Students petitioning

Library hours extension sought

Lacey Burnette

After a few weeks of experience with the new hours we will be reviewing them. We realize that we are hitting the evening college students the hardest.--Library Director Ronald Krash, September, 1981.

It's the evening college students that are getting ripped off.--Political Science Academy President Tony Calandro.

When school opened for the Fall, 1981 semester, the library began closing its doors earlier. The trickle down from Governor Christopher S. Bond's 10 percent statewide budget reductions in June resulted in a reduction in funding for the libraries, causing Krash to cut back the library hours.

The Political Science Academy, in conjunction with the Evening College Council, is petitioning to have the library open until 11pm, Monday through Thursday. The library currently closes at 9:30pm on those days.

"For a lot of evening college students this is the only place to study," Calandro said. "Many evening students are married and have families and just need someplace quiet to go."

Calandro said that his main interest in reopening the library is to provide a place for students to study. He said that it is not necessary for the library to provide services after 9:30pm, just to be open. He added that a guard at the door and a person at the circulation desk would probably be sufficient.

The petitioning groups started gathering signatures Monday evening and will continue collecting them until early next week, Calandro said. The organizations are collecting signatures only during the evenings because they feel the evening students have been most affected by the cutbacks.

Tonight they will be gathering signatures in Clark Hall, Lucas Hall, and the Social Sciences Building. Next Monday they will be in Benton Hall, Stadler Hall, and on the Marillac Campus.

Calandro said that the groups have submitted petition forms to evening classes at the beginning of the hour, and then picked them up after class is over. They have also been canvassing the cafeteria and tried to collect signatures in the library, but were told to leave.

Calandro said that they have finished collecting signatures, they will submit the list to vice-chancellor for Administrative Services Arthur C. MacKinney. He said that he hopes the petitioning will persuade MacKinney to allow the library enough funds to maintain later hours.

The petition states: "We, the Evening College Students, ask Dr. Krash, Chancellor Grobman, and all parties concerned, to reconsider the present library hours so that the hours may be more equitable for 24 percent of the student body."

Calandro said that about 800 signatures were gathered last Monday. The groups have not set a goal for total signatures.

Four professors trade phones for expenses

Lacey Burnette

What do David C. Carkeet, Jane Flinn, Lauren Lepow and Eugene Murray all have in common? Perhaps that is an unfair question, a question to which the answer may only be known to an English major. All four are English professors at UMSL. But there is something more that these four professors have in common — they have voluntarily relinquished their office phones so that they could have additional money for instructional purposes.

The professors had their phones removed in October after English Department Chairperson Charles H. Larson distributed a memo seeking individuals willing to give up their phones in return for extra money for instruction. Professors who agreed to have their phones taken out would be allotted about an extra $110 for expenses. The cost of each phone is $18 per month.

"Our situation is similar to the situation in the speech department," Larson said. "Our expenses budget is disastrously low and the phones are extremely expensive."

Earlier this semester, 12 of the 17 phones in the speech department were removed to meet the department's expenses and equipment budget. In addition to the four professors' phones in the English department, two phones have been removed from offices that currently are not occupied.

Telephone calls to the phoneless professors are now handled by the central office in the English department. A secretary takes a message from the caller and then leaves the message for the professor. The professor then returns the call, using a central office phone.

"There have been no problems that I know of," Murray said. "The way things are made it possible for students to contact us." Both Carkeet and Lepow agreed that they have not had trouble with the student communications.

SWAP finds jobs for students

Deborah Suchart

The Student Work Assignment Program (SWAP) is a job-locator and placement service for students currently enrolled, or between sessions, at the University of Missouri-St. Louis. The SWAP program office is in 209 Woods Hall and is open Monday through Friday from 8am-5pm. Robert A. Powell, Coordinator of Student Job Development, heads the program.

The program is set up to place students in jobs based on either academic major, work experience or area of interest. A special effort is made to locate jobs related to students' acaademic majors.

Once a job comes in, it is recorded in the files and listed according to category. Then it is placed on the bulletin board outside the Financial Aid office, 209 Woods Hall. After a student inquires about a position seen on the bulletin board, the student is given an application form to complete. An appointment is then set. "We prefer to work on appointments when possible so we can sit down and decide what will best suit the student's needs," Powell said.

Applications are filed according to academic major, then pulled later when appropriate jobs come in. It is important, however, that the students keep in touch and continue to look on the bulletin board.

