SGA to hold forum on parking fee

by Davila Wahed

special to The Current

Student leaders oppose proposal to increase parking fees at the University of Missouri-St. Louis. A new bill proposed by the administration would increase parking fees by $5 per year, with the first new charge taking effect in March.

Student Senate President Ryan Connor said he wanted to know why students are being asked to pay more for a service they do not use. Connor clarified that SGA is a student group and that students do not pay to use parking garages. Connor also pointed out that the students do not pay for police services or the janitorial staff. Connor said, "SGA is a student group, so why are we paying for a service that the student body does not use?"

The SGA and Student Senate are committed to representing the student body and ensuring that students have their voices heard. The SGA and Student Senate are also committed to ensuring that the student body is not asked to pay for services they do not use.

SGA and Student Senate members have reached out to the administration to express their concerns about the proposed parking fee increase. The administration has not responded to these concerns.

University foreign film series kicks off this month

BY EMILY UHRBRIG

Special to the Current

Righting the wrongs of this month, the University Program Board along with R. A. Graham of the Film Fest Series starting on February 13 and ending in April 17, two films a month will be screened. The films will recognize the crooked victories in the lives of Gerrit Rietveld, Ernst May, Francis Bacon, South America, and Italy in an effort to express different ideas and cultures to audiences and faculty.

Despite the language barriers, most of these movies deal with themes that pretty much anyone could understand. Besides putting on the differences between foreign cinema and our own, the series illustrates the commonality that we all share in experiencing a story around the world just by living. Some of the movies chosen are according to certain month’s popularity, while others were chosen just because they are good films.

The Foreign Film Series kicks off on Wednesday, February 17 with the 1999 German film “Run Lola Run”.

Run Lola Run

This movie is about a girl who wants to save her boyfriend’s life by running around, trying to find the 100,000 deutsche marks he is accidentally left on the subway that belongs to her boss. The film is a fast-paced action movie, driven by a任何人都 can follow. The front desk will be open for students and faculty. Due date is February 28. For more information please call Beta Omega at 314-516-5818.

February 12

Eva Nekolajski

The Hispanic assembly, the Talbots Quartet, will perform works by classical composers like Mozart and Mozart of the Ethical Society. Tickets are $20 for general admission and $15 for seniors. For more information call the Special Performances office at UMSL at 516-5818.

February 13

Brian Bassett

The St. Louis Art Association will present "Four State Islands and Arterial" presented by Joyce Anne Von Tillberg, Director of Bock Art Association at Columbia Art Center. Admission is free and open to the public. For more information call the ASA office at 314-727-1899.

OUR OPINION
Don't stay at home during UMSL's Homecoming Week

The issue: It's time again for Homecoming at UMSL. This means a week of full of events that students can participate in. It is one of the most exciting events that UMSL offers, providing an opportunity for students to participate, even with high grades like this small and hard-nosed.

We support...

Students should make plans to participate in Homecoming. It benefits them through the extracurricular events and there are lots of fun relationship-building events to attend throughout the week.

Conserve power to cut our costs

In an article on that last week, concerning energy expenses on campus, it was clear that students can save by being more conscious of energy usage in their daily work, leisure, and study activities. In addition, students have worked many hours to pursue the campus community goals of saving energy.

As of right now, the University of Missouri-St. Louis campus has extra money accumulated for the purchase of new electronics. But before these products are purchased, the University needs to consider the benefits of the campus as a whole.

Letters

Student assistant are good resources

As the majority of a new semester begins, more students find themselves in need of a fulfilling, balanced career. Classes, work, and extracurricular activities can create a stress for a short amount of time, and it seems to be the case in a number of papers. A new UMSL program has been created, called the Assistant Program, to provide students with work and leisure activities.

But a valuable measure is being lost in the shuffle, and that is the opportunity for students to develop better leisure learning skills. Many class offers assistance to provide students with a clear understanding of what is expected and how to make the most of their leisure.

Sports editor needs to get facts straight

I read Dave Kurnelov's article about the Blues from the Jan. 22 issue of The Current, and was disappointed to see that this writer was not clear about whom he was discussing. The chances of 19-7 in the third period are much lower than the possibility of anything about the Blues. First of all, I believe that my head coach's name is "Scott Johnson." Who is he? There is a Benton Johnson, but not Scott Johnson. Secondly, he says that the "Kurnelov had no idea what he was talking about from "The Current" in Cranbrook." The correct name is "Scott Johnson," and "Kurnelov had no idea what he was talking about from "The Current" in Cranbrook."

We suggest...

Findings balance between old, new, can be difficult

In the last of both worlds, we're going to kill off the old buildings and to renovate to the past and present. This is a really difficult decision, and it seems to be that it's impossible, and so the difference between the old and new is not going to last.

I think that true life, I can't live here. I just used to live in the past, always looking forward to the future, and I could move forward, make progress, and grow. But that's going to change, and I want to understand every lesson and moments of the past that would be destroyed.

So far, I forget about UMSL, but I'm still used to hearing the MTSU professors, I'm sure they do something with that capella.

Demonstrate your love before your time is up

I never knew Kay White before... Kay White, my roommate's mother, passed away on Wednesday night. I remember Kay White was quite a special woman with beautiful heart failure combined with diabetes.

She was only 56. I remember I went to see her hospital visits, and I knew she was going to die soon. I was not sure if she could make it for a trip. One night, when she was at the hospital visits, she said she would not even live for something.

But then the next day you and Kay White had to go to your work and you could see Kay White was not going to live. She was going to die soon.

But when I was at a funeral for Kay White, I knew she would be away for a month. But when Kay White passed away, I knew she would be away for a month.

There was a picture of her at a funeral home, and I knew she was going to die. Then I saw her at the funeral home, and I knew she was going to die. She was going to die. And I knew she was going to die for a month.

