HISTORY MA

Research Track

The History M.A. program offers study in U.S. History, World History, History Education, Public History and Cultural Heritage, and Museum Studies. All students receive disciplined advanced work in preparation for doctoral programs or advanced training leading to teaching or other careers. Students select one of two options for completing the Master of Arts degree: thesis or research papers. The first path requires a substantial master's thesis; this path emphasizes depth of knowledge and research competence. The second path requires several research papers. This path emphasizes breadth of historical knowledge. Students should consult with the Director of Graduate Studies to be sure that they have properly selected their fields of study.

Career Outlook

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, employment of historians is projected to grow 3 percent from 2019 to 2029, about as fast as the average for all occupations.

Other areas that employ graduates with a History M.A., including teaching, project management, marketing and communication and other areas of business are expected to grow faster than average. Over the course of a career, professionals with a history background on average earn more and report higher job satisfaction than graduates from most any other field.