Powell sees the program as a means of keeping students in school who might otherwise have to drop out. "We see this as a viable program when we consider that grants, loans, and work-study programs are being cut. The SWAP program is probably in line with President Reagan's thinking. I'm not saying that I agree with it, but it is giving some of the responsibility back to the community from which the students come. St. Louis ranks sixth in the nation as a location for corporate world headquarters, so there is a lot of

'Black Concern' hearings to be held next week

A Chancellor's committee on black concerns on campus will hold open hearings next Wednesday and Thursday in room 331 SSB, the McDonnell Conference Room. The hearings will be conducted on Wednesday from 9-11am and Thursday from 2-4pm.

Committee chairperson Everett E. Nance said, "The hearings are being held to give faculty, staff, and students an opportunity to voice the concerns of black students on campus." At a later date the committee will survey all of the students on campus to assess the conditions of black students on campus, according to Nance.

The students on the committee are Cedric R. Anderson, Cheryl D. Morgan and Yates W. Sanders.

In addition to Nance, who is director of the Midwest Community Education Development Center, the other faculty and staff members on the committee are: Bai P. Akridge, an assistant professor in political science; Harry H. Bash, an assistant professor in sociology; Howard Benoit, director of the Center for Academic Development; Brenda M. Shannon, admissions counselor; Marilyn Sneed, a counselor in Student Affairs; and Glenn White, an assistant professor in Behavioral Studies.

Air traffic controller to speak

Dennis Sheehan, an air traffic controller and local spokesperson for the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization (PATCO) will speak tomorrow in room 126 J.C. Penney Building at noon.

Sheehan will discuss the reasons for the air traffic controller strike, the current conditions of the air transportation system, and the prospects for the 12,000 controllers. The talk is being sponsored by the Political Science Academy.

Trachtenberg to lecture on American photographer

Yale University Professor Alan Trachtenberg will lecture on "The Art of Document: Vision and Form in Walker Evans' American Photographs" Nov. 18 at UMSL in the J.C. Penney Auditorium. The lecture, to begin at noon, is part of the Humanities Lecture Series sponsored by the College of Arts and Sciences.

Trachtenberg has authored eight books on American literature and culture and has been affiliated with the American Studies Program at Yale since 1970. He has received an American Council of Learned Societies Fellowship, a National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowship, and he was an exchange lecturer at Leningrad University in 1977.

Smith elected president

Wendell L. Smith, dean of Continuing Education-Extension at UMSL has been elected president of the Adult Education Association (AEA). He will serve as the head of the Washington-based professional group for 1982.

AEA, a national association with 2,800 members, represents adult education at college campuses, libraries, public schools, private trade schools, and military bases. Smith was installed at the organization's annual meeting, held Oct. 26 through Nov. 1 in Anaheim, Calif.

As dean of Continuing Education-Extension at UMSL, Smith directs all noncredit courses, off-campus and on-campus off-schedule credit courses, and acts as problem-solver for grants and contracts. Under his direction, the continuing education program has grown to encompass 578 noncredit short courses and seminars, 93 credit courses, and 27 grants, serving 70,000 clients annually.

Smith served in numerous leadership positions in AEA before his election as president, including chairperson of the 1980 National Adult Education Conference, national secretary, and member of the Steering and Executive committees. He has received the AEA National Leadership and Meritorious Service awards.

Biology night to be held

Hundreds of St. Louis-area life sciences students and their teachers will attend the 10th Annual Biology Honor Student Night at UMSL on Thursday, Nov. 19.

The four-hour program, from 6-10pm, includes biology workshops to be led by UMSL biology department faculty and graduate students. Last year, about 60 local teachers and nearly 400 students attended the session; approximately the same number is expected this year.

After a brief slide show of the campus, Charles R. Granger, biology department chairperson, will give the orientation. Theresa Thiel, an assistant professor of biology at UMSL, will give a lecture entitled "Industrial Microbiology: A Frontier in Science," from 6:30-7:30pm.

A multi-media presentation, "True Stories From Dr. Seuss," will be given from 7:30-7:45pm. The presentation uses real life scenes in conjunction with stories by the children's author.

Participants will then be assigned to one of the ten biology action workshops: exploring human physiology, preparing and looking at giant salivary chromosomes, insect collecting, behavior as an adaptation, developing and testing strategies of energy use, an introduction to the transmission electron microscope, enzyme studies from the supermarket, plant behaviors and responses to a variety of stimuli, ecological and evolutionary questions in field botany, and corn and other endangered species. Participant size in each of the two-hour workshops varies; those attending are asked to list their first five choices and preference will be given to early registrants.

Those who wish to attend may register until Nov. 13. There is no fee for the program. Additional information about the program can be obtained by calling 553-6226.

