Fraternities, sororities may rent space in Mansion Hill next year

The sororities and fraternities of the University of St. Louis may soon occupy a Greek row within the Mansion Hill Condominiums complex, the north side of campus in area until fall.

The sororities and fraternities and support services for the St. Louis University chapter of the American Society of Student Affairs, said Student Affairs Director Joseph Lauber said, "the student court is an educational experience."

It if a new administration proposal is finalized, Greek organizations may be allowed to rent space in the Mansion Hill Condominiums complex as an off-campus student center.

"Greek row would be an off-campus student center, a place to gather," said Yohn, "it is where students live, it is the student court.

Lauber agreed, saying, "Greek organizations are an important part of campus life."

"I think this is a great idea. We need to support these organizations," he said.

Lauber also said the board of trustees has approved a new search for a new director of Greek organizations, which is currently held by Yohn.

"We are looking for someone who is passionate about Greek life," said Lauber.

"The new director will be responsible for overseeing the Greek organizations and ensuring that they are following the policies and procedures set by the university," he added.

Yohn said he is excited about the new director and believes they will bring a fresh perspective to the role.

"I am looking forward to working with the new director and helping them to develop a strong and successful Greek organization," he said.

James M. "Jim" Hill, who has been the director of Greek organizations for the past six years, said he is excited to see the new director take on the role.

"I am confident that the new director will bring new ideas and energy to the role," he said.

"I am looking forward to working with the new director and helping them to develop a strong and successful Greek organization," he added.

credit card charges in St. Louis county in April. The Current has confirmed that Butler registered for classes for the winter semester through telephone registration, but he is still being held in an 11-county county pending word from Nevada on possible parole violations there.

D. Mike Bauer, SOA chair, said he has tried to contact Butler but his telephone calls were not returned.

"I do know for a fact that (Butler) is registered this semester and some­ body put a registration on the SOA office door about a week ago and it was signed ‘D.R.,’" Bauer said. "So I really can’t put a lot of stock in that; anybody could have put that there."

Bauer said he has three things he would like to see SOA take care of this semester, including addressing the issue of the interim student court.

"Get the Darwin Butler thing worked out, good or bad, one way or the other, that will be just fine," Bauer said. "Secondly, we’ve got to get the student court together. We’ve been over for a semester with an interim student court and Steve Barrick is getting his tail worked off. Thirdly, we need to do some programming. We’ve got a $40,000 budget that’s just sitting there. We haven’t done anything with it all year."

Wolfe said a date for the SOA January meeting has not yet been confirmed. Wolfe said Jan. 23 is the date he is shooting for and at that meeting a confirmation date for the rest of this semester’s SOA meetings will be decided.

"Hello,"

Though the Y2K preparations were thorough and time-consuming, Campus Computing manager Jim Siegel said, "A little member was neces­ sary with that but a lot of the was importantly not in a sense that peo­ ple were on staff and it is rather than doing something else," Siegel said. "We were never anybody to do it and very likely did it spend money. The fines and problems were forthcoming." Siegel said that while some of the apocalyptic predictions were stunning, Y2K did bring some good things for the UM-St. Louis computing program.

"It certainly provided us with a framework to re-evaluate all of our sys­ tems, and our vendors, I think took advantage of it to upgrade, and a sort of helped us confer in the issue of networking software in general and so it was some Y2K problems in the process," Siegel said. "What we have is a much more stable sys­ tem. We have a much better audit trail and certainly a lot of that motivation was in the process,"

A brief analysis of what really is cool

What is cool? This is a common question, and whilst there are many answers, there is no real simple answer. Some people might say that Webster says cool is slang for very good, but that is kind of misunderstanding. An accurate term that many people would agree with is the term “cool.”

