Honors Freshman Composition: This course, the first in the Honors College writing sequence, is required and should be taken during freshman year. Through formal and informal writing assignments, discussion, instruction, and research, students will improve their critical reading, thinking, and writing skills, and their research techniques. The course is designed to help students meet the rigorous challenges of college writing across the disciplines by emphasizing intellectual inquiry, logic, style, correct and concise expression, and formal research and documentation. Students will write 4 to 5 formal papers, and informal reading and writing assignments will be required.

Nutrition: Concepts and Controversies: This course is designed to cover basic nutrition principles, the role of diet in disease processes, and nutrition across the life cycle. We will debate every other week while learning concepts in nutrition in between. The goal of this course is to teach you how to make healthy lifestyle choices, in addition to giving you the skills to research contradictory health information on your own. Examples of controversial topics that will be debated include:

- Genetically modified food
- Dairy vs non-dairy alternatives
- Organic vs non-organic
- Supplements
- The weight-loss industry
- Meat consumption
- Fad diets
- Chemical additives in food
- Food labeling
- The government’s role in our health
- Childhood obesity

This course does not fulfill the nutrition requirement for the College of Nursing. Nursing majors cannot enroll in this course.

Principles of Psychology in Popular Culture: Accio Psychology Book! The scientific field of psychology has many ideas that everyone can relate to. One way to make sure that we are all viewing these psychological phenomena through a relatively similar lens is to analyze their presentation in popular media. This course will specifically focus on characters, events, and themes from the Harry Potter universe. We will familiarize ourselves with Harry and others' experiences at Hogwarts to build empathy and be able to spot and analyze psychological themes such as developmental trends, prejudice, love, and mental illness apparent in the Harry Potter books and films. Readings will include chapters from The Psychology of Harry Potter. This class will be appropriate for students who are interested in complementing a traditional introductory psychology course with a deeper dive into specific topics within psychology and pop culture.

Cultural Traditions II: How have writers across the globe shaped the modern world? This course explores thinkers from Western and Non-Western cultures whose works in the last three centuries in fields like philosophy, politics, literature, art, and science transformed societies and shaped our contemporary understanding of what it means to be human. Western and Non-Western perspectives will be compared on topics such as reason, slavery, the natural world, colonialism, modernism, and globalization. While examining these transformative texts, students will also develop themselves as scholars and future professionals by exploring career choices, internships and research opportunities as they connect with members of the UMSL and Honors College community.

Honors American Politics: Whether we want to believe it or not, politics is a part of our lives, and we need to understand it. Whether your future is taking you into business, law, education, the arts, or the natural sciences, politics will touch your lives in many ways.

The purpose of this course is to introduce the fundamentals of American government and politics, particularly the major institutions and processes. Further, it aims to develop skills and abilities in analyzing and evaluating issues and public policies in American politics. On the one hand, this course wants to stimulate interest in American politics and impart tools that can be of use to all life-long students of politics. On the other hand, this course hopes to develop critical (that is, analytical) citizens, so that each of us will have examined reasons for the choices we make. While this class is not cross-listed, it will count as Intro to American Politics for SOME majors. Contact your advisor to inquire about this.

Japanese Pop Culture: Anime, manga, music, fashion: these are just a few of Japan's current exports. While many in the West recognize these flashy and colorful forms, few realize the true extent of the cultural influence these forms have had on American culture. In this course, we will examine how contemporary Japan is displayed and understood in various visual and literary arts. Rather than a synchdochized, fetishized generalization, we will examine social, ethical, and cultural issues that contribute to what Japan says about itself. (Same as Japan 2191-001).

Gender and Sexuality in India: India is the birthplace of the Kama Sutra, but has the reputation of being sexually conservative. Indian tradition includes a third gender called the hijra, but LGBTQ rights and public presence are still limited. Women can achieve high education levels and high-status jobs, yet women are still expected in many cases to give up that work to cater to husbands and children once they marry. In this class, we will explore the ways that gender and sexuality shape the Indian experience. We will use popular culture and scholarship as lenses for examining what role gender and sexuality have played in Indian history and culture today and in the past.