Damron named coordinator

Renee Damron has been named senior education coordinator for Continuing-Education-Extension at UMSL, including programs at Lindbergh High School and in the St. Charles area.

Damron has a masters degree in secondary education administration, with an emphasis in adult and continuing education. Prior to joining UMSL, Damron was the coordinator of the Cooperative Education Program at St. Louis Community College at Florissant Valley. She also was a special coordinator of program development and research related to adult and continuing education at Florissant Valley.

Board approves BSPA degree

UMSL will offer a new undergraduate political science degree beginning with the Winter, 1982 semester. The Bachelor of Science in Public Administration (BSPA) degree program has recently been approved by the Missouri Coordinating Board for Higher Education.

UMSL will be the only university in the St. Louis area to offer the degree; Maryville College had offered the degree, but officials there said the program has been dropped, according to a staff report to the Missouri Coordinating Board for Higher Education.

The staff report cited the many strengths of the UMSL degree program, but questioned the availability of positions in public administration because of job cutbacks and hiring freezes in government. The report concluded that because of the uncertainty of the job market for this degree, the university should monitor the success of graduates so that prospective students can be advised on employment possibilities.

BSPA Program Coordinator Andrew D. Glassberg, an UMSL associate professor of political science, said in a letter to local public service officials that the program "has been designed in consultation with personnel officers from the federal, state, and local levels."

"In times of stringent budgets, it becomes increasingly important to insure that public sector personnel are as skilled as possible in the efficient performance of their duties, and we hope our new BSPA program will make a contribution to this goal," Glassberg added.

Three new courses have been added to the political science curriculum to fulfill the degree requirements. The three courses are Political Science 244-Public Budgeting, Political Science 342-Public Personnel Management, and Political Science 348-Program Evaluation. All three courses will be offered next semester. The political science department suggests that students wishing to obtain a BSPA degree within a year and a half schedule all three classes next semester because the classes will not be offered every semester.

Additional information about the BSPA degree can be obtained by contacting the political science department at 553-5521.

money here." Powell said. He believes the community has been very receptive to the program.

Powell says that the average job pays $3.50 to $3.75 per hour. Some positions are salaried, some are salary plus commission and some are commission only.

The jobs are varied. They include positions for service representatives, appliance salespeople, secretaries, receptionists, laboratory technicians, insurance investigators, management trainees, computer programmers and layout artists. Companies range from small family stores to large retail stores and corporations.

Students who have participated in the program are pleased with it. Janet Zander, a chemistry major at UMSL, recently began work at Monsanto as a lab technician. "I want to go into research and this job is on the order of that," she said. "I like the program because it helps you get a job in the line of work you are interested in," she added.

Patrick Camp, a business and accounting major, replied to a SWAP listing he saw on the bulletin board. He is now working as an insurance investigator and underwriter. "The company asked that I work at least 25 to 30 hours a week to make it worthwhile to train me, but they have been very accommodating as to how I fit those hours in," he said. "I think that Mr. Powell and his office do a fine job. From my experience with their office and for the job that I got, I give them high marks," Camp said.

SWAP is also viewed as a recruitment and retention program. "Students tend to stay in school if they can identify in some way with the university," Powell said. A student who had been working at Monsanto did a good job, so when they were looking for somebody else, they called the SWAP office back," Powell said. "Students are helping the school and this is their program."

In addition to its regular placement activities, SWAP runs a summer employment fair in April. "We have hosted the fair for the last two years and have done relatively well with placing students as a result," Powell said. He added that it has been a one-day fair, but may be extended to two days in the future.

SWAP also invites several companies to do on-campus interviews for seasonal help during the holidays. The time and place of these interviews is posted on bulletin boards throughout the campus.

One of the new projects that has been started is a Students for Hire listing, which consists of a capsule resume of each student. The list is sent to all the larger companies, and the SWAP office gets in touch with students when they receive a call from the company.

Powell believes that if we work together as a university we have a lot to offer. "In spite of the economy, SWAP is functioning well," he said. "We have been able to maintain it at about the same level as before. This speaks very well of the students we have at UMSL."

Wednesday last day to drop classes

Next Wednesday, Nov. 18, is the last day to drop a course or withdraw from school. Students cannot receive an incidental fee refund for dropping a course after this date, but some of the parking fee can still be refunded.

Students who withdraw from classes between now and the 18th will either receive an "excused" grade or a grade of "F". "Excused" grades are given if the student is passing the course. After the 18th, an excused grade will be given only in an exceptional instance and only with the approval of the instructor and dean.