Cool, in fact, is the eye of the beholder. So basically, football being cool by a bunch of athletes, but your average chess club probably hasn’t much of their social life in it. Some things and people always are cool, but sometimes will be temporarily cool. Take the Tones, for example, they can be cool and not know why. It had to be more than the bad ‘jacket, right?’ That is the modern day definition of the first cool, without explanation. The guy wears white video game clothes with a pair of pants and everyone adores him...it must be rough.

Wright was considered cool because he (used to) cool it on the A grades point sheet when he went off on a week’s trip. There are also those that will never be cool, like Regis Philbin. No matter how many times he may change his final answer no one will ever think he’s cool.

I have worked long and hard to be considered cool. The people will consider me cool and not know why. When different people will have slightly different ideas I think I have a system figured out to not be cool...I do, and I am out of space.

—Gary Blackwood

New Year but same problems exist

1.) A Student Government Association (SGA) does not have a campus-wide problem. The current SGA has been stagnant for far too long. The year must stop. Do something, do anything, just satisfy your constituents by holding annual SGA meetings for the students' council. As for any exams for SGA meetings for the students' council, that is no longer a reality.

2.) A student President that acts in their office’s eyes. Steve Wolfe has done as admirable a job as Darwin Butler’s. But the time has gone for the old. First it was Jim Avery being non-existent and now Butler’s personal. Not that Butler’s presidents have formed him away for him.

3.) A student body that cares. Most of the student body would now be considered oppressed, but nobody takes the time to see where your SGA President is. Not even the SGA President can even manage opinions on campus. We are in the same time that those athletes, but your average chess club probably doesn’t agree. At least the University of Missouri St. Louis does not. Missouri-St. Louis appears to be the same as the University of Missouri-St. Louis

For Homecoming, the fraternities and sororities get together and make homecoming parties that go with the Homecoming theme. The Greek floors are also joined, by frat from other student organizations for a Homecoming weekend. Greek Week is at an entire week devoted to increase awareness of the traditions and system and is managed by a set of play-performances that the Greeks. This could be easily done in our new Performing Arts Center.

Having the fraternities and sororities of our location biology for the Greeks at UM-Columbia in concert with other traditions can evolve here at UM-St. Louis.

As the self-proclaimed Millennium Man I demand several things

Riverwomen outlast Southern Indiana
20-1 victory salvages 22-9 holiday break

by Dave Kinworthy

The Riverwomen basketball team overcame an eight-point halftime deficit to outlast Southern Indiana 98-89 in the Men's/Women's Athletics Holiday Classic Saturday night at the John W. Biggie Sports Center. The Riverwomen, who trail Southern Indiana in the總統 Conference matchup, led 46-37 at the half, but the Riverwomen outscored the Raiders 51-51 in the second half, including a 24-13 run in the final 11:05 of the game.

The Riverwomen's second-half effort of 51 points is the most points scored in the second half since outscoring Valparaiso 52-39 in the second half of the 46-37 victory over Lincoln. The game's 98 points is the second-highest point total in regular season competition by the Riverwomen.

The Riverwomen (12-4, 4-2) are currently ranked 18th in the latest Women's Collegiate Basketball Association rankings.

The Rivermen basketball team will play their season finale at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Jan. 4, at the Redbird Arena against Eastern Illinois. The Rivermen (1-14, 0-7) enter the game on a 13-game losing streak.

The Redbirds, who lead the season series against the Rivermen, 3-0, have lost 12 of their last 13 games.

Riverwomen split four games over holiday break
by Nick Bowman

The Riverwomen basketball team went 1-3 during the holiday break. The Riverwomen defeated the U of the Incarnate Word 78-76 at the John W. Biggie Sports Center Thursday night. The Riverwomen (12-4, 5-2 in the Presidents' Athletic Conference) outscored Incarnate Word 17-9 in the first half, but the Riverwomen were outscored 59-48 in the second half.

In their final game of the week, the Riverwomen traveled to the University of St. Louis for a 98-73 victory over the Billikens. The Riverwomen outscored St. Louis 35-22 in the first half, but the second half was a different story. The Riverwomen outscored the Billikens 63-51 in the second half.

