Student cutter says fee increase needed to cover lack of funds for operating expenses

BY BENJAMIN ISRAEL

The student cutter representative on the University of Missouri Board of Curators says his department didn't cover expenses on the board's Jan. 23 decision to raise student education fees by 3.2 percent.

“Following the 3.2 percent tuition increase, the student fee is now $4,460,” said sauce cutter and student senator Benjamin Israel, via email. “Additionally, the student fee is used to fund a variety of student organizations, as well as provide additional revenue to cover the cost of administration of the University of Missouri. Without these contributions, the student organizations wouldn’t be able to function and we wouldn’t be able to provide the resources they offer to students. We also don’t want to undermine the integrity of these funds by doing so.

The student cutter says he was not surprised to see the fee increase since the last time fees have been increased. “I think that fees need to be raised every year to keep up with inflation.”

Israel says that the student organizations rely on the fee to fund their activities, and if the fee isn’t increased, they will have to cut back on their services. “Without the fee increase, we wouldn’t be able to provide the same level of services to students.”

The student cutter also says that the fee increase is necessary to ensure that the student organizations can continue to provide the services they offer. “The fee increase is important to ensure that the student organizations can continue to provide the services they offer to students.”

A new constitution was introduced for the Student Government Association at Thursday's SGA meeting.

The proposed constitution contains several changes to the current SGA constitution, including the addition of a new chapter that addresses the role of the SGA in the governance of the university. The proposed constitution also seeks to address issues such as the representation of students, the decision-making process, and the role of the SGA in the university's planning and budgeting process.

The proposed constitution was introduced by SGA President Kayla Johnson and was approved by the SGA membership. The constitution will be sent to the Board of Curators for their approval.

Politicians are disregarding the views of voters.

The Issue:
The 2000 Presidential Elections are near upon us and the politicians don’t seem particularly interested in winning any votes from our generation (18-29), or at least they have not yet tried. That is probably because we are least likely to vote in an election.

We suggest:
The politicians know this and therefore they are spending their money trying to sway the older generation. They know they can win them.

So what do you think?

Good things if Butler remained

The current style of Butler athletics is great. It’s enjoyable, professional, and excited the fans. However, some changes could be made to make it better. Here are some suggestions:

1. More emphasis on recruiting high-quality athletes. While Butler has had some success in the past, they need to focus more on attracting top talent.
2. Improve the facilities. The arena could use an update to keep up with the standards of other mid-major programs.
3. Increase media coverage. The media曝光 could help the program grow and attract more fans.

The current direction of the athletics department is great, but there are some areas for improvement. With a few changes, Butler could continue to enjoy its success in the future.

Lettter represent national unity

The Pledge is a symbol of national unity and it is important that we respect it. It is not just a bunch of words, but a representation of what our country stands for.

However, some people have been critical of the Pledge and have asked if it is really necessary. They argue that it is a waste of time and that it doesn’t make a difference.

But the Pledge is much more than just a bunch of words. It is a reminder of the freedoms and rights that we enjoy as Americans and it is a way to show our respect for those who have fought for our country.

So let’s all stand up and recite the Pledge with pride. It’s a small thing, but it makes a big difference.

No substitute for doing what you like

There is no substitute for doing what you like. You can have all the money in the world, but if you don’t enjoy what you’re doing, it’s still not worth it.

So choose a job you love, and work hard at it. It may be difficult, but it will be worth it in the end.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one CD would you want to have?

Music provides comfort and escape, so I would choose an album that is uplifting and inspiring. It would be a CD of my favorite music artist, such as Adele or Taylor Swift.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one book would you want to have?

I would want a book that is filled with stories of adventure and excitement. It could be a classic novel, such as Mark Twain’s “Adventures of Huckleberry Finn,” or a modern thriller, such as “The Da Vinci Code” by Dan Brown.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one item would you want to have?

I would want a water filter, as it is essential for survival. Without clean water, it is impossible to stay alive for long.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one food would you want to have?

I would want a can of canned fish, as it is a versatile and nutritious food that can be cooked in a variety of ways. It is also easy to store and requires no preparation.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one skill would you want to have?