Students who stop attending classes without withdrawing officially from the university are issued an "F" or the temporary "Y" grade. A "Y" grade is given when an instructor has no basis for evaluating a student. A "Y" grade can be changed to an "excused" grade after the student can demonstrate sufficient reason for not having completed the requirements of the course.

If a "Y" grade is not changed to an "excused" grade after a two-semester waiting period, it will be changed to an "F." Students can contact their deans' office for additional information about dropping a course.

Forensics team attends tourney

Barb DePalma

The UMSL Forensics team attended its fourth tournament this semester Oct. 24-26 at Western Kentucky University.

The tournament was held solely for debate teams and UMSL was represented by two teams consisting of Vicky Coddington/Bob Franey and Vicki Vasileff/Greg Button. The team of Coddington and Franey advanced into the quarter finals. Franey also placed fifth out of six in the category of individual speaker.

In a debate, the team either wins or loses, but each member receives points as an individual speaker.

"Bob (Franey) did really well considering it was his first collegiate state tournament," said Marsha Littell, director of the Forensics team. "Even though they did not win an award, Vicki (Vasileff) and Greg (Button) won almost one-half of the rounds they were in."

This year's Forensics team consists of: Greg Button, Hari

Campbell, Vicky Coddington, Jeff Forest, Bob Franey, Mary Hilliard, Rick Jackoway, Mary Kleiber, John Light, Jacqui Poor, Patricia Saughn, Paul Schmidt, Vicki Vasileff and Derrick Williams. Jackoway is the only member who returned from last year's team.

The team also attended a tournament on Oct. 16-18 at Milliken University. This tournament included individual events such as impromptu speaking, informative speaking, interpretation of prose and poetry, persuasive speaking and extemporaneous speaking.

Franey received a sixth place award in persuasive speaking and Forest won fourth place in informative speaking.

The tournament consists of three preliminary rounds. Each person completes three times against approximately five other people in their category. One judge evaluates about six people. The points are then accumulated and the people who accumulate the most points in the individual events are then placed into the finals. The first, second and third place winners are then chosen from these six people. The three winners in the finals are the winners over all other competitors in the tournament.

The team receives funding for the tournaments it attends from a combination of funds allocated from student activity fees and from Arts and Sciences. Approximately nine dollars a day is allocated to pay for incidentals such as transportation and food. Anything extra is paid for by the participants.

"It is more important to make people informed on what forensics is," said Jackoway. "Then we can work on the club aspect. It would have been hard to elect officers this year because no one had ever attended a tournament."

The Forensics team will attend a tournament Nov. 20-22 at Bradley University in Peoria, Ill. and another on Dec. 4-6 at Butler University in Indianapolis, Ind. They will also be hosting a high school speech tournament at UMSL in January.

Dancers to highlight International Week

Next week will be the Third Annual International Week at UMSL. Programs have been scheduled for every day of the week and include belly dancing, folk singing, cultural displays and hot-coal walking. The week is being sponsored by the International Students and the University Programming Board.

Monday—University Center, Belly Dancing and Egyptian Cane Dancing, 11:30am-1:30pm.

Tuesday—University Center, Cassaan Dance Company and African Dances, 11:30am-1:30pm.

Wednesday—Cultural Displays in J.C. Penney, from 10am-2pm and Native Dress.

Thursday—University Center, West Indian Extravaganza, 11:30am-1:30pm.

Friday—University Center, French Canadian Folk Singer and Japanese Musician, 11:30am-1:30pm.

A snow job

Repaving of lots needed

Well, here it is—a new year and the same old story. Winter's bad weather is just around the corner and the surface parking lots have yet to be repaved. The Marillac parking lots are still gravel surfaces and the open parking lot on the main campus is patchy, at best.

But yet we have a master plan that tells us how to straighten out our roadways, pave our parking lots and where to put them. How could we fail? Everything is listed for us in black and white.

The university has spent a lot of money on this master plan, but all we have to show for the trouble are new concrete panels on our parking garages, the University of Missouri Board of Curators' approval to build a walkway from garage #2 to the J.C. Penney Building and a new house.

UMSL apparently did not heed the advice of the woolly worm lady, otherwise it would have prepared better for the heavy snowfall that has been predicted for this year. Of course UMSL does own nice expensive snow plows, but it will be a little different to plow the snow from gravel surfaces. If the snow crews aren't careful, they could plow up the entire parking lot. But then maybe that would force the university to actually do something.

However, even without the bother of snow, the gravel surfaces (complete with chuckholes) are a pain to drive across. Being a pedestrian along these so-called parking lots isn't the greatest either, especially when a car drives by leaving a trail of dust behind.

