University Asks $2,000,000 For Student Building

University officials disclosed recently that they are seeking a $2,000,000 federal loan to speed construction of a student union building on the campus.

The new student union building would provide needed cafeteria space and would alleviate the students' problem in having to buy textbooks, during registration week.

Chancellor James L. Bugg, Jr., explained that the Housing and Home Finance Agency normally requires reserve funds of up to one-third of the building's estimated cost before it issues the other two-thirds.

Want $2,000,000

Dr. Bugg said that the University is attempting to get around this requirement on the grounds that the University has an emergency situation. The University is asking the federal agency to waive the requirement and issue a loan of $2,000,000 which will cover the entire cost of construction.

Chancellor Bugg explained that the reason the reserve amount was asked for was due in part to the Missouri Legislative traditional rule to allocate funds for such buildings.

Students now pay a $10 fee for the union building, but even with enrollment expansions, the needed one-third to start the building would take more than five years to collect.

John Perry, University Business Officer, said he expects to hear from the federal agency very soon, since the application was submitted "more than six months ago."

Four Story Building

The new union building, when completed, will house an enlarged cafeteria, a bookstore plus facilities for the dean of students and space for student organizations. Plans call for the building to be fourteen stories high.

During the first week of classes, students jammed the temporary quarters in the bookstore, converted classroom. Some students had to wait as long as six hours.

The cafeteria has been overcrowded since the start of school, two-story-room-only space during the lunch hours.

Chancellor Bugg said the architects for the job have been selected. As soon as funds are available construction on the student union building will begin, he said.

Dean Critical Of Student Behavior At School Dance

Dr. Harold Eickhoff, Dean of Students, criticized the "lack of responsibility" and the poor conduct of Carl Huffman (r.), Director of Development, as Chancellor James L. Bugg, Jr. looks on.

An election to fill fifteen freshmen Senate posts is slated for early November, according to Student Association President Alan Handler. To apply for a Senate office, a full-time freshman can obtain a petition from the S.A. office, room 211 in the Administration Building. After collecting 50 signatures on the petition, he must submit it to the Student Association. His name will then be automatically added to the list of candidates. Freshmen students can only sign two petitions. To remain on the Senate, all members must maintain a 2.0 cumulative grade point average.

The Senate will be eligible to vote in this election. The polling places will be manned by members of the Iota and Elections Committee which is headed by sophomore, Kathy McDonald.

When asked about the importance of the freshmen elections, S. A. president Alan Handler said:

"There is an important ingredient that is vital to the S. A. That is that the students must understand the nature of student government and urge individuals who represent their opinion to seek positions of leadership."

"In the prospective slate of 15 freshman senators that the future of the Senate relies, and for them to realize their own potential they must divorce themselves from the attitude that the Senate is just an activity to start their collection, but rather make a determined effort to develop their ability as a representative of the student body."

"I urge all freshmen to take but a moment and look at the candidate dates, to meet and talk with them, then on election day make an intelligent decision as to whom you will be the voice of the freshman class."

FIRST GIFT TO UNIVERSITY

Alumni Donate $1000 To Library

The St. Louis University Missouri Alumni Association donated $1000 to the University Library fund last October 6, 1965. The Association gift was their first presented to the St. Louis campus. The check for the library fund was presented to University officials by Alumni Association treasurer Werner Mueller, $314 Hord, St. Louis, Missouri.

Vivets will be used to buy books for the new library. The ground breaking ceremony is present for the spring of 1966 and the building is scheduled for completion within two years. The new library will be built somewhere behind the administration building.

The St. Louis MU-Alumni Association has about two thousand members of St. Louis area residents who attended the University at Columbia.

Dr. Eickhoff added he was used to the treatment and not personally offended by the rudeness, but he was concerned with the treatment that other chaperones received.

"I personally saw several men at the mixer who definitely did not belong," he remarked. He found two men smoking on the second floor in the Country Club building in an area where smoking is prohibited.

Chancellor Bugg Greets Students Orientation Day

Chancellor James L. Bugg, Jr. told a gathering of new students Orientation Day that the "common objective of both faculty and students at the University is the pursuit of academic excellence." He said:

"The faculty assumes that you are adults and interested enough to carry on with this study for yourselves." He said.

"Our students who are here should realize that they are adults and interested enough to carry on with this study for yourselves," he said.

