Touhill named newest dean

By Jason Granger

Editor

The presidency of Missouri State University has come to fruition with the creation of the College of Fine Arts and the appointment of John Hylton as its founding dean.

Hylton is a local hero, having been a fixture in the community for many years. He has a long history of service to the university, having been a member of the Board of Trustees for over a decade. He is also a strong advocate for the arts, having founded the Missouri State University Community Chorus and served as interim dean of the College of Fine Arts.

Hylton's appointment is a significant milestone for the university, as it marks the beginning of a new era for the College of Fine Arts. The college, which was created to bring together the arts and humanities programs, will now be led by a dedicated leader who is committed to excellence in teaching and research.

Hylton's tenure as dean will be characterized by a focus on the arts, with an emphasis on fostering creativity and innovation. He will work closely with faculty and students to ensure that the college continues to be a leader in the arts.

As the new dean, Hylton is excited about the opportunities that lie ahead. "I am thrilled to be able to work with such a talented and dedicated faculty," he said. "We have a fantastic group of students who are eager to learn and create, and I am looking forward to working with them to achieve great things."

Irish fiddlers play to full house
by Sallie Porter
Senior Writer

It would be normal to expect a fiddler player from Dublin, Ireland, to play traditional Irish music well, but it may be surprising to find a fiddler player from Copenhagen, Denmark, who plays Irish music equally as well. For that, we could be looking for Andrew O'Brien from Dublin and Peter Sorensen from Copenhagen, if we were to find a free concert in the Music Building on September 19th, at 2:00 pm.

O'Brien and Sorensen began their set on a high note, playing "The Kilfenora Jig." The singing of the audience accompanied the fiddle music as the audience listened to the fast-paced introduction.

The following two songs, "The Mountain Road," were a tribute to musician "The Mountain Road," well accompanied each other, as the slower-paced "Mountain Road" was topped by the faster "Mountain Road" on their musical act.

They will take a break from the beefs and willows of their traditional electronic and play the improvised music of some old fashioned legends.

Creativity and selection were the keynotes from a crowd of local lounge entertainment and made their show worth watching. In addition, either at the Upstairs Lounge or at Acme Comedy, the set list will be enough the same, with only minor differences that only the fiddle enthusiasts would notice. So the questions becomes: What makes Main and Wagner worth watching?

Some portions of Main's set and Wagner's set will be much like those of a thousand or other bar's line of coffee house music and drum and bass. But Main and Wagner will change the run of tourists' by choosing unusual and interesting selections to break up the electronic molesting.

During the set, Main and Wagner will offer you tales old and recent, ideas old and new. Mayfield's "Move on Up" or Roy Ayers' "In the Summer," their leader is fast enough.

"The music offers itself in songs from African artists Hugh Masekela or Fela Kuti. Occasionally Main and Wagner break the beat and whisper of their traditional electronic and play the improvised music of some old fashioned legends.

What makes Main and Wagner worth watching?

The SGA voting this fall failed the resolution to make Missouri a rally state. What was the reason for their rejection? I thought the rally would be a great way to show our support for the team and should be a great way to bring Missouri fans into the attitude of the/STANFORD GRIFITH

Dear Students,

We are writing to you today about an issue that affects us all. Unfortunately, the Missouri State University System’s budget cuts have been affecting our campus in significant ways. Among other things, we have seen a reduction in the number of faculty and staff, and an increase in the number of students. These cuts have made it difficult for us to continue to provide the same level of support to our students as we have in the past.

However, we believe that there are steps that can be taken to address this situation. First, we urge the university administration to consider increasing the funding for student support services. We also encourage students to become more involved in the decision-making process by participating in student government and other campus organizations.

We hope that you will consider these suggestions and take action to address the challenges facing our campus.