Storytelling: The Oral Tradition: Professionals incessantly upgrade their presentation skills with the “high-tech” of computer-driven screen and projection multi-media. Yet, cutting-edge technology still has not been able to recreate the effectiveness of the human face, expressions, voice and proximity in communicating knowledge and motivation. Technology’s best efforts are faint echoes of the thousands of years of face-to-face interaction, in which storytelling has always had an integral part. Storytelling is still the most powerful method of reaching any child, student, colleague or employee, and it is all based on some remarkably basic principles and practices. These keys are the focus of this course, as well as the transfer of those practices to a variety of practical arenas. Participants learn physical awareness, vocal and facial techniques, story adoption, visualization and telling techniques, as well as coping skills with hesitation towards public speaking. In addition, the course explores the extemporaneous creation of tales to apply immediately in classroom or boardroom situations for illustration and enrichment. The course requires participants to do light creative writing, reflective journaling, and offers many opportunities to perform. If one teaches, instructs or presents at any level, once one comes out from behind the screen and becomes the story, the concepts and principles come alive.

Honors Public Speaking: Honors Public Speaking acquaints students with principles of speaking before an audience. Theories and techniques of organization, evidence, persuasion and delivery are covered with emphasis on ethics and critical thinking. Applying speaking and listening skills to prepare for the workplace or community involvement are emphasized. Students will:

- Demonstrate ethics and integrity in public speaking, as a speaker and an audience member.
- Practice comprehensive and critical listening, and analysis of public speaking messages.
- Gain experience conducting audience analysis and research to compose relevant, logical public speaking messages.
- Effectively organize, construct, and deliver informative and persuasive messages in a variety of public speaking contexts.
- Exhibit proficiency in the verbal and nonverbal aspects of delivering a speech individually, in pairs, and in small groups. This interactive class is useful and suitable for all majors.

Introduction to American Cinema: This course provides an overview of American cinema from the early beginnings to the present day. Before Hollywood there was Fort Lee, New Jersey, where American cinema actually began! This course will also introduce students to Paris in the late nineteenth century, where photography and cinema were born. One of the most important figures of the silent era was Alice Guy Blaché. Virtually every textbook omits her from the history of cinema. Yet, she was the first to: experiment with sound and color; create the role of “director;” build and run her own film studio; and according to most film critics was the first person to make a “narrative” film. The course will focus on what it means to actually be an American film. Directors from D.W. Griffith to the present day will be covered. The course will discuss both the Hollywood studio system and today’s independent film movement. Elements of filmic language such as a shot, cinematography, and film noir will be considered. Genre, film theory, criticism and aesthetics will be discussed, as will topics including the invention of the motion picture, the studio system; the transition from silent film to “talkies;” westerns; film noir; musicals; indies and screwball comedies. Students will be introduced to the language of film in the age of mass communication. Most importantly, you will learn to become a more active and critical viewer. Grading will consist of two tests and two papers. Students will be expected to do research and use articles in film and communication journals.

Introducing Political Thought: Five Books You Should Read:

“Man is born free, and yet everywhere he is in chains.” - Rousseau-

How do we think about justice, government, rights, and freedom? This class will introduce you to how we think about all of these and more. We will do this by reading five books that are likely to be on any list of books you should have read if you are interested in politics. These are not necessarily the five most important books; any selection of books leaves off a lot more than it can include. In addition this selection is almost all white men (oddly enough all named John—Jean is just John in French) writing from a European or American perspective. Only Martha Nussbaum’s book focusses directly on issues of gender, poverty, and international justice. But these definitely make my list of books you should read. And they make that list because all of these books will surprise you. Each book was a radical departure from what was going on in political thought when it first appeared. Each was, and still is, a best-seller: widely read, discussed, and debated (often vehemently). And each has had a significant and lasting influence on how politics happens in our in the world today. (Same as Philosophy 3320).

John Locke, The Second Treatise of Civil Government
Jean Jacques Rousseau: The Social Contract
John Stuart Mill: On Liberty
John Rawls: A Theory of Justice

Actually, you do not have to be funny to take this creative writing class. You just need to be interested in comedy; willing to read and watch comedy; ready to discuss what makes something funny (or not); and interested and willing to learn how to write funny. The course will include a broad history of American comedy from Vaudeville to the present, practical advice and writing exercises from a variety of sources, including the founders of The Onion, an examination of various genres and examples (from old-time radio shows to contemporary stand-up, among others), and a whole bunch of fun (and funny) writing. Some of these writings will be submitted to Bellerive, Brain Stew, and other publications of your choosing. The teacher is very funny. Or his mom thinks he’s funny, at least. Also, poop jokes. We will look at classic experiments alongside the contemporary research to explain compliance, prejudice, self-esteem, close relationships and other topics. Knowledge of the discipline will be gained and assessed through a variety of in-class discussions, activities, and take-home assignments. Additionally, students will have the opportunity to examine a topic of their choosing in further depth and demonstrate their ability to “think like a social psychologist” through the creation of an evidence-based action plan to make the world a better place! Be the Change: Socially Just Leadership: Students will gain a basic understanding of major leadership theories, principles, and effective practices. The components and qualities of what is required in effective and exceptional leadership, such as communication, group behavior, problem solving and decision making, conflict management, ethics and values, will all be explored. For a leader, “you are your own best tool,” so the course will start with individual identity development and group identity development, before moving to examine social justice issues. Social justice pedagogy includes dialogue, critical thinking, and reflection on personal experiences and the experiences of others. Students will explore what it means to be a change agent and how to employ their leadership skills to “be the change.”