Chancellor Bugg spoke to a stifling crowd of over 500 persons gathered on the patio behind the Administration Building. The Orientation Day Program was divided into a morning and an afternoon session to accommodate the large number of freshmen and transfer students.

Chancellor Bugg also pointed out in his brief address, that the faculty would do everything possible to assist students to attain academic excellence.

"At this University it is the faculty and students, not faculty versus students," he said.

It's Your Reputation

The Mizzou NEWS staff would like to congratulate the Social Committee, headed by Cheryl Taylor, for the smooth operation of the first mixer, October 9. The choice of band was appropriate; decorations imaginative, and the publicity paid off with a large attendance.

However, the Mizzou NEWS feels the student conduct was something less than to be congratulated.

First, the lack of consideration for faculty members, who act as chaperones at dances, is inexcusable. The faculty generously donates their time to attend these affairs. It is selfish, and a sure sign of a lack of respect for the faculty, that students should make faculty members feel welcome by just saying hello. Aside from the fact that without chaperones we couldn't even have dances, students sometimes forget that the faculty is as closely tied to the campus as the students themselves.

Second, some of the dancing done by a few students was in very bad taste. At the dance, a plain clothes policeman approached Dr. Eickhoff and asked when they stopped informed dancing. Dr. Eickhoff replied, "Usually when a crowd begins to gather." "I don't know about the crowd," said the policeman, "but the only thing preventing this couple from having 'relations' is their clothing!"

The Mizzou NEWS feels that this is "pseudo intellectualism" as far as the Mizzou NEWS is concerned. The real intellectual knows that certain social laws exist — written and unwritten. To be a productive "intellectual" he must stay within these bounds. If he doesn't, he will be ostracized by society. For example, indecent behavior in public is indecent behavior in that irresponsibility displayed by this couple who must not have cared if they made fools of themselves, or were just plain defiant of social custom.

However, this example is also misleading. In this instance, we have two people giving a bad reputation to many who would be ashamed of such exhibition.

We do not mean to say that this couple was the only offender, as there were others but, the majority of students in attendance acted in good taste.

Third, when the conduct was discussed at the Oct. 9 Senate meeting, one member of the executive board took a very irresponsible stand. He felt that students should be "uninhibited" and have freedom to act in any manner they pleased. He maintained this argument on the basis that this school should have an "intellectual atmosphere."

This is "pseudo intellectualism" as far as the Mizzou NEWS is concerned. The real intellectual knows that certain social laws exist — written and unwritten. To be a productive "intellectual" he must stay within these bounds. If he doesn't, he will be ostracized by society. For example, indecent behavior in public is indecent behavior in that irresponsibility displayed by this couple who must not have cared if they made fools of themselves, or were just plain defiant of social custom.

The entire issue all boils down to one point — who decides the bounds of good taste, the individual, or the school? The Mizzou NEWS feels the responsibility lies with both.

The individual must decide what his personal values are and then stick to them. If indecent behavior in public is going to give him an undesirable reputation, then he must choose another course of action. No one can tell you what standards to live by for your entire life, so part of the responsibility does lie with the individual.

The University must also decide where the boundary is, because it must protect itself and its students. What a school tolerates in student behavior is going to decide the reputation of the institution — a reputation that can make or break the school as well as the individual.

The University should also set standards to protect the students. When you leave this institution, its reputation becomes yours for the rest of your life. Thus, if this University receives a reputation for being "easy" or "a party school," it lessens the respect of your diploma.

The Mizzou NEWS staff wants value for their work. How about you?

Any Faulkners?

The Mizzou NEWS is making a new addition to the paper. Starting next month, we are including a literary column which will be written by students. Material in this column will include poetry, narratives, short stories, themes, and student editorials.

Anyone wishing to contribute to the paper can contact any member of the Mizzou NEWS staff. Everyone is invited to participate.

What Our Readers Have to Say...

Dear Editor,

A Fort of the Young Democrats' program of political action on campus, I would like to invite all candidates for Freshman Senate to introduce themselves and answer questions about the student Association at a special meeting to be held Monday, Nov. 2, at 7:30 p.m. in room 105 in the new classroom building.

Although this meeting is sponsored by the Young Democrats, we do not intend to endorse candidates, so all candidates regardless of political affiliations are welcome.

I would urge all freshmen to attend this meeting, so that they can meet their candidates and make an intelligent choice at the polls.