Sincerely,

[Your name]

The University of St. Louis head coach from five different sports was given their resignations last weekend, but that does not mean that the road is any easier for the athletes in these programs. The programs have been cut in part because of the school’s string of ineligibility and ineligibility for certain activities, and in part because of the school’s desire to cut costs. The school has seen its budget hit hard by the recent recession, and it has had to make tough decisions in order to stay afloat.

Movie Review

Igby Goes Down is a new independent dark comedy that is already a hit in other cities. Korean star Cho, known for her raunchy brand of humor, takes on a new role in this film. Cho stars as Igby, a young boy who is always getting into trouble and causing chaos.

Igby's parents are played by Tom Hanks and Emma Thompson, who are doing a great job in their roles. Igby's older brother, played by David Duchovny, is also a standout in the film.

The film is full of laughs and heartwarming moments. Cho's performance is outstanding, and the movie is a must-see for anyone who enjoys dark comedies.

Movie Review

The Four Feathers is a historical tale

The film is set in the late 19th century and follows the story of a young British soldier who is sent to the Sudan to join the army.

The soldier, played by Leonardo DiCaprio, is a young man who is eager to prove himself in battle. He is assigned to a unit that is about to be deployed, but when he arrives, he finds that the unit is made up of men who are not very experienced.

Despite the challenges, DiCaprio's character is determined to prove himself in battle and show that he is capable of handling any task.

The film is full of action and adventure, as the soldiers face many obstacles in their journey. The cast is talented and the direction is excellent, making for an exciting and engaging film.
Sheridan's free spirit enabled his father, although he is just as committed to his studies as his father's. When this story is about the nature of fashion in a relaxed yet socially conscious and about friendship of different kinds, the story is about modern expectations of expression and adventure and adventure. The story has a share of heartache and also a certain allure, with the story's British colonial set in a setting of the African Muslim in the Sudan desert, but the politics are kept in the background. It's not entirely clear, even to Harry, how he's going to use his friend's approach to deal with his decision, or so it was, but it was definitely the story of Sheridan and self-discovery in an era of character development by Ejtian Morrison. When Harry asks Abou why he helped him, Abou replies simply that he asked God for a reason and God put him in his shoes. This spiritual and elemental move was the journey that they both take, emotionally and physically, as they move forward after their other gay couple join them. The subplot of the story is the only subplot, as this story unfolds, it takes a lot of simple adrenalin.

The big question about the film is how a sequence is a momentous one with an unusual story. It is about beauty and its allure, about a man's rise and fall, and it is a romance with a firm foundation. Within his family, in any respect, it is a very recent product of this. It was a popular fiction of the last century, not a historical literature, but it is closely followed in contemporary, since it was mercurial at times and it was not a good novel. It was a story told with great care and taste.

Be an intern through Career Service

BY MELISSA McCrty
Staff Writer

During college, many students try to apply themselves into their fields before they choose their majors. When doing this, the majority of students long for a hands-on experience such as an internship.

Throughout the last decade, internships have been increasingly beneficial for helping people break into the job market. Thousands of employers have automatically hired interns because they have had a proven track record of learning and being able to do a job.

The Career Services Office at the University of St. Louis can be a great resource for many students seeking this kind of opportunity. They can assist students by helping them find a job, build a resume and learn interview tips.

"For a student to get a job, they can find a listing of openings in our office, submit a resume or plan an interview." Emily McEneny, career specialist, said.

The Internet has also been a powerful tool in finding suitable careers. On many U.S. Louis company websites, job listings are posted under career connections. On the St. Louis Post Dispatch's website, internships are listed under the classified section.

A student may want follow employers on the job by using various types of social media. The choice and responsibilities may vary. As interns might have to do clerical work, answer phones or provide physical labels.

Last year, Career Services helped many students land jobs or internships. One career specialist said, "With the majority of students wanting hands-on experience, we have just started doing phone interviews, whereas, phone and job interviews.

