weight of all these factors when making these difficult decisions.”

The conception of the idea originated from the Anglomania Club at DUM-St. Louis. Morose said The Committee for the Advancement of the Elite and Academically Arrogant was formed in direct response to the appeals of the club. The committee reportedly had in-depth discussions in regard to the issue for almost two hours before coming to the realization that the goals of the University were indisputable when the history of allotment decisions were examined.

“It is clear that, in addition to the goal of becoming a Research II facility, furthering the position of the University's reputation in the hearts and minds of the privileged few is a priority,” Morose said. “It is all well and good to give asylum to the ideals of the common man. But we need to keep in mind the realities of finances and, although perhaps politically correct, it just is not sensible to turn this beautiful new center over to those who have no respect for the amounts of money spent. We think that it's most reasonable that those who will understand, not only the larger concepts of the importance of the expenditures but the advanced technologies within the center, should be those who benefit from the center. I mean, let's be realistic here, some of these people, the students of the main campus, attended community colleges before they came to DUM-St. Louis. Of course, they are allowed into the University. Certainly. And the [Prairie Laledo Honors College] even takes some of those types into our fold when appropriate. But we need to keep in mind proportionality, in as far as what resources are needed and where they are needed and to whom they should be bestowed.”

It is planned that the student center will be available to all students of DUM-St. Louis during its first week to allow a look-see to the entire DUM-St. Louis community. Starting the second week, those students not displaying special identification froth the Honorary College will be allowed in every third Monday of the year from 10:07 a.m. until 10:32 a.m. and every seventh Wednesday of the year from 6:12 p.m. until 6:37 p.m. beginning the second week after opening except any Monday or Wednesday that falls within a 13-day period of any national holiday or campus break. All these times will be subject to change without notice and tentative schedules will be available at The Aboveground.

Tenured faculty will be allowed in during any regular hours the center is open. Regular faculty of the Honorary College will be allowed to apply for special consent as is necessary.

Morose said there are additional opportunities for the non-honorary students of DUM-St. Louis to come into the new student center.

“Any student of DUM-St. Louis has the opportunity to come into the center during any of the regular hours by way of volunteer work. There will at all times be a need for the non-Honorary College students to come in and serve coffee and pastries to the non-honorary students while they gather to discuss the consequential topics of the day or are there just to relax from their more highly rigorous schedule of scholastics,” Morose said. “All of the students of DUM-St. Louis have the fortune not only to see the center but to serve the larger community by way of serving what we hope is the future of our ruling class.”

A limousine has been purchased by the University and will be running continuously from the Prairie Laledo Honorary College to the new center as a service to students.

If you have too much free time come work for The Stagnant and never have any free time again. So join The Stagnant or just stop by the office and you'll want to stay. Even if you don't, we won't let you leave. We're serious. Try it. We dare you.

The few...
The proud...
Uhhhh...well, the few anyway
The Stagnant.
Board refuses to add streakers to list

by Duaner Esquire HS0J

of The Stagnant staff

After an unsuccessful trip to lobby the DUM Board of Infuriators, SGA Vice President Ike Laschicas continued to campaign for streakers. The Board decided against including streakers to its list of protected groups.

The Board decided against including streakers, but did draft a new policy for "broad inclusiveness." The policy stated that the University would strive to make everyone feel warm and fuzzy, and that is why they want to wear clothes.

Rantings said he intends to take his clothes and burn them in the quadrangle next Tuesday.

"That way, as my fellow students see and smell the wonderful scent of burning cotton, they will understand the gravity of the situation," he explained. "This is serious business, and we won't stop until they give in to our demands."

Harry Nudeman, president of The Naked Students Association, said that this whole mess was the result of a conspiracy.

"Blast them all to the fiery blazes of Mexico!" he yelled. "Yo quieru nudidad, man! Understand what I'm saying?"

"Look, the people on the Board are so stubborn. I mean, come on, you know the only reason they are anti-streaker is because they are uncomfortable with their own nudity," Nudeman continued.

Laschicas said he thought Nudeman was crazy. "And furthermore, if I see him or any of his pals come up here to Columbia, we are gonna whip their naked butts ... I mean, we will require them to don the appropriate clothing."

Tired from the commotion of protesting in Columbia against the Board of Infuriators, Rantings said he didn't have the energy to join the recent SGA war between Ren Nash and Tim Bravery.

---

The Stagnant Classifieds

Want to place your own classifieds in The Stagnant? Tough luck. They're not real, monor.

Help Wanted

HELP! HELP! OH GOD, HELP ME, PLEASE! PLEASE!
For more info, 555-4444

GET A JOB STUFFING ENVELOPES!
Work in your spare time stuffing and licking envelopes. Stuffing and licking, stuffing and licking, stuffing and licking for hours and hours. Doesn't that sound like fun? Positions still open. Call 555-3434

Modeling jobs available.
To apply, come by my apartment. Bring wine. French maid's outfit provided. Call 555-1111

Dishwasher needed.
 Must have own dishes. Call 555-0011

For Sale

1977 Plymouth Duster, 340,000 miles, 8-track, no a/c, dented fender, some rust, bald tires, one headlight, 3 hubcaps, minor flood damage. LIKE NEW. Call 555-5599

For Sale: Five turkey basters, two used rectal thermometers, three cases of Cool Whip, one vibrator, and a badly traumatized French poodle. Serious inquiries only. Call 555-9922

FOR SALE: Used dress, slightly stained. Outlived its usefulness. Contact Monica L.

Secret to happiness now available. All your worldly possessions or best offer. Call 555-0000.

For Sale: Used dress, slightly stained. Outlived its usefulness. Contact Monica L.

Travel

DUMSL student in Florida. Got drunk. Lost car. No money. Really want to come home now, MOM!!!

MISC

Janet, sorry about Arlene and the whipped cream, call me, Bob.

Lose: Any old albums by Blondie, the Go-Gos, The Bangles, or Heart. Yeah, you heard me smart ass, what about it?

Spring Break! All your favorite destinations: Little Rock, Tulsa, Omaha, Des Moines. Contact Mediocre Travel at 1-800-BORING BREAK.

Lost: Any old albums by Blondie, the Go-Gos, The Bangles, or Heart. Yeah, you heard me smart ass, what about it?

Intermedicostacorp Research Group is looking for volunteers for its medical research program. Just answer these questions. Are you a non-smoking male between the ages of 21-35? Are you generally healthy and in good shape? Do you have relatives and friends who would miss you if you suddenly disappeared? Do you have any distinguishing marks on your body that the police might use to confirm your identity? If not, contact us at 555-8888 for more information.

POSITION OPEN: Stagnant editor. Must be motivated, driven individual with strong attention to detail. Must be ambitious self-starter who is not afraid of hard work for low pay. Must be completely insane.