Sincerely,
Dave Depker, President
Young Democrats

Dear Editor,

At a second semester sophomore, for the fourth time I had to go through the ordeal of purchasing books at the University Book Store. I, for one, can state one particular incident which has stuck in my craw for some time. Last year a student purchased a paper back book marked $5.50. After removing the sticker containing this price, it was revealed that the book was new $7.50, and now it was a used book!

And what about when we sell our books back to the bookstore at mid-semester? It seems to be the seller gets half price on his books even if they have never been opened! Of course the students take what they are offered for lack of nothing else to do with the books. These books will turn up in the bookstore the following semester, naturally selling for the original price or maybe $5.00 cheaper. One must the students of this Institute be victimized by this con game?

Also, why was the bookstore moved to room 30 (quite small) this fall? After the television and newspaper coverage, and mockery, of literally hundreds of students standing in a line stretching over 100 yards, to buy their books it isn't necessary to state details here. Why couldn't the bookstore have opened, say a week earlier, making for more convenience for the dazed and bewildered students? I for one stood in line five and a half hours to get into the bookstore. But, perhaps there was an underlying reason for all this.

If the bookstore would have opened earlier, students would have had a chance to enter the store and browse around a little, even have time to decide if they wanted to pay the prices listed on the books or go to another book store. However, by opening up September 30, just four days before school began, every student flocked to the bookstore, afraid that the books be or she needed might be all gone because of the rush of students thinking along similar lines. By using this method, the bookstore needed nothing more than a "bouncer" to handle the door and guide the students in like hungry cattle to grab all the books they could find, like wonderful waving grass in the pasture.

Perhaps the bookstore and its staff actually think they're dealing with animals. For at least two years the policies and functions of the bookstore have been ridiculous. Someone must look into this facet before it is too late. It is quite obviously of no avail to anyone if students get a raw deal.

Rather, I would direct this letter to our student body president and the student body itself.

I speak not for myself alone but for the many students whom I have heard complain about the bookstore. Students have no authority here, but there are ways of action which can command authority. There is the thought that...

Dr. Reeves Heads Center To Solve Urban Problems

On July 1, 1965 a Center of Community and Metropolitan Studies was established at UMSL under the direction of Dr. Karl J. Reeves. This Center is one of several that have sprung up on the campuses of universities throughout the country within the last five years. Similar centers are located at Rutgers, Harvard, M.I.T., University of California at Berkeley, and U.C.L.A.

The purpose of the center is threefold: to aid in teaching; to promote research on community and metropolitan problems; and to aid the community by making its needs known to students and faculty available to local businesses and interested groups. Until the establishment of the Center there was no single institution in the St. Louis area which could provide information on what studies were available in the field of political science. The research carried on at the Center will be more readily available to teachers, researchers and community officials.

In line with its teaching function the Center hopes to stimulate the development of interdepartmental courses in urban studies. It will also provide research experience for both the faculty and the students, and it will provide the data available in the subject area.

One of the first projects of the Center will be the compiling of a reference file on the local governments including their ordinances, maps, budgets, and annual reports. This file will contain background information for teaching and research. To promote cooperation among groups, the Center is expected to lead to the publication of books and articles in the professional journals as well as to aid in solving local problems.

FALSE ALARM

Students Hound Dean for Stickers

Disappointment and surprise were again the order of the day concerning the parking situation. The first hour of business for the stickers which were advertised Tuesday for $2.50, were not even open to students looking up to buy them in Dean Eickhoff's office. The dean, who through some oversight overlooked the sale, dispersed the crowd, promising that stickers would be on sale Wednesday for $12.00.

Dr. Reeves, who has a joint appointment as Acting Director of the Center and as Associate Professor in distance education, is the establishment of guidelines for the future development of the Center. Working in co-operation with a faculty committee made up of Dr. George Wittertied, Dr. Tom Murray, and Dr. John Kramer, Dr. Lyle Dorsett and Mr. Virgil Sugg of the Extension Division, Dr. Reeves is attempting to develop a program which will meet the needs of the community and the University.

Although at present the staff is limited it's probable that in the future the program will be expanded to include other faculty members on part time appointments or possibly one or two full time staff members. The funds for the program are now provided by the state and in the future, hopefully, supplemented by federal and private grants.