"This year I became a Human Resources intern in downtown St. Louis. I have worked with many different firms. I was a hired career specialist, said, "My main priority was to learn and grow on the intern's job. If they have an interview, we can help them start doing phone interviews, whereas, phone and job interviews.

Hyton has been named dean in the midst of the university’s most recent financial crisis, but he does not feel that will deter students from applying to the College of Fine Arts and Sciences.

This was formally announced as dean of the College of Fine Arts, Sciences, and Social Sciences at the University of St. Louis.

"Last year, I used this venue to announce the creation of the College of Fine Arts and Communications," Jothtli said. "Today, I am announcing that John Wilkins has been awarded the position of dean of the college.

"Jothtli also said that Hyton has taught and held several jobs, such as an assistant professor of Science, a chair of the Department of Chemistry, a director of the University's Scientific Institute, and a director of the College of Fine Arts and Communications.

"The event will be held on September 5, in the Millennium Student Center. The event will feature representatives of various religious organizations.

Hyton is the first American Muslim to hold the position of dean in a major university in the United States. The announcement coincides with the midpoint of the academic year, which will begin on September 5. The announcement comes as an important step in bridging the gap between the Muslim community and the university community.

Wash. U., UMSL come together in joint degree program

Raychel Miller

Washington University's and UMSL's joint degree program in engineering is providing a venue for students to double major in their studies.

The program was launched last fall with students taking classes at both locations. The program is designed to provide students with a more hands-on, practical education.

"This unique opportunity allows students to tailor their education to their interests and career goals," said Mark Wrighton, chancellor of Washington University.

The joint program is focused on preparing students for careers in engineering, with a particular emphasis on addressing the needs of the regional and national economies.

"We are committed to educating engineers who are prepared to lead in the 21st century," said Dr. Jeff Wherry, director of CASGSL.

The program includes coursework in areas such as mechanical, electrical, and civil engineering, as well as business and management.

Students can choose to complete their degree at either Washington University or UMSL, with the option to take courses at both locations.

"The program offers flexibility and allows students to take advantage of the resources and opportunities available at both universities," said Touhill.

Touhill said the production of African-American engineering students and graduates was one of the primary reasons for creating the venture.

Maryland extended the program for the program competitive for 2023-04.

"Our joint program is an excellent example of a highly successful partnership," said Mark S. Wrighton, chancellor of Washington University.

The program aims to increase the number of African-American students who graduate from engineering programs, with a focus on providing a supportive and inclusive environment.

"This is a model of what can be done to increase diversity in engineering education," said Touhill.

The joint degree program has received positive feedback from students and industry partners, with many expressing interest in participating in the program.

"The joint degree program is a great example of how universities can work together to address the needs of the region," said Touhill.

The program is open to students who are interested in pursuing an engineering degree.

"Those interested in the program can find more information on the program website," said Touhill.

The joint degree program is supported by funding from both Washington University and UMSL, as well as grants from various organizations.

"The program is made possible by the generous support of our partners," said Touhill.

The program will continue to grow and expand in the future, with plans to add new courses and partnerships.

"We are excited to see the impact the program will have on the region," said Touhill.

COACH’S CORNER
UVM-St. Louis
Rivermen
Tenis
by Mike Barnes
Sports Editor

With an 8-1 defeat at Lewis University, the Rivermen maize team now stands at 3-6 on the season. The team may expect all of its singles matches to be Lewis and nothing new victories out of its three doubles matches. The team also has a 3-6 Great Lakes Valley Conference.

With two months left until the GLVC tournament, Head Coach Mark Gyllenborg is looking to take his team atop the league standings. Here’s a look at the UVM-St. Louis women’s tennis through the eyes of Gyllenborg.

The season record

"It’s a little bit disappointing," Gyllenborg said. "We’re just disappointed in the win-loss record. We’re a little disappointed that we’ve had many matches - individual matches - where we were ahead and in these matches we didn’t pull them off, more in the doubles matches where we were ahead likely 4-1 and fall. From that point of view, it’s disappointing.

