Survey asks why students leave

Gary Grace, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, recently announced the student satisfaction survey to the students that were attending UM System during the Fall 2003 semester.

Gary Grace, vice chancellor for Student Affairs, recently announced the student satisfaction survey to the students that were attending UM System during the Fall 2003 semester.

Students that responded to the survey will have their names entered into a drawing for one of the new UM System gear. The survey will be available until April 1.

Students repeatedly cited the campus violence and the East Campus dorms as the main reasons they are leaving. Other factors like the lack of parking, safety on and off campus, and the campus atmosphere were also cited.

The survey offers the students a chance to be part of the decision making process for the direction of the campus. Students are encouraged to complete the survey and share their thoughts and feelings about UM System.

SGA officers answer critics of constitution vote at meeting

by Rosalind Pittman

The love letter of students at the Student Government Association (SGA) has been a recent topic of discussion. A student letter expressing some criticisms of some members of the SGA was published in the issue of last Tuesday's Student. Several students have signed the letter with the words "we think we need a new SGA constitution." However, only a few have actually signed the letter. The letter was signed by a group of students that are members of the SGA.

The letter was written to express concern with the SGA’s handling of budget issues and the lack of transparency in the decision making process. The letter stated that the SGA should be more accountable to the students and that the SGA should have a stronger role in the decision making process.

The SGA officers have responded to the letter by stating that they are committed to improving the SGA’s handling of budget issues and that they are working to increase transparency in the decision making process. The SGA officers have also stated that they are committed to increasing the SGA’s accountability to the students.

The SGA officers have also stated that they are committed to improving the SGA’s handling of budget issues and that they are working to increase transparency in the decision making process. Romance blossoms at Missouri Botanical Garden

By Sara Porter

“Ireland’s status is better than we believed, even ten years ago,” said Hickey. “It’s a country that is truly coming into its own.”

Hickey says the country is now ready for large-scale tourism, but he notes that it will take time to fully reap the benefits of its newfound status.

“Ireland has a lot to offer, but it’s important to be patient,” Hickey said. “We need to work to build a strong foundation for tourism.”

Hickey believes that tourism will be a major driver of economic growth in Ireland, but he also recognizes the need to invest in other sectors as well.

“Ireland is not just about tourism,” he said. “We need to diversify our economy to ensure long-term growth.”

Non-profit group sponsors student film contest

By Jennifer Dugg

“Miss Wyoming is a hilarious satire of superstardom,” says the judges of the film contest.

“If you can’t have fun with it, then why do it?” one judge said.

The film was titled “Miss Wyoming” and it follows the story of a teenage girl who becomes famous overnight after winning a beauty pageant.

“The film was well-crafted and had a great sense of humor,” another judge said.

The contest is open to all students who are interested in film-making, and the winners will be announced in the near future.

“I’m excited to see what our students can come up with,” said the contest organizer.

“Miss Wyoming” by Sara Porter

The book is a hilarious and thought-provoking satire of the current celebrity culture.

“The author has a great sense of humor and is not afraid to tackle serious issues,” said one reviewer.

The book is available now in bookstores and online.

Beloved red car teaches financial responsibility

he week, I attended the St. Louis Auto Show with my father. It was an exciting event, not only because I've never been to a car show before, but also because my dad is an avid car enthusiast. We spent the entire day exploring the various makes and models on display, and by the end of the day, I was left with a newfound appreciation for the art of automotive design.

It was interesting to see how different car manufacturers presented their products. Some displayed their vehicles on towering plinths, while others showcased them on sleek black backgrounds. There were even a few models that were displayed on a spinning platform, allowing visitors to view them from all angles. It was like a mini theatre for car lovers.

As we walked around the show, I couldn't help but notice the variety of cars on display. There were classic models, muscle cars, and even some electric cars that were on the cutting edge of technology. It was fascinating to see how far the automotive industry has come in recent years.