Y.D.'s Gather;
Discus Plans

The Young Democrats had their first organizational meeting Oct. 11, in Room 208 of the new classroom building.

Leading the lists of topics was a social event the club plans to hold the last week in October. Further information about this may be obtained from any Young Demo­crat.

In other business, Dave Digerer explained the role of the club by saying that it would seek to encourage political interest on campus through a program including activities of interest to every student. Such activities will range from a comprehensive speaker's bureau to the influence of political action in campus politics.

The final order of business was to have each club member receive a check for his textbook expenses for the semester.

Chancellor, Others Greet Students At Orientation

"Everyone here has the ability to get a college degree," Dean Elickoff said, "but it will take plenty of work.

"No one will be lead by the hand," he said, "but the faculty will supply the goolge points." The Dean said that every member of the University staff will be available to help students, particularly his office, but he stressed that the students will have to let people know they need help.

Dean Elickhoff emphasized that students and faculty here are the pioneering elements of a potentially great University, "There's something exciting amid all the hardships, he said. There is an unmistakable enthusiasm everywhere.

"We have a young, promising faculty, many of whom came here because of the opportunity to try out their new ideas in teaching," Dr. Rieshoff said.

Dean Elickoff also warned against academic dishonesty and gave an explanation of University regulations.

Student Association President Alan Handler, another speaker on the Orientation Day program, gave a welcome and told new students how the S.A. was geared to assist them.

"The S.A. through its contact with faculty committees, faculty members and the administration is an effective force which can influence decision and policy to the benefit of the student body," he said.

Handler pointed out the need for a responsible student senate and student body. "This year can be a breakthrough for the S. A. or it can be otherwise." He warned that the results will depend on the response the students give," he said.

Other speakers included, Carl F. Burtman, Director of University Development and S.A. Vice President Wayne Embs, Secretary Sandy Blodgett, and Treasurer, Ralph Orlavik.

Purple Onion Opens Season Saturday Night

The first Purple Onion of the year is going to be Sat., Oct. 30 from 8 p.m. till midnight. The first two hours will be spent around a bonfire with entertainers performing. The final two hours will be devoted to dancing.

The Purple Onion started last year on the MU-St. Louis campus under the sponsorship of the student association. Student talent provides entertainment that ranges from folk singing to skits and instrumetals.

What is the most hectic thing about school? Mary Collins

More than one traffic problem exists on the campus. Although much has been done to control the traffic on the parking lot and surrounding streets, the problem of congested rest rooms goes on unabated. Perhaps if the Bel-Nor police were called in on the job, we'd see some action.

Gail Heidemann

The cafeteria is like a primitive madhouse. It is almost always some disorganization. The many problems of traffic, cafeteria, and study room will improve become greater when it gets colder and all students are forced inside. Our lack of room will then be much more prominent—and hectic! Ha Steve Owens

The lack of student facilities for parking and eating are the most hectic. The university is in dire need of a student union.

Mike Futeen

The most hectic problem of school is that of the cafeteria. Although I realize that this is a problem that cannot be remedied overnight, the slop on the tables and the cold, cross sandwiches make the hungry student think twice before he indulges. In this case, as in many, a small correction could temporarily subdue this problem. It is also necessary to help clean the slop off the tables and some small attempt at serving real, live, food.

Students Asked to Obey University’s Regulations

All students at the University of Missouri at St. Louis should be acquainted with the general rules and regulations of the University. Ignorance of these rules will not be considered an excuse for violation of these rules.

The four major regulations stressed by Dr. Harold Ellickson at an interview were those concerning drinking, smoking, academic dishonesty and loitering.

The possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages on University property is forbidden by state law. Violators of this law will be brought before the Student Affairs Committee for dismissal from the University. This rule will also apply at University sponsored, off-campus functions.

Smoking is permitted only in certain facilities on campus, including the cafeteria, the faculty offices, and in the halls of the new building.

No student is allowed to work full time. During vacations, students are required to maintain at least 1/2 of their course work load by a whistle-tooting Belnor policeman.

Under Work-Study Plan

The University of Missouri at St. Louis is participating in the college work-study program in cooperation with the federal government. Various jobs are available to students on campus including clerical jobs, library assistants, and maintenance work.

The students work 15 hours per week during the time they are in session. During vacations, they will be allowed to work full time.

Under this program, 90% of the students’ salary is paid by the federal government, the remaining 10% being paid by the university.