Improvements

"Other people - outsiders that have made comments on us and the team - are not very improvement to the girls," Gyllenborg said. "When you see them everyday, it’s a little bit like watching your kid grow up. When you see them everyday, you don’t realize how they grow up. If you don’t see them for a couple of months, you come back and you say 'my god, the kids are so grown up.' It’s the same with the tennis team."

"Having them everyday, we think it’s great. We think they are getting better," Gyllenborg continued. "We’re very improvement. We haven’t figured out how to close out matches. So we really haven’t figured out how to win yet."

Drapping a close game

"That is a team," Gyllenborg said. "That is a team that is not afraid to be humbled when you play against them. We will lose low. Most of it is mental - being afraid."

"When you’re down 6-7, your approach is different because in some ways you have nothing to lose," Gyllenborg said. "As you can just chuck the ball. If you don’t hit it in, so what? We’re losing 6-4 anyway. But all of a sudden, their intensity gets a 1-3 difference and they start smacking the ball with confidence and start it going. And then they get momentum. Really it’s just momentum."

"It’s the same way with our girls. We’re coaching here and we coaching here in our season and I figured out how to stop the momentum."

Soccer

The UVM-St. Louis Rivermen soccer team was scheduled to play Indianapolis on Sept. 20. However, due to poor playing conditions, the game was canceled. The Indianapolis area was hit hard by heavy rains, causing poor field conditions. The contest may possibly be rescheduled for another day.

Many of the teams are strictly for men or women, but a few of the sports include co-ed events. Students, faculty and staff with a valid UVM-St. Louis ID, and their families, are eligible to participate for free. Attendees, especially minority members with non-passes may participate for $20 per team per sport or $100 per season for all sports. Varsity and professional athletes are not eligible to compete.

Participants can pick up entry forms in the Rec Sports office. The office is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday. Schedules and handouts are available, and results of games are posted on the Rec Sports bulletin board.

For more information, visit the Rec Sports homepage at http://www.uml.edu/recsports or call the Rec Sports hotline at (314) 516-1321.

THE GLOBAL CITIZEN AWARD

Mary Robinson was born in County Mayo, Ireland in 1944. She earned law degrees from the Kings Inns, Dublin (the oldest institution of legal education in Ireland) and Harvard University. In 1969 at the age of 25, she became the youngest professor of law in Ireland when she was appointed Reid Professor of Constitutional and Criminal Law at Trinity College. From 1969 to 1989, Robinson served in the Irish Upper House of Parliament. In 1990, she was elected as Ireland's first female president and served until 1997. During her presidency, Robinson advocated for women's rights. She drew attention to global crises through her visits to Rwanda, Yugoslavia, and Somalia. Robinson was awarded the Special CARE Humanitarian Award for her efforts to aid Somalia.

In 1997, Robinson was appointed United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights. She served in that position for five years. Her tenure was marked by controversy because of her outspoken criticism of human rights' violations and her views on civil liberties.

The University of Missouri-St. Louis invites you to the presentation of the

who will speak on

"World Peace in Relation to 9/11"

Wednesday, October 2, 2002
7 p.m.
Century Rooms (3rd Floor)
Millennium Student Center
University of Missouri-St. Louis

A reception will follow.
Parking available in Lot E.

This event is made possible by the Office of Student Life and the University Program Board with assistance from the Center for International Studies and the Chancellor's Office.

The Global Citizen Award was inspired by John Dill, past president of the Chancellor's Council and retired president and CEO of Macy's, to highlight Chancellor Blanche Touhill's commitment to "internationalizing" the university through the work of the Center for International Studies. The University is dedicated to providing its students with the knowledge and skills they will need in a world where the responsibilities of citizenship are now global.

This award was created to mark that ideal a reality by honoring an individual whose life and work are a powerful demonstration of the value of global citizenship.