I would want the ability to build shelter, as it is crucial for survival. Without shelter, I would not be able to protect myself from the elements and predators.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one possession would you want to have?

I would want a knife, as it is a versatile tool that can be used for a variety of purposes. It can be used for cutting, digging, and even for defense.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one luxury would you want to have?

I would want a solar-powered radio, as it would allow me to stay connected to the outside world. It would also be useful for entertainment and communication.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one item would you want to have?

I would want a warm blanket, as it is essential for keeping warm at night. Without a warm blanket, I would be at risk of hypothermia and death.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one invention would you want to have?

I would want a cell phone, as it would allow me to make calls for help and keep in touch with loved ones.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one person would you want to have?

I would want a loved one, such as a family member or friend. Having someone to care for and love would provide comfort and support.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one animal would you want to have?

I would want a pet, such as a dog or cat. Having an animal companion would provide comfort and companionship.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one person would you want to have?

I would want a skilled and knowledgeable person, such as a doctor or survival expert. Having someone who could provide guidance and assistance would be invaluable.

If you were stranded on a deserted island, what one item would you want to have?

I would want a fishing line, as it would allow me to catch fish for food. Fishing is a skill that can be learned and is essential for survival.
Riverwomen take 3, lose 1

Victories include 74-51 win vs. Wisc.-Parkside on Senior Night

BY DAVE KINWORTHY

davekinorthy@uncp.edu

UM-St. Louis jumped out to a 23- point halftime lead and coasted to a 74-51 win over Wisconsin-Parkside.

"Our goal was to play a solid 40 minutes with effort;" Etlidge said. "We have yet to prove to the home crowd that we can play for 40 minutes.

We came out fast and that worked well for us. We all did a good job tonight and we did on senior night."

Head Coach Shelly Ethridge was pleased with the way the team performed in the first half and with the way the team responded in the second half.

"I am pretty happy with the first half and the way we played," Etlidge said. "As long as we keep the pressure on, we can get our turnovers and be able to fast break."

UM-St. Louis forced 22 turnovers in the game and held the Rangers to 29 percent shooting from the field.

The first half was led by Trish Ackerman who was 4-5 from 3-point range and Mauck who added nine points. Four Riverwomen scored in double digits.

"It is a tough way to finish," Etlidge said "I can't see any mistakes that we could have made to turn the game around."

UM-St. Louis won the second half and led throughout. Trish Ackerman added 16 and 15 respective.

UM-St. Louis then traveled to Evansville on Feb. 15 and received another conference victory as the team never got the winning streak going enough to turn the game around.

UM-St. Louis was led by Mauck who finished with 17 points, while Ackerman and DeShawn Brown also had 15 and 11 respectively.

The Riverwomen defense allowed the Rivermen to score in double digits but forced 20 UM-St. Louis turnovers.

The Riverwomen are 15-10 and 9-6 in conference play, while the Rivermen are 16-9 and 8-7 in conference play.

The Riverwomen remain one of the last three seeds in contention for the third spot in the GLVC tournament. The Riverwomen have yet to prove to the home crowd that they can play for 40 minutes.

"We put up a good fight," Etlidge said. "I can't see any mistakes that we could have made to turn the game around."

Recently, Catherine Marghs-Hover interviewed John Frankenheimer about his new film, "Reindeer Games," in the following interview, she discusses the elements of the film, Frankenheimer's role in the production, and his overall vision for the picture.

Frankenheimer: Ben was my choice. He has a kind of humanity, like James Dean, that's admired by the audience for the role. The role is derived from someone who was real, could be the codey to which both women and men, transcendent the audience would react. The character is in prison for car theft, but not a hardened criminal. The actor had to be someone the audience would see as an ordinary man, not as action film type.