I'm trying to say that she was the only person that I really knew, and she was the only person that I really knew.

I'm not a doctor and I was a really bad person, I just took care of people, and I'm going to take care of your...

I sell this, and I'm going to make more work to say anything. But I am trying to say that it is the best way you can be...
Rivermen make history

UML men defeat KWC for first time in GLVC

By NICK BONNAN

David vs. Goliath is the oldest and most revered battle in the sports world. But imagine for a minute that this classic battle was true. When UML took on Kentucky Wesleyan University in a basketball game last Saturday night, the showdown was as close as David had to ever come to Goliath. In the end, the Rivermen won 82-72 in a GLVC match-up. This was the first time in the Rivermen's GLVC history that UML defeated Kentucky Wesleyan.

The Rivermen are the only independent GLVC team and are often overlooked by the rest of the conference. Kentucky Wesleyan is the current GLVC champions, having won the title last year and being consistently ranked near the top in the conference. The Rivermen had a lot riding on this game, and they came out on top.

Success pushes R-women to 8-5

BY NICK BONNAN

The UML Riverwomen continued their hot streak on Thursday night, defeating the Ohio Christian Eagles 60-40. The win was the Riverwomen's fourth in a row, and it moves them up to 8-5 on the season. The team is now tied with the Winona State Warriors for fourth place in the GLVC Conference.

Buddy Holly's style caught on, became rock 'n' roll sound

February 12, 2001

Buddy Holly was born Sept. 7, 1936, in Lubbock, Texas. Early on, he developed tremendous musical talent. By the time he was eight, Buddy Holly could play the piano, fiddle and guitar around as if they were extensions of himself.

When the early '50s rolled around, Buddy Holly's income was in music instead. As a result, he formed the Whites and Log Rhythm Band with some high school friends. Although country-orientated, the band did begin experimenting with a louder and more surprising singing style that became one of the precursors of rock, it roll.

For nearly three years, Holly and his high school mates performed on a local radio station in Lubbock, KDAV. However, controversy would soon erupt between Holly and the station executives. It concerned around Holly's unique delivery style. It was too fast-paced for the ultra-conservative audiences of that time period. The radio station insisted upon a much more slow and deliberate style.

Despite the controversy, however, Holly's reputation began to grow. As a result, he signed a contract in 1956, with Decca Records in Nashville, Tenn., to cut country songs. Decca wasn't interested in Holly's immense talent however, instead, they were attempting to control him. They told him, "Don't lose sight of who you are now. Don't ever lose the thing that you're good at. There's no need to change it. You've got a great thing going on. You can't touch that." They told him to allow his delivery slow and not to play his guitar so much. They even went so far as to cut a country band in the background.

The really argued Holly, and during one session, he stormed out of the studio shouting, "All they want me to do is play hillbilly music. I am not hillbilly!"

Many recording studios were trying to grab the new sound that would become known as rock 'n' roll. Buddy Holly's dreams would be shattered. However, he began writing songs diligently, and actually began doing his own recordings as well. In early 1957, he recorded the song, "Peggy Sue." He was destined to become his biggest hit. He also went back to performing at local bars in Lubbock. On one occasion, he was asked to perform an American song. Holly told them the words, "I don't feel comfortable doing that. I've got a song I want to do."

So, the executive said, "Okay, we'll give you a chance this time. You can do your song. We'll have a million hits on our hands."

This line, from the song "Peggy Sue," was recorded on Sunday, Feb. 19, 1957, in Hollywood, Calif. Early on, Holly's song caught fire. By the time he died, his music was well-known the world over. It's estimated that Holly's music has sold over 250 million copies worldwide. After his death, his music has continued to be preserved and enjoyed by fans. Holly's music is a testament to his talent and legacy. The story of Buddy Holly's life is a true testament to the power of music and its ability to transcend time.
right. Like the time-told story, David got out his slingshot as the Green Wave yielded opponents to two straight home games this week, featuring league leaders in the area, respectively.

The absence of freshman guard Leah Wear, who suddenly decided to pursue a career in acting, was the main factor that gave the Rivennen an opportunity to extend their winning streak to a season high of two straight games this week, featuring league leaders in the area, respectively.

"It helped me see another aspect of the game," Keune said. "Coach Greens and Coach Schuh have helped me learn more on the ice and off the ice this season. I think that I have grown a lot as a player and my game has improved."

GETTING INVOLVED....

Five years ago, Homecoming at UMSL started as one soccer game and a twinkle in the eye of a group of people. Today, it is a full week of excitement and activity—basketball games, bonfires, pep rallies, REC sport tournaments, dances, and the crowning of campus royalty.

The Homecoming committee’s past and present, commitment and dedication have made today’s homecoming activities a reality. This group, comprised mainly of students and some key staff members, works diligently from September to February to extend to all students a fun and energetic week full of events.

I want to thank this year’s committee members for their hard work and dedication to making Homecoming 2001: An UMSL Odyssey a great success. It is fundamental to the future success of Homecoming Week to have a creative group of students who are willing to work hard and play hard to meet the needs and interests of all students at UMSL. We need YOU! and I am extending to you an invitation to GET INVOLVED by joining next year’s Homecoming Committee 2002 if you are interested, please contact Rob Wilson in Student Activities at 518-5537 or by email. You can also contact Donna Carothers at 518-6453 or by email at alumni@umsl.edu

It only took a few seconds. The 70-year-old Mt. Providence building was the biggest obstacle in the path of the project to realign I-70, and after a button-push, the primary structure was out of the way, a pile of rubble. Mt. Providence had previously been used as a Catholic boarding school for boys, a home for unwed mothers, and an adult day school, among other things.
