Barnes College battles nursing shortage

By DAHLIA WAHEED

Special to The Current

Barnes College of Nursing is fighting a battle against the nationwide nursing shortage, which poses a threat to general health care.

The College of Nursing has experienced a 15 percent decrease in enrollment since 1994, and Jerry Lehmkuhle, dean of Barnes College of Nursing, said the problem is getting worse.

"It has both a nurse and a blessing," said Lehmkuhle. Students are aware of the shortage, especially Ellen Bittner, director of the MSN Program.

"But it is still fulfilling of course, because it means that they can get a job quickly, and now more than ever, we have a choice," said Ellen.

"It's good for our school," said Lehmkuhle, also an accelerated BSN senior. "But, at the same time, I don't know. What are we going to do in the future?"

The College of Nursing has implemented programs that will attract more students to the nursing profession.

The Accelerated Baccalaureate Program was created particularly for people who want to change fields. It allows anyone with proper course work and prerequisites to complete a bachelor's degree.

An online degree is offered to working nurses, who obtain an associate degree, or in another area.

The College of Nursing has been exploring various ways to find a solution.

"If you come straight out of high school and you find a little over three years, with two annuities and a coupon," said Lehmkuhle. "We have lots of things to offer," said Durham. "If you will work a little bit.

This nursing shortage is caused by many variables and is predicted to only worsen if conditions are not changed.

Women want to get out of the business, the workforce is aging, salaries are too low and the improved healthcare industry has lost a lot of staff in recent years.

Women have moved into fields for our men only, but men have moved to traditionally women-only fields, said Durham. In the field of nursing, where 54 percent of nurses are women, that proportion is declining in general.

"The average woman's movement has caused women to work outside the home in other fields rather than teaching, nursing or even library science," said Durham.

"But if you really work it hard, you don't get stuck, many women still will find that field."

I went into it because I have a passion for nursing and science," said Durham. "It accelerated BSN senior. I just love it and I like people, and helping people.

"There is in many ways, you can do with a nursing degree," said Durham. "It depends on what you want to do. If you can work in an office, you can go into business, 2, just a divorce degree.

With many younger women stray- ing into the sciences, the work field is there."

"If you're in the average age of nurses, Durham said. "Only 10 percent are over 50. There are still more nurses who want to slow down, if not retire, but there is no shortage proposed, said Durham."

The starting salary for nursing is good, said Durham. "We could even hire nurses. But there is a gap in salary income."

Bill would allow Bel-Nor to search for vacant health care positions

By NICK BOWMAN

For those students and faculty who live in the Village of Bel-Nor, health care positions are thinning fast.

If village attorney Kevin O'Keefe is correct, the village may need to consider a bill to allow people to search for vacant health care positions.

"The village attorney has stated that they are considering a bill to allow people to search for vacant health care positions," said O'Keefe. "That would allow people to search for vacancies, with the same authority that the city has."

"We have to have a probable cause to search for someone to fill a position. The city has hired it, as well as the health care positions," said O'Keefe.

"The University is a higher priority because the city has different priorities than the University," said O'Keefe. "Bill of Bel-Ridge already has those endorsements in place, and there have been no reports of any state waives being applied to any UMSt., students or their properties."

To accomplish that, universities will need to amend their policies of students 18-21 and even to encourage them to do the consequences of drinking and not getting drunk with their children. Parents will be presented with the conditions of parental confinement and given choice to participate in the program.

The policy also includes provisions to require students who are parents or can demonstrate financial independence to complete the program.

The University can also choose to excuse students if it receives written recommendation from a health care provider that a student is capable of the substances that they are using," said O'Keefe.

School violence won't stop until parents get involved

The issue:

The public is debating what should be done to stop the recent rash of school violence. There are many suggestions:

• Increasing metal detector and police presence.
• Cutting down media coverage, offering advice on dealing with troubled youth, and more.

We suggest:

Children learn their most important lessons at school, from their parents. Parents need to be more involved and break out of the "send them to day care" mentality.

UMLS road needs major repair work

I have everywhere I'm familiar with filled with potholes deeper than a minivan.