In order to be eligible for a job, the students must meet certain conditions. First, he must be a United States citizen, or intend to become a permanent resident.

Secondly, he must be from a low income family or no family at all and need the earnings to pursue further education. The economic criteria used in determining the low-income family is:

<tr>
<th>No. of Children</th>
<th>Maximum Income (Income is paid by the family)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td>$2300</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>$4000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>$5700</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>$7000</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>$8200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>$6200</td>
</tr>
</tbody>

Another requirement is that he be able, in the opinion of the university, to maintain a good scholastic record. Finally, he must be a full-time student.

Those feeling they qualify, and wanting to participate in the program, are urged to get application forms from the Admissions Office. The university is willing to interview any interested student.

The students are reminded to clean their tables in the cafeteria. Last year the Administration mentioned the possibility of closing the cafeteria if the change didn’t improve. Overcrowded conditions in the cafeteria this year add to the problem, and make the alternative solution harder.

Female students will be allowed to wear pants in the University if the weather requires that they do so for their comfort.

Dr. Eckhoff also states that the situation doesn’t deter the University from being responsible for the image of our campus projects, and should dress accordingly.

Dr. Jagan asserted in the 8:30 a.m. session that the Alliance For Progress was an arm of the CIA, created to oust pre-cia U.S. dictators in S. America. Mr. Berle retorted that the Marshall Plan, which they developed success has been attacked by the same people from the same point of view, but only because it thwarted Soviet designs on the territorial integrity of Western Europe. Dr. Jagan claimed the CIA had conspired in Chili to defeat a popular Marxist in his bid for the Presidency.

Mr. Vuhi concluded his appearance at the 1:30 session by asserting that the CIA will never recognize any representative other than the NLF. Other speakers on the live broadcast relayed radio-phonе from Canada included Top Cadet King (Cambodia), Don Ban Ang (S. The program on U.S. Foreign Policy was wound up Saturday evening with the appearance of two State Department officials in a series of three panel discussions and debates from 4:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Dr. Jagan and Mr. Berle participated along with representatives of Webster College, Washington U., Eden Seminary, Brooklyn College, and St. Louis U.

Professor Here To Head State Philosophy Assoc.

Dr. Edward B. Costello, Associate Professor of Philosophy was elected President of the Missouri State Philosophical Association.

The university hosted the eighth annual convention and dinner meeting of the Missouri State Philosophical Association Friday and Saturday, October 15 and 16. The educational society, the first to meet this year, was drawn by an interest in our new-ity-constructed, ultra-modern classroom halls.

The meeting included appearances by speakers from Washington University, Missouri, St. Louis University, and William Jewel College, representing a wide range of academic areas including "Human Equity in Existentialism," "The Philosophy of Mathematics," and "Some Problems in Contemporary Ethics."

Members of the Association swarmed the campus Friday afternoon for registration. Tour of the new building began as classes were in session. The new students were paled by the bright blue L.D. badges sported by the visitors. These signs were required. The students and the towns or universities they represented.

On Saturday, some students stayed at the Albert Pick Motel, where the annual dinner was held Friday evening. The banquet was titled "Does Analytic Ethics Rest on a Foundation of Relativism?" by Dr. Rose St. Svetolin, associate professor of philosophy at William Jewel College.

Chairman of the program committee for the Philosophy Association meeting was Edward B. Costello, associate professor of philosophy. More than one hundred faculty members and students in the field of philosophy attended the meeting.

Albee's "Virginia Woolf" Opens Gateway Season

As its first offering of the season, the Washington University Production of "Virginia Woolf" held at the Kirkwood Light Square is presenting what is the most talked about, if not the greatest, play of the year. In this decade, Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" has been called an American parable. It is the story of Martha, the smart and pesky daughter of a New England college president and his husband, George, the visiting professor, as they live in a middle-aged couple doomed because they live in a world of fantasy and the terrible struggle which they go through to fight the inevitable realities of life. They use their living room as the arena for their problems and they involve a young married couple as their audience. The three hours that follow make this play a study of hell incomparable with any of its kind.

On October 15, in a sold-out house, Edward Albee proves himself the master of the intense and emotional situation but he has also provided for "Virginia Woolf," some of the funniest dialogue ever written for a non-comedy drama, mostly in the form of groan-cutting insults and drunken behavior. "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" is Albee's first full-length play and at three hours is a long, but this play is consistently exciting, intense and emotionally stirring as well as giving at the Gateway Theatre promises to be a great season.