Frankenheimer: The films are about Gary Sinise. To answer your question, it was very moving, wonderful working with him. He's intelligent, always ready, he prepares the role for the other actors. The actor had to be able to wear, but they definitely

Despite datedness, ‘Virginia Woolf’ still provides sparkling verbal humor, surprising storyline

by Catherine Marquis-Hayes

Thursday, February 21, 2000

Edward Albee’s Pulitzer-Prize winning play is significantly different from the classic movie starring Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton, so if you’ve never seen it, you don’t know what you’re missing. For one thing, the play is a far better and more verbally creative, but it still has the same themes from the 1950s.

The plot is this: wife Virginia Woolf isn’t really a character in this play, which takes place between two couples who get together for a party after the party and engage in what the house Martha describes as a night of “fun and games.” The whole story takes place in the living room of George and Martha in a single setting. We hear famous parties and come new faculty members to a small Eastern college, or the Faulkner Professor Martha invites her new faculty member Nick and his money with Honey over for a few drinks. Martha, daughter of the college’s founder and head, is married to a long-suffering faculty member whom she has just stopped seeing. While Martha chances the invitation to an effort to welcome a new couple, Nick and Honey soon become clear that “fun and games” is what she really wants with the Faulkner Professor and the intangible George is trying to understand. While Martha chances the invitation to an effort to welcome a new couple, Nick and Honey soon become clear that “fun and games” is what she really wants with the Faulkner Professor and the intangible George is trying to understand.

The problems with the play come from the nature of the piece itself. Much has changed in the world since the late 1950s, when the play was written, and the play reflects the ideas of what was considered and thought at that time. Changes in women’s roles in society since that time is particularly evident, which must have been what was considered and thought at that time. Kuti’s unique talent in the field of music, with such moving songs as “Blackman Know Yourself!” and “Victim of Life,” with his talent and political passion, Kuti’s lyrics put him in the range of Bob Marley, a sight within the Roaring 20s, a sight within the Roaring 20s, a sight within the Roaring 20s, a sight within the Roaring 20s, a sight within the Roaring 20s, a sight within the Roaring 20s, a sight within the Roaring 20s, a sight within the Roaring 20s.

Our opinion:

Femi Kuti succeeds on new album by combining Afrobeat, other styles

by Cory Blackwood

By mixing jazz and traditional Nigerian music in the ‘70s, Fela All-Ali-Kuti created a new musical genre known as Afrobeat. Before an AIDS-related heart failure in 1997, All-Ali-Kuti left many recordings of music on society beyond his mind. Political activism became a major aspect of his life, so much so that his home in Nigeria was burnt to the ground by the Nigerian Government, killing his 70-year-old mother outside. When this occurred, he was injured for two years and still goes on. From one of his many songs comes a Femi Kuti, who has realized his father’s music. On “Shoki Shoki,” Femi Kuti takes the short music-inspired by his father 20 years ago. Femi Kuti took the off-pitch combinations of fun-jazz and Nigeria music and added various other styles to the mix, including a bit of house music, hip-hop and electronic music, all of which makes the album fun.

The result is a strong and moving body of work that also enters listeners’ lives as “Femi Kuti: Sexual Hangover” is a perfect example of how the melodies are about to be a personal disappointment and the addition of house music. It is the closest thing you will find to a growing depth in music, from mixing to laying out smooth and relaxing. While it is even more impressive in his ability to react to the audience, Kuti has an amazing ability on the stage that continually comes true. As the music is played, the audience is entertained by the audience. Kuti’s music is popular across the world, and the audience is always entertained by the audience. The Student Court sets conditions for holding Butler appeal

BY JOE HARRIS

The Student Court decided Feb. 16 that it would hear Student Government Association President Darwin Butler’s appeal of the SGA’s decision to dismiss him from office. But it set some conditions.

The court ruled Butler must either choose whether to make an appeal in person to the Student Court or by submitting a representative instead of himself.

The court ruled that it would not hold a hearing at the St. Louis County Justice Center because Butler is currently serving time. Rick Tucker, chief justice of the Student Court, and members of the court had arranged to move the appeal.

The court ruled the specific evidence against the Student Court will be sent to the University’s General Counsel on how to proceed even though they removed those charges.

The court ruled the consent to the appeal’s request for consideration.