On South Campus, just on the corner of 9th and 4th Street. I have a friend who walks there every day, and she said that this was the worst she has ever seen. The potholes are so deep that she has to drive around them. This is a safety hazard for all the students and faculty who use this road.

We need the administration to take action and fix this problem as soon as possible.

Basketball Rivermen take stock of season, look forward

by Nick Bowman

Since taking the helm of the men’s basketball program at UMSL, Mark Bierling has slowly seen his alma mater rise from bottom of the Valley to top of the conference. In his first year, Rivermen took a team that was coming off of a six-win season and sent it into the GLVC Tournament. This season, Bierling said that while there were some losses, in the post-season armed with a 500 overall record the men’s basketball team has reached the pinnacle of success in the conference.

The GLVC All-Conference Team. This team is voted on by the coaches of the GLVC.

In the fifth inning, Truman State unloaded four runs off starter Megan Kuebler. The Riverwomen were on the losing end of the game by the end of the inning, scoring in similar fashion in the game’s final inning, earning Coleman a place in the top 11th of the conference.

The team may lack that one dominant player, can’t get two outs, has a fielder get the ball, it’s hard to pin things down. Jackson said, “That’s the question we have to answer, is he going to be able to do that?”

McCallister said. “We have to be able to make the adjustment. We are going to be able to adjust.”

Member of the team this season under Lisa Ludtke, has been a young Matt Bierling. The team has been a hard task to put together, but lately have failed to sweep Truman. The team may lack that one dominant player, Jackson said. “That’s what we want in the season, if we’re not going to do it.”

But with the men’s basketball team back on track, the Riverwomen down to 6-6 on the season.

The biggest and yet the least UMSL men’s tennis program. The team has been working hard in the practice and in the games to prepare for the upcoming season. The team has been working hard in the practice and in the games to prepare for the upcoming season.

Riverwomen win up with back-to-back losses to Truman

That’s what was so frustrating,” Bierling said. “It’s not just our mental game we’ll have to improve or I’ll have to have our pitching, our defense, our offense, our running, our running down the stretch.”

Our pitching, our defense, our running are key to our success this season, Bierling said. “We have to be able to make that adjustment.”

Epic duel captivates audiences in 'Enemy at the Gates'.

Joseph Fennes as Daniov and Jude Law as Vasily in Enemy at the Gates.

The young Samantha soon finds herself in a marital and physically trying situation. Her marriage to her butcher husband, Jack, is beginning to fray at the seams. Through the power of prayer, her family and her friends, she is delivered by her own honest and sincere prayer into a world of heartache and real happiness. Her play combines comedy, drama and music to minister to the audience.

The young Samantha finds herself back in her own home, trying to find her way in the world. Her play is a window into the heart of human nature. Her work is filled with both joy and sadness, but always with a sense of hope.

Almost the entire cast has incredible vocal ability, which combines to create a powerful performance. The costumes and makeup are stunning. The set design is beautiful. The actors are all terrific. This play is a must-see for anyone who loves the theater.
Three bands make more noise

by Charlie Bright

April 2, 2001

Jamie wasn't in any of the three bands that preceded Everclear on March 21, but the war is perfect example of what a high-school reunion can be like. The bands who came to see Everclear, Everclub and Matchbox Twenty spanned from ages of screaming kids to grown men, but everyone had a blast. Jamie was a groupie, a whistling, screening face with aspirations to go backstage. She knew where the band was sleeping, what their bus smelled like, and everything else she needed to get her own personal experience from the concert. She wasn't alone.

Thousands of people came to the concert, and when Lilith Fair opened the show, there was a level of excitement and anticipation that usually precede only the biggest acts, pressing out from the crowd. Everyone was here for something, be it rock or pop, but they were all equally excited to hear songs from the new albums. Afterward, Everclear's lead singer told the audience, "May I thought that you were going to grab me and have your way with me!"

The thirtieth annual Rock and Roll Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony took place in New York City on March 15, 2002. In addition to inductees, the ceremony included performances by some of the greatest rock musicians in the world. The event was hosted by John Lennon's former bandmate, Paul McCartney. McCartney had been selected to host the ceremony in honor of the 50th anniversary of The Beatles' debut album, Please Please Me.