By the end of this course through self-reflection, class discussions, service projects, and graded assessments, students will be able to:

• Define and understand contemporary leadership theories and practices
• Define and understand diversity and social justice
• Describe the relationship of service to leadership
• Define personal values and establish group values
• Discuss ethical impacts of personal and group decisions as they relate to leadership
• Explore a social justice topic area and develop an action plan for educating peers

This course will explore this question along with a general survey of globalization by examining its political and economic components, pop cultures, transnational identities, and approaches to public health. For decades further economic globalization has been assumed to be a net positive by institutional actors in the post-World War II era, yet now we are seeing a rejection of this assumption from different political movements, both left and right, across the world. We will examine the forces driving the change in attitudes towards globalization in order to discover if they are the same across the world, and if not, how they differ across nations and demographics. Cinema Genres and Auteurs: This course will explore categories and classifications of cinema. Auteur is the French term for author. When applied to cinema it refers to a director with a body of work that creates a style or genre of its own. Students will utilize current research techniques to analyze the influence of styles and authorship of films on world culture. We will examine motion pictures as an art form, as an industry, and as a system of representation and communication. The course will explore how films work technically, artistically, and culturally to reinforce and challenge global norms.

Students will learn to view films as an: informed audience member, director, cinematographer, and/or film critic. You will learn the skills of film analysis regarding mise-en-scene; narrative and non-narrative cinema classifications; and the metaphorical application of genres such as horror, murder mystery and violence in motion pictures.

The genres and their auteurs will be presented in the context of the intellectual, artistic, and political events of their time. We will examine, for example, the evolution of violence in German expressionist cinema from the early 1920s and 1930s with such films as Nosferatu and Metropolis which later formed the blueprint for Nazi propaganda films. Genres will include silent films; German expressionism; American horror; Italian neorealism; film noir; musicals; black directors and indie films. Auteur directors will include Guy-Blaché, Griffith, Eisenstein, Chaplin, Truffaut, Welles, Hitchcock, Scorsese, and Spike Lee.

Cinema Genres and Auteurs will help you question the world you see on the movie screen and redefine your relationship to those images.

This class will examine Russian writing from the reign of Joseph Stalin (1928-1953) until the present day, including Russia’s invasion of Ukraine under Vladimir Putin. The readings will bring into focus issues of conformity, patriotism and, most important, the writer’s relationship to the authorities, notably in times of war. They may also provide insights to other countries and historical contexts.

While literary texts will constitute the primary course material, we will also explore together essays, film, the visual arts and music.
Through class discussion, specific exercises and written assignments students will refine critical skills such as careful observation, analysis of perspectives and effective communication.

History of Documentary Film: This course considers the history, theory, and criticism of nonfiction film and includes screening of representative documentaries. Beginning with the first films, the course will chart the evolution of the documentary from the early Lumière brothers to current independent films and electronic news gathering. We will examine multiple platforms charged with truth telling, while discussing current controversies regarding “alternate facts,” fake news, and propaganda. We’ll chart the global traditions that created more than 100 years of nonfiction cinema. Films include Nanook of the North (Flaherty, 1922), Shoah (Lanzmann, 1987), and such pseudo documentaries as Triumph of the Will (Riefenstahl, 1935). The course will also cover the genre of the political documentary with such films as Michael Moore’s Roger and Me as well as a number of “conservative” films made in reaction.

Honors 3010 will examine how documentary differs from fiction films; how nonfiction films interpret and archive the past; how powerful influences shape our perception of truth through motion pictures; and how nascent technologies play a role in determining our perspectives on visual media. The writings of such media critics as Noam Chomsky, Herbert Schiller and Robert McChesney will provide a systems approach to the analysis of mass communication and the role of the documentary in it.