The administration is lucky. They have nice paved lots in front of Woods Hall and in front of Marillac. In fact, on the Marillac campus the only paved lots are those which include faculty, staff parking. How convenient.

It is quite visible that the lots desperately need repaving. Surely the master plan doesn't call for a new building, roadway or garage on every open lot. So why keep putting it off?

In the summer when the sun is out and the temperatures soar past the 90 degree mark, it is difficult to think about cold temperatures and snow, but someone should have planned ahead. If the woolly worm lady's predictions are true, a lot of UMSL students may be shoveling their own parking spots.

Or, we can always choose the easiest snow removal technique of all—wait 'til April.

Perry responds to letter concerning parking fees

[Editor's note: This letter was forwarded to the Current for publication after being sent to Ms. T. Bruce, Oct. 30.]

Dear Ms. Bruce:

This is in response to your letter of October 28 regarding parking fees. I want to point out several things.

1. Persons attending short courses and conferences in the J. C. Penney Building pay parking fees of $.50 per day for the number of days the course extends.
2. Funds collected from parking fees are used for operation of the parking lots, including the payment of several police officers, and to maintain the parking structures and lots. A contract has been issued to build a walkway from the top of parking structure #2 to the University Center/J.C. Penney Building as well as other improvements to the parking structure.

3. You are eligible to receive a prorated refund on your parking permit by turning it in to the UMSL Police office and applying for a partial refund.

Sincerely,
John Perry

Business not as usual in air

Dear Editor:

"I'll be home for Christmas" will not be quite the same this year unless the PATCO strike is quickly ended! Anyone who believes that the striking air traffic controllers are not missed should pay a visit to Lambert-St. Louis International Airport as I recently did. They will discover that there it is not business as usual. Those who fly will also find things do not go as smoothly as before the strike, such as making connecting flights, their baggage arriving at the same time they do, etc.

Speaking of Christmas, how about President Ronald Reagan and PATCO president Robert E. Poli considering those words of The Lord's Prayer which tell us "And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors."

Elmer N. Stuetzer

'Wednesday Noon Live' — round 5 or final round?

Dear Editor:

The "controversy" over Wednesday Noon Live began in the Oct. 1st edition of the Current when Patricia Harkins wrote that "as a commuter campus, UMSL does not need or want entertainment." I pointed out in the Oct. 8th issue of the Current that this statement, in addition to being untrue, was disrespectful to working commuters who desire and enjoy entertainment as much as anyone. I also mentioned that contrary to Harkins' opinion, Ron Edwards does an extraordinary job of providing this campus with a quality music program.

my letter, Ms. Harkins acknowledged the quality of Wednesday Noon Live and modified her position to "entertainment on campus should be a low priority," all the while maintaining that I "did nothing to diminish the validity" of her argument.

A letter signed by 46 students in the Oct. 22nd issue of the Current underscored in no uncertain terms that, in receiving only 4% of the total Student Activities budget, entertain is, indeed, considered a low priority, especially in relation to the demand for such fare. This letter and the very fact that Wednesday Noon Live is funded (underfunded in light of demand) is further proof against the notion that UMSL does not need or want entertainment. The percentage of the student populace which actually watches WNL remains a moot point until

In the Oct. 15th issue, Ms. Harkins termed my letter a "scathing personal attack." The portion of my letter that could be seen as "personal" was in fact offered in response to Ms. Harkins' remark that Ron Edwards was "tooting his own horn." Nevertheless, because of survey techniques on either side of the question have improved. Judging from the rest of the evidence, however, I would hazard to say that percentage is significant enough to warrant further funding of the program.

Finally, in the last issue of the Current, Monica Lamb throws up her hands at the rhetoric of this entire exchange. While I agree that the multi-authored letter of Oct. 22nd was a bit vitronic, the signing students had their hearts in the right place. If Ms. Harkins still believes that UMSL does not need or want entertainment, then the "controversy" is in her own mind. WNL is not forced upon students. It is offered in response to a demand and received eagerly. If, however, Ms.

Harkins continues with her more moderate point of view that entertainment should be a low priority, then there was no need to start this mess in the first place: the signing students have pointed out that this is indeed the case.

All this considered, Ms. Lamb should blame the excessive rhetoric on the Current for extending the debate beyond printing the first two letters. Had Ms. Harkins not continued to insist on a non-existent point, the students of the Oct. 22nd letter would not have felt compelled to respond as emphatically as they did. Ms. Harkins' original points were overstated to the point where she was dead wrong. I corrected her. It should have ended there.

