American computer and information sciences students were among those who had to deal with the problems. The Associated Student Government, which is responsible for managing technology, has been working on a solution for several weeks. The lack of a secure environment is nothing new, according to Ram. However, the situation is more critical now because of the recent events.

"We have to be more careful about what we do," said Boyd. "Our goal is to prevent any further loss of data or information." The school has already started implementing new security measures, including stronger passwords and more frequent backups.

Nurses Associations only computer is stolen

• Group may be without a computer for the rest of the year, said Andrea Breaux, the organization's president.

"I doubt we'll get a new one," she said. "It's just not a secure environment anymore. I doubt we'll have anything of value in the future." The computer was the only one in the building, and it's been the focus of attention for weeks. The nurses are currently trying to find a replacement computer, but it's not an easy task.

Boyd acknowledged the situation is complicated, and those looking for a solution are under a lot of pressure. "We're doing everything we can to get the computer back," she said. "But until we do, we're just not a secure environment." The nurses are currently working on a backup plan, and they hope to have a new computer soon.

According to the university's budget committee, the proposed fee increase is necessary to fund various programs. The increase will affect all students, regardless of their major or class standing.

Dear Alice is sincerely silly, strangely sexual

BY SARA PORTER
Senior Writer

If you all type of person who loves the sexual humor found in "movies like 'There's something about Mary'" or the overwrought beat drop hook of Clean Bandit and Chung then you would probably enjoy Steven Ryniak's "Dear Alice" renowned for its porn参考5 and laugh attacks and its snarky tone towards teenagers. How bad is this book?

Yes, this book is dear Alice. It is full of as well as and probably, and while they are funny when you want to be sexual they get you sad after old hour. The book is like a fifty year grad who has finally learned what those words mean and now uses them just to annoy parents.

Ryniak also makes some pop-culture reference, in his letter to Dear Worn, "Dungeons and Dragons", and fairy

"Dungeons and Dragons" and fairy fantasy novels. Some of them are pretty funny to hear, but not many people on the outside would get them. Like also takes such pages on religion, animal lives, science, and people with mental illnesses. Not too many people are safe from ridicule in this book.

While Dear Alice may cause some people and often others, it is mostly a book that is a simple exercise and easily forgotten.

October offers outrageous outings and outings

BY CHARLIE BALEY
Junior Writer

This fall is the year where for they become lifetime, the wind sways in your hair, and eight letters to life live. But in this issue we celebrate some of the most memorable and creative outfits of the year. Out of the most celebrated months of fall is October and in this month one particular day, 31, Holloween.

Holloween is the day in which we celebrate our costume party because of its food and lies what is being said and there are being said is tradition.

This spooky holiday has many paths, such as humorist. There was a hole in the beginning of the party that is a good scare is in fall off.

The form of entertainment is of the most powerful and profitable, value of books of the month in the month, and especially around Holloween.

Although a good scare is good for the party during October, one of the most possible experiences that people get to have is being a zombie. As what has the rule of disguise is contained in Holloween. One of the most fashionable costumes this year is not in character from a film, but in a traditional form of entertainment."

In the fall of 1998, UMS-L St. Louis enrolled Professor Brian Harmon found herself internationally living among and posing complications, petty world affairs, illegal drug dealers, topless models, and other material things. But too many people are safe from ridicule in this book.

While Dear Alice may cause some people and often others, it is mostly a book that is a simple exercise and easily forgotten.

The Harmon started the process by applying to the Peacemakers in 1997 and were accepted shortly after that. To make sure they stayed together, Luke and Lisa were married on November 2, 1997. They had a small ceremony in our garden. During the ceremony, the couple exchanged vows, the officiant was a minister who performed the ceremony, and the guests included family and friends.

The Harmon moved to the Washington, D.C. area in 1998, where they spent the next few years working on their research projects and raising their family of four. In 2002, they returned to Missouri and settled in the Kansas City area, where they now live with their children.

The Harmon are proud to say that they have been married for almost 20 years and are still together. They credit their success to their commitment to their research and to each other. They have also been active in their community, volunteering at local schools and charitable organizations.

The Harmon hope that their story will inspire others to consider alternative career paths and to follow their passions, no matter what that may be. They encourage others to pursue their interests and to stay true to themselves, even if it means going against the grain. They believe that everyone has the potential to make a difference in the world and that it is important to find the path that feels right for you.

The Harmon believe that their journey is far from over and that there is still much work to be done. They continue to work on their research projects and to raise their children, and they are proud to say that they have never looked back on the path they have chosen.

Education major speaks about Peace Corps teaching experiences overseas

Ms. Handy's title was changed recently to the Dean of Libraries. She said that she was still working to create opportunities for two decades of new life after getting married.

"I am very community focused and have a strong understanding of the various groups," she said. The position required her to travel abroad twice a year and to communicate in the written form.

When asked about what she thought the major item for the year in 2001, Mr. Handy, said, "I think she is a wonderful person to work with."

The Harmon have known Mrs. Amott since I graduated. "We have been close friends since we graduated," said Handy. "I think our friendship is strong because we have seen each other through many ups and downs."

According to Handy, Mrs. Amott is a dedicated and caring person who is always willing to listen and offer advice. She said that Mrs. Amott is a role model for all students and is always there to help them with whatever they need.

Our Opinion

This Halloween mask your fears

Halloween, the season that officially marks the transition from fall to winter, is wrought with fear of evil and death. The celebration of this day is filled with the spirit of rebellion against what we fear. It is a time when we can mask our true selves and pretend to be something else.

However, we at The Current believe that Halloween should not be another day where we can hide behind our masks and pretend to be someone we are not. We believe that Halloween should be a time when we can reflect on our own fears and how they have affected us.