Writer Relates Thrills Of Theatre Opening Night

Lights flashing, chauffeur-driven limousines depositing elegantly coiffed and gloved women and handsome escorts in front of a brilliantly lit theatre marquee, representatives of the press arriving in their best attire - these are typical sights on opening night in New York, Hollywood, or any one of the major cities of the United States, but not in St. Louis.

Of those who attended the opening of Carusol, Monday, October 14, only two women were in formal evening attire. Presumably this was because they were passing out attractive samples of the new Coke perfume - Impren. That isn't to say that the people who did attend wore raggedy or patched clothes, but one would think that these people were already going to the movies on a Saturday night.

There was none of the glamour and excitement that one associates with the first opening night of the season. As the lights went down and the curtain went up, the orchestra played the overture to the well-known Rodgers and Hammerstein score, Carusol, the players stood in tableau till the music reached a certain note, and then the magic of the theatre caught up the audience.

The actors moved skillfully through their parts to bring to life again the story of the love between an attractive Catholic barrister and a pretty factory worker. John Raitt played the role of Biggie Biglow and Bessie Christy was a captivating Julie Jordan. Singing and dancing their way through two and a half hours the cast brought the audience to the New England coast to feel the excitement of the carnival, the boundless joy of love and a clambake, the heart-breaking sorrow of sudden and senseless death and finally a satisfying sense of peace and happiness.

The characters were well loved friends by the time the final curtain came down and the audience paid them the highest compliment of all by applauding for curtain call after curtain call.

Maybe the openings of the American Theatre of St. Louis don't compare to those in another city, as far as post-opening nights go, but the rapport between audience and actors is there. Maybe it costs a little more to go to the theatre than it does to see a movie, but it's a small enough price to pay for a little magic. (Ed. note: Lov. the brilliant Broadway comedy, opens Mon. Oct. 25 for a week run at the American.)

Philosophy Prof---Moonlighting Priest

by JENNIFER WARD

Missouz NEWS Staff Writer

With green eyes twinning, the tall, sandy-haired Dr. Donald Damhorst insisted there was nothing interesting about himself. That may be so, but most students who know him certainly don't agree.

Dr. Damhorst received his Bachelor of Arts degree and his Master's in Philosophy from the Catholic University in Washington, D.C. He then returned to St. Louis University to earn his Doctor's degree in Philosophy.

Dr. Damhorst isn't just an ordinary Ph.D., he is also a Roman Catholic priest. He is the Chaplain of Newman House, and taught at Washington University until last year. He was sent to University of Missouri at St. Louis, where he became a member of the faculty as a visiting associate professor. When asked if he was pleased with his teaching here, he replied, "I couldn't be happier!" He is also chair of the Philosophy Department at Webster College in Webster Groves Missouri.

Dr. Damhorst teaches a course in Modern philosophy which is mainly for upperclassmen. Second semester he will teach a course in symbolic logic, which will be open to the entire student body. His goal in teaching philosophy is to give his students an insight into the philosophical methods rather than just a gathering of historical facts. He tries to create a "living philosophy" one that deals with the problems of man today and the problems students face in their own lives.

In his opinion religion and philosophy are two different fields.

I was curious the other day about the strange state of affairs on campus. Thinking that there must be some sound reason for the way the first week of school went, I decided to talk to one of the architects who planned this community of scholars. I found him in his office, throwing darts at a topotypical map of the campus.

"Tell me, inscrutable genius," I said, "is this the way a human relaxes and relieves tension?"

"No, Shaft-sen," he said. "Am trying to find good places for students an early association with the campus purposely to give students an overall plan for the campus!"

"Ah so," he answered with a gleam in his eye. "We believe that a community of scholars should prepare students for future life. Therefore we have designed the campus purposely to give students an early association with the nether regions of its garment, From the nether regions of its garment, it produced a grubby, soiled paper proclaiming "Wall Corral."

"We're just trying to have you come, crazy," it said in a husky voice. "It would be a shame to break up the workers' union." It was dressed in a single garment down to its heels like a man's shirt made out of a flour- or meal-sack or may be a scrap of an old paper. From the nether regions of its garment, it produced a grubby, soiled paper proclaiming "Wall Corral."