Sincerely,
Kenn Thomas

Response to Nov. 5 letter on photographer and paper's lack of coverage

Dear Editor:

This is in response to a letter from Michael Trent Johnson.

I believe that Mr. Johnson should learn the meaning of the word research. He obviously didn't when he wrote his letter last week.

If he would have looked into this matter, he would have found out that:

1. Ms. Sharon Kubatzky is a very good photographer. However, even the best photographer can make a mistake. I would like to see Mr. Johnson do as good a job as

2. Not all stories can be covered in a 16-page paper. Many of the Current's reporters are writing two, three, or more stories an issue. A lot of them have other jobs besides. Sometimes they just can't cover every story. If they started taking requests, somebody would complain about not covering the Frog-Jumping contest held by the I Eta Pi fraternity.

3. He obviously is using the incident just to have a pity fit because he thinks he is being discriminated against. I don't know how many minority writers there are on the Current staff, but I can tell you this, they (the editors) aren't refusing applications from anyone. If Mr. Johnson wishes to try and do something about this 'issue,' why doesn't he join the Current staff?

Photographer states case in her defense

Dear Editor:

This is in response to the Nov. 5 letter from Michael Trent Johnson, Associated Black Collegian.

First of all, Mr. Johnson, let's get some facts straight. The phrasing of your letter suggests that I said "Tests have proven the Negroid race is not photogenic." I have never made such a statement. You really should acknowledge your source.

I did not take the photo of Tim Murphy. That photo was taken by Bill Lyons and should have been credited to him.

You seem to know something about photography. If you do, you'll know that nothing in photography is faultless. In this case, mistakes occurred in all three phases: shooting, developing and printing. Dr. King was standing in front of a black curtain. The lighting in the room was poor and without a flash (which I did not have) the situation was difficult at best. I felt I did the best I could with what I had to work with. The result was a bad picture. If I could have, I would have reshoot the assignment. However, that was impossible.

Whether or not a story ran was not up to me. I shot the assignment I was given.

You seem to be bitter about the fact I placed 3rd in the UMSL Photo Contest. I'm sorry that bothers you but there was definitely nothing "racist" about my winning photo.

TKEs roll keg for charity

You've probably heard of all those crazy things people do to generate money—rock-a-thons, swim-a-thons, paint-a-thons. But the TKEs recently went one step further and held their own Keg Roll, a kind of roll-a-thon.

The fraternity brothers rolled a keg from Kiener Plaza, downtown, to the UMSL campus. The roll took about two hours to complete.

The members of Tau Kappa Epsilon collected pledges for the number of miles they rolled the keg; contributors pledged a certain amount of money per mile. The total amount has not yet been tallied, according to Chuck Manganelli, organizer of the Keg Roll.

All proceeds will go to St. Jude's Children Research Hospital, located in Memphis, Tennessee.

$189.9 million recommended for UM system

The Missouri Coordinating Board for Higher Education has recommended a general operations appropriation of $189.8 million in 1982-83 for the University of Missouri. The amount is $9.7 million dollars less than the university is seeking. Generally, the Governor's request to the General Assembly has coincided with the Board's recommendation.

The university has requested an appropriation of $199.5 million, an increase of $29.3 million over this year's allocation. However, this year's funding totaled only $153 million because of 10 percent statewide budget cuts enacted by Governor Christopher S. Bond in June. The cuts were made to balance the state budget, according to Bond.

More than two-thirds of the requested increase is for inflation adjustment. Of the $29 million, $20 million is earmarked for inflation adjustment, $3 million for compensation improvements, and $6 million for program requirements.

Bond will make his recommendation to the General Assembly after it convenes in January.

Phones

Murray will be using the extra money to defray some of the expenses for attending a professional convention. "I felt the money could be used in a better way," he said.

Both Carkeet and Lepow will use the money to pay for extra copying they will be doing. Both teach writing courses and make copies of students' papers for workshopping in class. "There had been some discussion about cutting back on workshopping, to work some way other than workshopping," Lepow said. She said that she will continue to workshop students' papers and use the additional money to pay for copying.

Flinn said that she has not had any complaints from students about her not having a phone, but her husband has complained. Flinn said that she gives her home phone number to all her students. Flinn will use the additional money to help pay for a trip to the National Council of Teachers of English, in Boston.

"I feel that that is more important than having a phone," Flinn said.

Freshman awarded army ROTC scholarship

Student on the road to anticipated military career

Terri Ederer

Too good to be true—that pretty well describes a full three-year scholarship, with books, paper, pencils and a $100 per month! That is exactly what Robert Graham just received from Army ROTC.