We suggest that everyone should consider trick-or-treating as a way to reflect on their own fears. By doing this, we can gain a better understanding of our own fears and how they have affected us.

Guest Commentary

Memories of Halloween past, trick or treat in college too

I grew up in a time when Halloween was a big deal. I remember going from house to house, trick-or-treating, with my friends. It was a time of fun and excitement.

However, as I got older, I realized that Halloween was no longer the same. The atmosphere had changed, and I had lost the sense of community that I used to have.

Now, as an adult, I realize that Halloween is not just a time of fun and games. It is also a time of reflection and self-discovery.

The 'Machismo' factor in us all

A couple of years ago, my best friend and I went trick-or-treating in West Virginia. We were both in our late twenties, and we were looking for a way to let our hair down.

We decided to go to West Virginia because we heard that the state was known for its Halloween traditions. We were both excited to see what we would find.

Our trip started off well. We drove down the highways and byways of West Virginia, taking in the sights and sounds of the fall season. We were both in high spirits as we drove through the small towns and villages.

As we continued our journey, we began to feel a sense of familiarity. We were reminded of our own families and the traditions that we had grown up with.

We pulled into a small town and got out of the car to stretch our legs. We were both looking forward to finding a good place to eat.

We walked into a small diner and were greeted by the owner. She was a friendly woman who made us feel welcome.

We ordered some hot cocoa and some NYE's, a local delicacy. We sat down and talked about our trip and our families.

As we ate, we began to feel more and more connected. We were both reminded of the importance of family and the traditions that we had grown up with.

We left the diner feeling satisfied and content. We knew that we would always have each other to rely on.

The trip was a great success. We were both reminded of the importance of family and the traditions that we had grown up with.

We left West Virginia feeling content and satisfied. We knew that we would always have each other to rely on.

Movie MARQUE

Well, Halloween is here, and I know you’re not the only one who’s thinking, ‘Oh, how I wish this was a favorite holiday. Maybe it’s the theater of the costume, or the candy, or the idea of being a completely different person from yourself. Just remember, if your little ‘trick’ gets you stomach-achingly different from the natural green of your hair—

Beside the usual haunted houses and costume parties, there are Halloween-themed events at the theaters.

The top Halloween film has to be the current re-telling of the Jack the Ripper tale, ‘From Hell,’ starring Johnny Depp, has a stylish look and is "most vivid and appealing way," according to Catharine Marques-Homéry.

Halloween comes with plenty of appealing spooky sweets.

‘Tortilla Soup’ is a spoonful of sugar

Tortilla Soup is an appetizing film in several ways. The film is an adaptation of the graphic novel about a group of Mexican-American students that is filled with a lot of passion and appeal. The film is filled with the spirit of the food and the food playfully appears in the story.

The stylish mystery ‘From Hell’ resurrects the ghost of Jack the Ripper just in time for Halloween, in a film that has a dark, gorgeous, haunting look and the atmospheric presence of a London fog. The film is mysterious and grippingly entertaining, with a look that is both dark and eerie. In 1888, the ‘Jack the Ripper’ was a serial killer who murdered at least five London prostitutes and finally stabbed himself, leaving a mystery that remains unsolved and an important part of the popular psyche. Johnny Depp plays London police inspector Abberline, assigned to the case of Jack the Ripper.

Although friends are still unwilling to cooperate with the police, Mary Kelly (Kate Winslet) appears to him with the inspector. He also hired by a retired surgeon, William Gull (Jonas Hay), as they journey through the case.

Remedy brings good news and sound to Jitters

by KELLY SOLT

Remedy, a rock church group jamin’ it up, the south coast’s newest worship band? That’s right, another rock church group w/ style, the Zachs, recently made their way through the Jitter’s “Away From Home” tour, a mix of music, friendship, and scathing Macy’s ads.

The Zachs are a little different, though. The band members, over 18, are a group of friends with similar backgrounds and goals. The lyrics are still the main focus, of course, but the personal stories and experiences of the band members shine through in their songs.

One of the main points of Remedy’s music is to bring a sense of community and understanding to listeners. The band, consisting of Daniel, David, and Funky, will be performing at Jitter’s on Friday, May 25, and Saturday, May 26. Be sure to check them out and see what all the excitement is about!

A single human is not human at all

By BISH BuNIA

Compared to most organisms, humans are highly social. We have evolved to be social creatures and our brains have evolved around this tendency to cognize and react to social situations. In fact, it was a social situation that led to the emergence of language, so we can say that humans are social creatures.

In addition to a powerful social bond, humans also have the ability to learn. Each of us has a unique set of experiences that shape our lives. This ability to learn is what makes us unique as a species.

Moreover, humans have the ability to create and develop new ideas. This creativity allows us to coordinate our actions and solve problems. It is this ability to learn and create that sets us apart from all other species.

Maturana believes that people have the same basic level of intelligence as animals when it comes to the formation of the nervous system. However, in humans, the brain has the ability to learn from our experiences and to develop new ideas.

It is not the influence of others that helps animals learn, but the ability to learn from our own experiences. This ability to learn from our own experiences is what makes humans unique.

The way that humans usually interact is a social one, not an individual one. However, there are situations where an individual can act independently, such as when solving a puzzle or making a decision. In these cases, the individual is not acting as a group, but as a single entity.

To learn, we need to be able to process information, both in our mind and in our body. This means that our brains need to be able to recognize patterns and make associations.

This is why it is important to learn from our experiences, to remember what has worked in the past, and to be able to apply that knowledge to new situations.

In conclusion, humans are unique because we are able to learn from our experiences, to develop new ideas, and to act independently. This ability to learn and create sets us apart from all other species.