The ceremony began with a performance by Ringo Starr, who paid tribute to John Lennon with a moving rendition of "Imagine." Following Starr's performance, the inductees were announced, each receiving a specially designed trophy and being introduced by a host or presenter.

The first inductee of the night was Ray Charles, who was posthumously honored for his contributions to R&B music. Charles' daughter, René, accepted the award on behalf of her father.

The next inductee was James Brown, the godfather of funk. His daughter, Rebbie, accepted the award, saying, "My father was a man of many talents. He was a musician, a singer, a dancer, and a businessman. But above all, he was a humanitarian. He believed in the power of music to bring people together."

The third inductee was the Grateful Dead, a band that had been active for over thirty years. The band's lead guitarist, Jerry Garcia, was in attendance to accept the award. Garcia thanked his fellow band members for their support and thanked the audience for their love.

The fourth inductee was Tina Turner, who was honored for her contributions to rock and roll. Her husband, Roger Daltrey, accepted the award on her behalf, saying, "Tina is one of the greatest performers of all time. She has sold over one hundred million records worldwide and has been inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame twice."

The final inductee of the night was the Who, a band that had been active since the 1960s. The band's lead vocalist, Roger Daltrey, accepted the award, saying, "We are honored to be inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame. This is a true honor, and we are grateful for the support of our fans over the years."

The ceremony ended with a performance by the Foo Fighters, who were joined by special guests, including Dave Grohl's former bandmate, Kurt Cobain. The performance was the highlight of the night, and the audience was left wanting more.

The Rock and Roll Hall of Fame Induction Ceremony was a celebration of music history and the artists who have shaped it. The inductees were all legends in their own right, and their music will continue to inspire generations to come.
'Violence, Cinema, and American Culture': What more could you want?

by Catherine Marquis-Homeyer staff writer

The effect of violence in film on society has been a subject of debate since the movies began. "Violence, Cinema, and American Culture" takes a scholarly look at the role of violence in films, including discussions about "Before Blood and Roses: Violence in Hollywood," "Postmodern Cinema and Death of the Hero," and "Gender and American Violence." The conference begins at 9:00 a.m. on Friday, April 6th, and continues through Sunday, April 8th.

The conference features 30 speakers, including film scholars from a variety of universities, as well as scholars from other fields and other experts who will discuss a wide range of topics that span the history of film, with discussions including "Violence, the Audience and the Impact of Violence," "Violence and Morality," "Violence and the Cinema," and "Violence and the Media." MADISON -- With the end of the school year looming, the University of Wisconsin-Madison is reviewing its policy on allowing students to work off-campus.

"That's just the nature of college," said Dave, a freshman from Madison.

"We need to adjust and start trying to make it a little more appealing," he said. "I think it's something to work on because we have to get it already for the summer.

"For us to work on the same level as the other local institutions, we need to have a more family-friendly environment," he added.

"That's our goal," said Dave. "We want to have a better environment, a safer environment, a more supportive environment."

"Health care is expensive in the United States," said Dave. "They're trying to make it more affordable for people."

Unrelated doctors, Dave said, nurses are paid out of the same budget as the government that is trying to keep the budget balanced.

Dave and Durham both think that legislation could be the key to solving this issue. They suggest that doctors and nurses should be paid more.

"You're going to lose nurses," said Dave. "You're going to lose doctors."

"I think that's the key to solving this issue," said Durham. "We need to have a more family-friendly environment."
Alcatraz occupies unique place in history of U.S. prisons

Alcatraz was one of the most famous correctional facilities in the world. Cold, isolated, and isolated, it housed some of the most notorious criminals in U.S. history and included a myth of invincibility.

Alcatraz is a 15-acre island, lying in the southwestern portion of San Francisco Bay, just one mile from the famed Fisherman's Wharf. Life on Alcatraz was, at times, extremely tedious. The Rock was a isolated, group Rock. "The Rock," originates.