Graham, an UMSL freshman, was selected on the basis of his scholastic achievement, extra-curricular activities and, finally, an interview by a board composed of a cadet military officer and ROTC faculty members. In order to receive the scholarship for the full three years, he must maintain a satisfactory academic standing, take one hour of ROTC in his freshman and sophomore years, and three hours in each of the other two years. He must agree to serve four years in the army after graduation.

Graham is not the first in his family to be involved in the ROTC scholarship program. Two of his older brothers are currently serving as officers in the army as a result of the program.

What next? "Well, I plan to graduate with a major in administration of justice," Graham said "and then go on to Airborne and Ranger school after that. I plan to make a career out of the Army."

Graham is the sixth UMSL student to receive the ROTC scholarship. He graduated from Hazelwood West with no ROTC credits.

"It isn't necessary," said Director of ROTC, Major Robert Christiansen. "You can come in with no military experience at all. What is important is the ability and the desire."

Graham seems to have plenty of both.

Upon graduation, he has two possibilities. He can begin his army career as a 2nd lieutenant, or continue his studies, if he is eligible, with a fellowship to the school of his choice.

What advice does he have for future scholarship hopefuls? "You have to work for it," he said. "Take part, lead when you are called upon to lead, and follow when you have to follow. Just never stop trying 'til you reach your goal."

Scholarships will be offered again in January. All students are eligible to apply for one to four year scholarships. Applying for a scholarship does not incur any obligations on the student according to Christiansen.

Applications are available in the Army ROTC office, 355 Education Office Building. For more information call Christiansen at 553-5172.

Students sing in harmony under direction of Vantine and Hylton

Shawn Foppe

You are walking down the second floor hall of the Music Building and hear strains of people singing "Hodie Christus Natus Est." It is the UMSL Chamber Ensemble and the words are Latin for "Christ is Born Today." The UMSL Chamber Ensemble is under the direction of John Hylton and Bruce Vantine, music instructors for UMSL.

Hylton teaches sight singing, a conducting lab, and student teachers. He conducts the University Chorus in addition to co-conducting the Ensemble. This is Hylton's second year at UMSL. He holds a B.S. in Music Education from Gettysburg College, and a M.S. and D.Ed. from Penn State University.

His chorus consists of 80 singers, a tremendous increase from last year's enrollment of 35. University Chorus is a non-credit course and most of the members are from the community although approximately 15 are from UMSL's campus.

Besides his interests in music, Hylton enjoys jogging and is interested in Civil War history. He was once employed by the National Park Service in Gettysburg.

This also is Vantine's second year at UMSL. He teaches music composition, orchestration, advanced choral conducting, applied voice and conducts the University Singers in addition to co-conducting the Chamber Ensemble with Hylton. Vantine holds a B.S. in music from Concordia College, a masters in Music from Michigan State University, and is near completion on his doctoral degree from the University of Illinois.

He conducts the University Singers, a select group of 40, all of whom had to audition to be chosen. The Singers will be going on tour in April for four days in Missouri, Arkansas and Tennessee. They will be performing at universities, schools and churches. They also will record with a top record company in Tennessee.

In addition to his work, Vantine finds time to play golf, racquetball, and write songs—two of which will be performed by the University Singers and the UMSL Chamber Ensemble. The Singers will perform "Dusty Feet," a secular song from Robert Louis Stevenson's "A Child's Garden of Verses." The Ensemble will perform "Brothers in Eternal Cold," a song taken from themes in the Bible, Time Magazine, and writings by Archibald MacLeish.

According to Vantine, "The piece dramatically expresses the need for mankind to abandon its present course toward nuclear destruction and to work toward reconciliation and peace among its peoples."

These two groups have been asked to perform on Nov. 25 for the "Arts and Older Adults" during a special breakfast downtown.

All three groups will perform on Dec. 6 at the Florissant Valley Christian Church and on Dec. 8 in the J.C. Penney Auditorium. They will present a seasonal program of various Christmas carols and other songs. The highlight of the University Chorus' presentation will be Vivadli's "Gloria." The highlight of the University Singers and the UMSL Chamber Ensemble will be the premiere of Vantine's work.

Kammergild Chamber Orchestra to play in Penney

The Kammergild Chamber Orchestra will present its second concert of the 1981-82 season on Sunday, Nov. 15, at 8pm in the J.C. Penney Auditorium.

The Kammergild is the UMSL orchestra-in-residence. Lazar Gosman is the music director.