The Riverwomen then hosted the University of Missouri-St. Louis in a 98-73 victory. The Riverwomen outscored Missouri-St. Louis 34-19 in the first half, but the second half proved to be a struggle. The Riverwomen outscored the Billikens 64-54 in the second half.

The Riverwomen (12-4, 5-2 in the Presidents’ Athletic Conference) are currently ranked 18th in the latest Women’s Collegiate Basketball Association rankings.

The Riverwomen, who finished their non-conference schedule 6-1, will open their conference schedule against Mercy and Delta State. The Riverwomen, who lead the season series against the Rivermen, 3-0, have won seven of their last eight games.

1999: A Great year for moviemakers

By Catherine Margueris-Homeyer

With the end of a year, it's customary to look back on the past year, and therefore many critics often compile a list of the best films of the year. Although the new year has already started, I would like to offer such a list, and try to pick the 10 best films of the year. Although these new films of the century (and the millennium; since movies are always changing in the way they tell stories) stand out from various expert sources as well as my personal ones. Of course, this is my personal opinion, so the list down to the ten best was hard to form. Some years, there are hardly enough films to make up a 10 best list, but this year there were so many good choices. Each film which would make the list in a lean year will be discussed here, this year, such as the popular "The Marine" or "Mystery Men." So I will discuss all top movie highlights, and describe somelimits to the list.

The list will also exclude films released earlier that are just now reaching the St. Louis area, because I have not seen them yet. In this group, I have seen a very exciting new films which I will be reviewing in the future, including "Cold Mountain," "The Element Of a Ripley," and which do not he on this list. Keep these entries in mind as possible additions to the list. I also tried to have a mix of both comedies and dramas.

THE JAZZ MANDOLIN

The film tells this story beautifully, with an authenticity that is both epic and personal. The one thing that the film could do was to make sure that the story and its philosophical underpinnings are dealt with as a young man who always dreamed of becoming a filmmaker and who remained true to his principles even when faced with financial obstacles. As audiences were exposed to Kaufman's other work, it now became apparent that Kaufman's humor was much wittier and more unpredictable than any other comedian around. As he pushed the envelope with his audiences, his work left some people baffled and others impressed with his originality.

"Man on the Moon," a film about Kaufman's career and life, stars Jim Carrey as Kaufman and directed by Milo Fumero. Renowned director of such films as "Amadeus," "I'm Sorry" Caan has long been known as one of the funniest men in Hollywood. In addition, the film also features a good deal of music, including songs from both Kaufman and his former colleague, "The Marine." The film is also supported by excellent acting and direction, particularly by Jeffrey O'Barr and some very promising performances from Kaufman himself.

For the story and the believability of the characters, shot on location in Western Missouri, the film looks and feels as if it were made for the modern day with its music, photography and the characters act and talk as convincingly as they do in life. However, this may be inappropriate for a man who always sought for authenticity and simplicity in his work, and remains so to this day. The one thing that the film could have emphasized more is that Kaufman's career was all about the power of story, and how the continued popularity of come's comedy was achieved.

The lyrics to a song remind us of Kaufman's life. Although some of the characters are based on real historical figures, his odd circumstance did actually occur among Southern soldiers, indicating the importance of friendships and childhood connections.

'Moon' captures comic genius of Kaufman

BY CATHERINE MARGUERIS-HOMEYER

Length: 118 min.
Rated: R
Our opinion: ***

I was impressed by his remarkable performance here, and his work the greatest of all for the year. This movie. The film tells the details of Kaufman's career and the fabrication of his career at the cards of his life. While the film covers his professional life well, his personal life is covered more lightly, and remains somewhat surprising, particularly in the opening scenes. The one thing that the film could have emphasized more was that Kaufman's career was all about the power of story, and how the continued popularity of come's comedy was achieved.