I was particularly drawn to a classic red car that caught my eye. It was sleek and stylish, with a smooth finish that seemed to reflect the light perfectly. I found out that it was a 1991 model, and that it had been restored to its original condition. My dad explained that car enthusiasts often take great pride in preserving the beauty of classic models.

As we continued to explore the show, I couldn't help but think about the financial responsibility that comes with owning a car. It's not just about the initial purchase price, but also the ongoing costs such as insurance, maintenance, and fuel. It's a responsibility that should not be taken lightly.

I also had the opportunity to talk to some of the car salespeople and learn more about the different financing options available. It was reassuring to know that there are options to suit every budget.

Overall, attending the St. Louis Auto Show was a wonderful experience. It was an opportunity to learn more about the world of cars and the financial responsibility that comes with owning one. I left the show with a newfound appreciation for the art of automotive design and a better understanding of the costs associated with car ownership.

Kemoll’s is excellent experience

BY CHARLIE BRIGHT

One of the finest restaurants in St. Louis is Kemoll’s. The elegant ran wouldn’t be complete without it. Kemoll’s is the exception, and the experi­ence of the restauran t is what makes it noteworthy more than the exquisite cuisine.

Kemoll’s has a long history of placing both place settings and sensibilities, but he prepared to dress up in your finest and be on your best manners for quite some time. The fifth generation of Kemoll’s are already picking in with the Meyersfand families, and

The only thing I can think about the character was the fact that she turned down a full-ride to Stanford to be a model. When asked who, she replied, “Honey, who needs Stanford when you look like this?”

Charter school sponsors seek funding

BY RISHAAM PUTFMAN
Staff Writer

State legislators and representatives of charter school sponsors throughout Missouri as well as the state’s 25 charter districts met in Jefferson City to discuss financial assistance for sponsors.

Both Sam Randazzo, director of University Communications, and Jeff Gessner, interim associate director for the Academic Affairs, represented UMSL at the meeting.

The Learning Exchange, a Kansas City-based organization that arranged the meeting, proposed a formula for new funding that Randazzo said would ease financial burdens placed on sponsors.

The meeting featured a simulation exercise in which sponsors would get the largest share in order of $30,000; Randazzo said.

“The Learning Exchange is looking to do an effort to try to obtain state funding for charter school sponsors and to obtain an agreement from the sponsors,” Randazzo said.

This is an issue that has been discussed in the past, Randazzo said.

If state legislators approved the proposal, UMSL would get about $74,000 for sponsoring the St. Louis Charter School and Thurgood Marshall Academy, Randazzo said.

Central Missouri State University, which sponsors 11 charter schools, would get the largest share at over $30,000, Randazzo added.

“We’re trying to make money so that we can fulfill the responsibilities for sponsoring charter schools,” Randazzo said.

The money would be used for sponsor activities such as charter school field trips to the university and for charter school evaluations.

“It could provide for any number of things,” Randazzo said, adding a sense of optimism.

“I anticipate that the proposal will be approved.”

Currently the proposal is still in the preliminary stage. The Learning Exchange is hoping that interested legislators will introduce the bill in the current legislative session, which begins in late spring.

Randazzo said.

Energy prices strain budget

BY JEFF GEESNER
Special to The Current

Increased energy prices this year have affected many people, but has hit the University of Missouri St. Louis especially hard.

Compared to last year, energy costs at the University have increased. For the six-month period between July and December, electricity costs are up 10 percent and natural gas costs are up 19 percent over last year. According to Randazzo, Surplus and Energy Services, the University is looking at a $900,000 increase in utility cost at the very least.

Speaking on how the increase is going to affect the budget, Randazzo said, “In the short term, it’s going to be hard.” He said that the University had budgeted more money for energy usage, but the unexpected increase in gas prices and the unusually cold winter took them by surprise.

The Missouri Student Center and the Children’s Charity composted a lot more space that needed to be heated and cooled, increasing the utility costs.

No major setbacks in the budget should initially be needed to account for the increased price. A reserve fund has been building in the past couple of years due to lower-than-expected energy costs and more money will be used to supplement the fund.

