Letter from the Chancellor

Greetings,

I am pleased to announce that our University of Missouri-St. Louis community is taking action to improve communication with you through the new monthly newsletter, the Community Connection. This new communications tool will help us build a stronger relationship.

The newsletter will highlight university-community initiatives, future collaboration, and University events, and may include such things as job openings, and contracting opportunities. I hope this new tool will help you stay informed and involved with the University and the North County community.

I would like to thank Tom George, Chancellor, University of Missouri-St. Louis, for his leadership in organizing this new effort designed to help individuals enter the political arena and build meaningful connections.

The University of Missouri–St. Louis is open to more than just students and faculty. Community residents know about the many activities in which they can participate and benefit on campus. I also learned that good neighbor means being a good listener. A year ago we hosted a series of focus groups and I was encouraged to hear from our community residents about their needs and thoughts.

The University of Missouri–St. Louis is committed to working together to make North County a great place to live. As a university, we have a responsibility to work with our community and help it thrive. I hope this newsletter will help us achieve this goal.

Thank you.

Emily Davidson, Assistant Director of Marketing and Membership
