BRIEFS

Big Event will help St. Vincent's Students will gather at St. Vincent's Home for Children on April 15 as part of The Big Event. This special community service project, which happens every year, will begin at 9 a.m. and end at 2 p.m. on April 14.

Professor receives ACA's top honor

Work Pope, an associate professor of counseling in the College of Education, was named as a 2001 recipient of the American Counseling Association's highest civil rights and abroad.

Event will address nursing shortage

The Barnes College of Nursing will host "Nursing Workforce 2000 - Fostering Partnerships for a Healthy Nation" on May 11. The conference will explore the implications of the national nursing shortage, discuss strategies for increasing interest in nursing, review new trends, and network with colleagues and recruiters.

Mailroom solicits opinions in effort to improve service

The mailroom will host a session on April 18 to solicit the opinions of users about an improved mail delivery system.

Counterfeiters try to duplicate parking permits

Rafael Macias, coordinator of parking services, says that the university has had an increase in the number of parking tickets being written. He attributes this to the increase in the number of vehicles entering the university parking lot and the increase in the number of students being ticketed.

SGA extends application deadline 10 days

The deadline for SGA candidates to apply for the spring semester has been extended from April 4 to April 14. Candidates must submit their applications to the Cashier's Office by April 14.

Photographic works in CHICAGO

by Emily Chenoweth

Staff Writer

Dramatic depictions of urban architecture hang on the walls of UMSL’s Public Policy Research Center, as the department puts on a collection called "The City." The center collection of digital photographs is by Tom Patton.

Patton is currently a professor at UMSL’s School of Architecture, a department he says is at the forefront of the field. His photographs consist of buildings from different cities and states, rendered in black and white. The photography is a combination of Chicago, St. Louis, and Atlanta.

In a recent interview with Patton, he said, "I love to capture the character of architectural spaces. My work is about capturing the details of the city and its buildings." Patton’s photographs are a testament to the city’s art and architectural features. His works consist of buildings from Cincinnati and Atlanta to New York and Miami. The photographs are a reflection of the city’s diversity and cultural influences.

"The City" is an exhibit where the photographer’s goal is to portray the city’s atmosphere and its people. The exhibit features a variety of images capturing the different landscapes, from the streets to the skyscrapers.

Patton said, "I want to convey the attitudes and the perspectives in space. My work is about capturing the character of architectural spaces. My work is about capturing the details of the city and its buildings."

The exhibit will be on display at the Public Policy Research Center from April 5 through June 28. The center is located at 1 University Boulevard, Suite 100, St. Louis, MO 63121. The exhibit is free and open to the public.

That's the difference this season according to Head Coach Jeff Gyllenborg. "I really felt that we were going any longer than 15 innings," he said. "We started at 2:00 and it is now 6:00. We played seven extra innings in two games and it took us three and a half hours. It was definitely a matter of survival. It came down to one of the teams not wanting to lose in a critical time.

Previously, the Riverrnen swept a pair from Great Lakes Valley Conference rival Lewis University, but were swept by Wisconsin-Parkside in the same twin. The win against Quincy boosted the UMSL’s record to 15-10 overall and 5-2 in conference play, but the Riverrnen take the conference games in stride because of the depth of the conference this season.

“This league is so even that we have to come out focused on every single pitch," Brady said. "Mostly getting too deep, being too predictable. Now that is we are playing the rest of our games at our home arena, at times, we get a bit too comfortable. We just need to continue to do so, in line with our own free baseball."

April 22, the Fox (which was originally built as a movie palace in 1932) and Frontier have a number of new films being shown. Some of the films being shown are 'Black Hawk Down', which is about the United States military's efforts in Somalia, and 'Shrek', which is an animated film about a green ogre named Shrek. These two films should be of interest to anyone who enjoys watching movies or animation.

"Breathing" on track nine, and "Nosebleed in Boston" on track 11 are both tough, dark, and depressive. But the band does have a soft side. Gentle harmonic "Hanging," as well as the acoustic guitar and piano on "Late Night," are soft, delicate, and melancholic as romantic. In a recent concert, "Smokey and the Bandit" is also one of the album's last songs, someone in the front row proposed, "It was so insulting," Wade explained, "so the whole audience laughing at the beginning of the song. Every song is moving, no matter what the subject matter is, but it's hard to see how anyone could get caught up in the music. No one is a fan of mine, but if they were, I'd be the first to tell them to stop listening until now because they haven't had the chance to hear the rest of the disc."

The album's last song is "A Cow's End," which features soft acoustic guitar and piano, with slow, mournful vocals. The song concludes with the lines, "If you're waiting for something beautiful to come out of the darkness, you're waiting for something that never exists."

The band's next stop is still up in the air, but more information is expected to be released in the coming weeks. For more information about the band, check out the Wading into Fame website, where you can listen to the band's new album and learn more about their upcoming tour dates. The album's release date is set for April 10, 2001, and it is available for purchase on major music retailers and online retailers. For more information, visit the band's website or contact Student Government at 516-5105.