Measures are going to be taken to combat the problem for future years. Frank Schuster, director of Facilities Services said that a number of measures are being taken, from the plan to discontinue the heating system at the new Millennium Student Center. Several revenue adjustments have been made and more should help combat the problem of rising costs.

The University has also been replacing old, inefficient boilers and adding on the past several years to keep costs down. The efforts have made UMSL the most energy-efficient college school in the University of Missouri system until this year.

Schuster said that the University spent 94.5 million on replacing old appliances every year, and the University has spent 30 percent more efficient and should save the University $8,000.

Combined efforts and the changing in incentives should help combat the problem to take on a charter and find out, or at least the University is more concerned.

“Energy is a big part of our budget. People don’t realize how much we spend,” said Schuster.

Performing Arts Center back on track after delays

BY SEAN GALLI

After some initial setbacks, construction on the Performing Arts Center at UMSL will finally begin on the project in March 2003. The Arts Center was scheduled to be completed in 90 days by a cost of around $43.5 million dollars, said Randazzo, director of Campus Planning and Construction.

The first problem occurred when the soil on the site was analyzed. "My goodness, this soil was loose," Randazzo said Darnazia.

The rock that was in the ground caused unexpected delays as two separate trucks were needed to get rid of it. Those trucks could not be used at the same time, which was the reason for the delay. This was only a minor setback compared to what happened next.

In late 2002, concrete workers went over the site and randomly got hit by a "second". This resulted in $250,000 in cost.

to my car as the “Artsbottles.” For a long time, my car had its own mascot, a figure of a man we called "Arthur." I don’t know how the picture got into my car. But we Ascher, and by the look of my dashboard for several years, before the was finally got the best of him. Right now, my car is in need of some other repairs. Money is tight right now, and my folks are looking at making some changes to the fami­ ly home. Important decisions will be made in the future, and maybe I’ll be doing a different 110 now. I hadn’t even considered how awkward this would be to the Jefferson City. I suppose it’s like my first love, though. Eventually, you’ll just get to let go and move on.

HISTORY

is almost certain that some moment early next year. The West will contain many of the Soviets, and the Russians will be culled down during this winter back to 1942. It was called the Battle of Stalingrad, and marked the turning point of WWII on the Eastern Front.

In the last spring of 1942, Adolf Hitler found himself at war with practically the entire world. His armies were spread all over Europe, the Mediterranean, and North Africa. In Russia, the Russian army was concentrated along a 3,000-mile front from the Arctic Ocean to the Black Sea.

Despite enormous and appalling losses suffered the previous year, the Russians still went all out and attacked. The winter weather was found to be a death blow. Mass casualties were suffered, and the losses were counted.

As winter set in, more than 100,000 men, 75,000 vehicles, and 3,500 tanks, and 2,000 aircraft were destroyed by the Russian defenses. Their objective was to capture the valuable oil fields located in the Caucasus area of southern Russia, thus cutting the country from two to one.

In May 1942, the Germans had advanced nearly 200 miles. The Russians went into the winter season. Hitler buried his anger to his generals, “The front is finished, let us be finished.”

Hitler would be proven wrong dead wrong.

In order to secure the northern end of their attack, the German High Command sent the crack Sixth Panzer Army across the Don River towards Stalingrad, an industrial city located on the Volga River. The Sixth Army was one of Germany’s finest formations, containing 290,000 soldiers divided into 22 divisions.

On Aug., 19, the German attack commenced with a tremendous artillery barrage. Over 1,000 German artillery pieces began blazing away at the Russians. Although the Russians did not fire back, they fought back with dynamics that stunned the world and frightened the Germans.

To recuperate the initiative, the German savages sent in their tanks. On Sept. 1, 2, and 3, the Luftwaffe flew more than 600 missions, attacking the city to destroy. Two thousand tanks were dispatched toward the city and 18 division minus 2 the Luftwaffe’s finest. The Russians were located in the Caucasus area.

The morale of the Russians was being shattered. The lifeblood of the Russians was being shattered.
