Touhill approves parking fee boost

by Daan Wierse

Inside the dome

Chancellor Bhattacharya Touhill decided March 1 is too late to change the student parking rate that would have taken effect July 1, despite student groups' requests to make the change this spring. Touhill had until March 1, for his approval, to set the fee at $18 per credit hour. Failure to make a decision on parking fee would amount to a $1 per credit hour increase. The fee increase would be passed on to students, on March 11, and the $18 per credit hour fee will go into effect July 1. The fee increase will be the same for all categories of students.

Assembly elections will give students ability to shape campus policies

by Laura Brown

The Student Government Association (SGA) is the governing body in charge of student activities and is made up of representatives from the University of Missouri St. Louis (UMSL). The SGA is divided into five distinct boards that govern the various aspects of student life.

Loretta McPherson, chair of the Assembly and professor of physics, talked about how the SGA's recent parking fee increase is one of many issues to be addressed by the Assembly. According to McPherson, the fee increase is one of the most significant issues the Assembly has had to face since its inception. In the past, the Assembly has faced challenges such as budget cuts, increased tuition fees, and cuts to academic programs. The fee increase is expected to have a significant impact on the student body, with some students expressing concerns about the affordability of education.

The university has been working with the science departments to identify areas of the building that need the most attention. The building is expected to be completed in the next few years.

Normandy Hospital to open with July with focus on elderly

by Rosalind Peterson

A private investment company recently acquired Normandy Hospital with plans of reopening it by July 1. The hospital will be geared towards the elderly patients and need in the community.

The hospital has been closed for several years, due to financial difficulties. However, the new owners have invested significant amounts of money to bring the hospital back to life. The hospital will provide a range of services for elderly patients, including inpatient and outpatient care, rehabilitation services, and long-term care.

A key innovation of the new hospital is the focus on the elderly population. The hospital will have specialized services and programs designed to meet the specific needs of elderly patients. The hospital will also have a strong emphasis on wellness and prevention, with a focus on healthy aging and reducing the risk of chronic conditions.

The hospital will be located in the Normandy neighborhood, which has a high population of elderly residents. The hospital will provide a much-needed resource for the community, particularly in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic, which has had a significant impact on the elderly population.

In addition to the specialized services, the hospital will also have a strong focus on community outreach and education. The hospital will work closely with local community organizations to provide outreach services and educational programs to promote healthy aging.

The new owners of the hospital are confident that the hospital will be successful and will meet the needs of the community. They are committed to providing high-quality care and are excited to bring the hospital back to life.

BY ANNE PORTER senior editor

Vincent van Gogh may be the most prominent of the Post-Boulevard painters and may have even coined prominent of the movement, but are publicized far less than Louis Anquetin, Emile Bernard, Signac and Gaugin, father and son Camille and Vincent van Gogh. They have been involved in the Neo-Impressionists, represented by Armand Guillaumet, and have been the focus of many public exhibitions in the Millennium Student Center. The good, the bad, the ugly of St. Patrick’s Day

CHRISTINE MARQUIS-HOMEYER

S t. Patrick’s Day, that celebration of everything Irish, is but a small part of the story. It’s a story of history and some of it’s in the making of this instant green, gold, and a lot of red. St. Patrick’s Day is celebrated by millions around the world.

There’s always the smallest, more family-like Dogwood St. Patrick’s Day parade, when at least there is a little more space for that inevitable crowd, sponsored by the local Ancient Order of Hibernians (that means they’re Irish, or at least pretend to be). The parade goes downtown across the street from the post office to the courthouse, hostages of the traffic lights. The theme for this year’s parade is “Parade with a Purpose.”

Another way to enjoy St. Patrick’s Day is to really do something else. Irish foods: Irish coffee, a typical Irish dish, or even a typical Irish drink. Irish music: A typical Irish song, a typical Irish dance, a typical Irish film. Irish films: A typical Irish film, a typical Irish director. Irish books: A typical Irish book, a typical Irish author.

What a way to celebrate St. Patrick’s Day! You can learn about Irish culture, history, music, and more. Irish books, movies, and music can be found online or in local bookstores. Enjoy your St. Patrick’s Day in a new and unique way!
The laborately arranged music on the album seems to speak for itself. Quiet influential My Bloody Valentine, doing some articulately through his art form. He quits with the highly innovative and Mascis said.

One of the two co-directors on this film, Chris Rock was asked to direct. Zach Miller's decision to direct was based on his experience and his vision for the movie. He has been working closely with the actors and the crew, bringing his unique perspective to the project.

"I'd like to see the story continue, but it seems like a continuation of the events that have been happening. I think it's important to explore the emotions and the consequences of the choices made in the previous stories."

On a deeper level, Miller's novel is about the struggle for immortality and the consequences of one's actions. It raises important questions about the nature of good and evil.

"In the end, the novel raises some significant questions about the nature of good and evil. It challenges readers to think about the choices they make and the consequences of those choices."