Where We Live: History Can Make a Difference: Join us as we expand the classroom walls in this community engagement course. Florissant and the Missouri History Museum will serve as our clients as we engage in projects that address a community-identified need so that we can make a positive impact to the surrounding area. In consultation with community leaders, you may create projects that exhibit civic pride, engage on the historical past, or help in community-building. This course will also cover urban studies and the built environment over time in order to understand how the city impacts our daily lives. We will discuss urban elements of race, economics, class, politics, crime, and spatial geography to see how these elements apply to the St. Louis area and beyond. The class will conclude with a final Nazi Germany and the Holocaust in American Memory: This course provides a systematic introduction not to the history of Nazi Germany and the Holocaust as such, but these events’ perception and discussion in the United States from the beginning of World War II to the current day. This class will therefore delve into the striking evolution of Holocaust consciousness in the United States since the end of World War II. The class will try to elucidate how Americans have tried to understand this inexplicable disaster, and how they came to use the Holocaust as a way to gain meaning for their own past. As such we will delve into questions such as: When was the term “Holocaust” used for the first time and why did it eventually become the dominant one in the western world? What role have trials, such as the ones at Nuremberg immediately after the war, the Eichmann trial in Israel in the early 1960s, and the cases of John Demjanjuk and David Irving in the 1980s and beyond, played in the formation of an American understanding of the Nazi era and the Holocaust? How did Hollywood movies and popular TV shows, ranging from The Great Dictator, Hogan Heroes, to Schindler’s List, reflect the way Americans understood this topic? In what ways have Americans commemorated and memorialized the time period and its crimes? We will look at these issues by reading and discussing fictional and non-fictional sources, and by watching pertinent movies and episodes of TV shows. Extensive previous knowledge of the history of Nazi Germany and the Holocaust is not necessary. (Same as History 3000-001).

Writing in the Sciences: As a science or nursing major, are you frustrated by the requirement to take an upper-level writing course focused on traditional composition concepts and a series of modal essays? Would you like an alternative that is more appropriate to your future academic and career needs? Are you interested in a writing course that will help you develop successful strategies and techniques for effective communication in your field? In this course, we will concentrate on the particular types of writing encountered by students and professionals in scientific fields. Our course text covers relevant aspects, forms, and techniques associated with writing in the sciences—including identification, summary, synthesis, evaluation, and appropriate citation and documentation. We will also examine contemporary published writing that models these aspects, forms, and techniques. Emphasis will be placed on precision, clarity, accuracy, and professionalism. Formal and informal assignments will include routine forms, lab notes, abstracts, reports, presentations, and proposals. These assignments will culminate in a semester project that offers students an opportunity to investigate interesting, relevant, contemporary issues and topics within their major. Near the end of the semester, students will present their projects to local community leaders. Come make a difference! (Same as History 4142).

Honors Business Writing: This course concentrates on the types of writing required of students and professionals in business and related fields. Students will develop skills and learn strategies for writing effectively in the workplace. The course will stress particular writing forms including employment and workplace communications, correspondence, analyses, reports, proposals and presentations. Coursework will include a major project suited to the specific area of study of each student enrolled in the class. Instruction will include appropriate form and conventions, correct documentation of sources, synthesis techniques of research information, technology-based research skills, and effective use of technology and standard software programs used in the workplace, including Microsoft Word, Excel, and PowerPoint. In addition to individual work, students will develop and practice skills and techniques for effective collaboration. Emphasis is placed on professionalism, clarity, precision, presentation, format, style, and tone. Formal assignments, including one large project and several informal papers, will be required for this challenging course. Business Writing fulfills the University junior level composition requirement, subject to the approval of the student’s major department.

Writing the City: Through informal and formal writing assignments, discussion, instruction and research, students will improve their critical thinking, research, discussion and writing skills. The course is designed to help students meet the challenges of college writing and intellectual inquiry and does so by focusing on the city of St. Louis and the specific fields of study of those enrolled in the course. Issues such as depth and development of content, voice, style, tone, correct expression, and research techniques are among the many topics emphasized in this class. Students will write journals and a minimum of 4 to 5 papers. have the opportunity to apply course concepts in an oral presentation developed from their semester project. Writing in the Sciences fulfills the University junior level composition requirement, subject to the approval of the student’s major department.

Independent Writing Portfolio: This course is designed to help students document their accomplishments while attending the Honors College and prepare texts that will help them achieve goals after college. Students taking Honors 4100 will choose either a one or two-hour option and can decide to focus primarily on job-seeking goals or graduate admissions plans. All students will complete a minimum of four writing projects, including master resumes, career resumes, CVs, personal statements for graduate school admissions and self-reflections on past writing projects. Together with an instructor, students select the assignments and agree upon a schedule for completing them. All students who enroll in 4100, even if waitlisted, will be able to take the course. We will open additional section(s) as needed, depending on enrollment. All waitlisted students will be moved into an open new section the week before classes begin. We cannot promise that you can take the instructor you signed up for.