In summary, "In the Blood" is a thought-provoking novel that explores important themes and raises significant questions for readers to consider.

Mustang galloped onto scene in 1964

In some respects, 1964 was truly an outstanding year for the United States. The Beatles dominated the British Invasion, a comprehensive Civil Rights package passed through Congress, and our own St. Louis Cardinals, on the incredible pitching arm of Bob Gibson, swept the New York Yankees in the seventh game of the World Series.

But it was also a banner year for Ford Motor Company. For the spring of 1964, they would unveil a phenomenon that would revolutionize the automotive industry and capture the imagination of Americans. It was the original MUSTANG, an automobile, in its legend, is considered a milestone in automotive history.

The story of the Mustang begins in early 1960. Lee Iacocca, the head of Ford Division, was determined to develop new car models to attract Americans to Ford. Iacocca decided to pursue a sporty two-door car and give it the name of Mustang.

The car would also be sporty. It was christened the Mustang, with driver and passenger windows. It was powered by a small engine with a 150-horsepower water-cooled V8. The car appeared simultaneously on the covers of Time and Newsweek, and it received immediate praise. John F. Kennedy was so impressed with it that he immediately ordered one for himself.

The success of the Mustang was due in large part to its aggressive marketing strategy. The car was marketed as an affordable, stylish, and sporty alternative to the German imports that were dominating the market.

Iacocca and his team didn't take no for an answer. They continued to push and eventually convinced Henry Ford II, the head of Ford, to approve the Mustang's production.

The Mustang's success continued to grow throughout the year, and it became an instant classic. It was a turning point for Ford and paved the way for future innovations in the automotive industry.

The Mustang's success taught Ford a valuable lesson: the importance of innovation, marketing, and listening to consumers. It was a lesson that would shape the company's future, and it would lead to the development of other iconic vehicles, such as the F-150 and the Fusion.

In the end, the Mustang was a testament to the power of perseverance, innovation, and the ability to meet consumer demands. It was a car that captured the spirit of a generation and remains a symbol of automotive excellence to this day.

Mock Trial team puts in long hours preparing for national competition

BY RISHAED PUTMAN

In their second season of execu tion and already competing at a national level, the UMSL mock trial team’s success has become “phenomenal.”

"This is huge," team president Matthew LaMartina exclaimed, as the pitch of his voice goes up a few seconds. "This is a massive, massive undertaking."

On Thursday morning, one of the team’s three squads went on a run and got ready for a 10-hour drive to St. Paul, Minnesota, where the annual National American Mock Trial Association national competition will be held. Forty other teams will join them.

Each squad spends their days preparing for the national competition, and the final push is set for this weekend. The team will compete in a Federal Courthouse in front of some of the nation’s best mock trial teams.

"It’s a lot like what you would see on the TV show ‘The Practice,’" said LaMartina. "This is exactly what that is."

But despite the hours spent in courtrooms, LaMartina stated that the team wasn’t just a "pro-law office" organization.

"It’s a program really based in problem solving, thinking logically and thinking on your feet," he said, "analyzing data. It’s all built around the confines of the American trial system."

As the national competition comes closer, each of UMSL’s trials will be presented to the nation’s top 25 national teams, and other local teams will be invited to compete.

"It’s like a part-time job," she said.

Yet, through the last days of preparing over competitions, Smith says that the whole experience is "fun, fun, fun."

"We believe we acted in the best interests of the community as a whole."

In a letter to Touhill, Beyab immediately after receiving the letter of rejection, he expressed his frustration with the administration’s decision upon the following information.

"They committed a breach of contract, UMSL believes that all day-to-day operations of the Charter Academy out of St. Louis City were in accordance with the charter, the charter school law, and the Supplemen tal Funding for Expenses to enhance whether they act as the defense or plaintiff in a civil case concerning a lawsuit against these services at Mount Everest."

In the midst of the three-hour work week team meetings, the team discussed with UML about the substance of the new and entirely different educational management partner. Charter Consultants. Secondly, this new educational management partner would have a significantly smaller role than that of Lincoln Education Management Inc., the previous partner, in the overall operation of the charter school. This included, but was not limited to, the hiring and dis missal of principals and teachers, the setting of educational goals and standards, and teacher evaluation.

"We believe we acted in the best interests of the community as a whole. This includes taxpayers, charter school students, and charter school staff. We did the right thing by the students."

Lamar Beyab sees the situation from a different perspective. "What we did was legal," Beyab said. "They committed a breach of contract. UMSL believes that all day-to-day decisions in the charter school will only be conducted by the management partner. That is simply not true, and also illegal."

According to Beyab, a non-profit organization that runs an inner-city school said they had "full control over the instructional program." That was the whole basis for UMGL’s rejected reorganization of the school.

"We have the audacity to say that the charter school is no longer to be run by the management partner." Beyab said.

In their second season of existence, the mock trial team’s success has become "phenomenal."

"The earliest hope to get the funding tomorrow," Beyab said. "It’s fun, fun, fun."