The program, conducted as usual from the first chair by Gosman, will include a 20th century chamber orchestra work, Concerto de Camera for Flute, English Horn and Strings by Arthur Honegger, and an exuberant piece from the classical period by Rossini, Sonata for Strings. A symphony for string orchestra written by Felix Mendelssohn when he was in his teens will complete the concert.

Guest soloists for the Honegger piece will be Jan Smith, flute, and Marc Gordon, English horn. Jan Smith is a graduate for the Eastman School of Music where she received her Performers Certificate while studying with Joseph Mariano. A former member of the Quebec Symphony and the Boston Pops Orchestra, Smith joined the St. Louis Symphony in 1968 as assistant principal flute. She also has performed as a soloist with the symphony.

Marc Gordon has played English horn with the St. Louis Symphony for the past ten years. Previously, he performed with the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra and the Lyric Opera Orchestra in Chicago. Gordon has appeared with the St. Louis Symphony as a soloist, and with the Rarely Performed Music Ensemble and the St. Louis Symphony Chamber Music Series.

Single tickets are $8. For ticket information and reservations call 553-5991 or contact the Kammergild Chamber Orchestra in 318 Music Building.

Dean of Student Affairs settles in new role

Laura Dyer

Just a few weeks ago, St. Louis became the new home of Lowe S. (Sandy) MacLean as UMSL got a new dean of Student Affairs. MacLean arrived at UMSL Oct. 19.

"I am very, very impressed with UMSL," MacLean said. "It has a strong academic program, strong faculty, excellent leadership and a variety of student organizations functioning very well." His main interest is in student leadership and developing student training programs.

MacLean said he has three basic goals. The first is to "provide leaders for St. Louis, the state, and the nation - in that order." He said he wants to see programs developed that prepare students for their own organizations and government. He also wants to "help students find satisfactory employment related to their educational objectives." Enriching students' academic, social and cultural lives and promoting and increasing their development outside of the classroom are two more of MacLean's goals.

Working on a commuter campus is not a new experience for MacLean. At Eastern Michigan University, where he was dean of Students and associate vice-president for Student Affairs, he dealt with about 19,000 students, 4,000 of whom lived on campus. MacLean said he does not see the commuter student as a major problem but realizes that students sometimes view it as more of a problem than it really is. He said commuter students simply have different needs. MacLean is quick to point out that commuter students are not a phenomenon and notes that there are, in fact, more commuter students overall than residential students.

"It is closer to life. Life is not living in a dorm or fraternity or sorority house. Commuting students are a parallel to life," MacLean commented. He said it disturbs him that commuter students sometimes see themselves as second class and apologize for their status when no apology is necessary. He added that commuter campuses will continue to grow in the future.

Although he's only been on the job a few weeks, MacLean has already become an interested, participating member of UMSL's campus and said he enjoys it. "I like the people, the institution, and the programs, and I'm proud and pleased to be here."

MacLean considered coming to UMSL because he wanted a chief Student Affairs position where he would be the one in charge. He also said he was already familiar with the University of Missouri system, (having taught at UMC), and with the city of St. Louis. MacLean also preferred to work at a state institution in a large city, because he tends to favor metropolitan areas. The position of dean of Student Affairs at UMSL allowed him to satisfy all three objectives.

The dean of Student Affairs oversees a large number of departments on campus. He is also an ex-officio member on the Student Activities Budget Committee.

MacLean attended three universities during his college years. He earned his B.A. in sociology from Northern Michigan University in 1956. In 1960, he received an M.S. from Michigan State University with a major in guidance and counseling. He obtained his Ed.D. in 1967 from Indiana University where he majored in higher education with minors in educational research and psychology. MacLean is married and has two sons. His wife is a teacher. His family is still in Ypsilanti, but plan to join him in St. Louis after the first semester.

Lazar Gosman night scheduled

Local music lovers will have a chance to share in the reminiscences of a renowned violinist's life in the Soviet Union when UMSL presents "An Evening with Lazar Gosman" on Nov. 23.

Gosman, artist-in-residence at UMSL, was assistant concertmaster of the Leningrad Philharmonic before he left Russia with his family in 1977. His program will begin at 8pm in 205 Music Building. Admission is free.

The "Evening" will include some recorded musical excerpts and video tape passages as well as Gosman's reflections. Gosman was born and reared in Russia and played with the Leningrad Philharmonic for 27 years.

Never content with merely working in a symphony orchestra, Gosman founded the Leningrad Chamber Orchestra in 1962. After his emigration, he started the Soviet Emigre Orchestra in 1978 with the help of flutist David Barg. The orchestra is making an east coast tour.

Gosman's reflections upon musical life in Russia will include comments about his friends, the late composer Dmitri Shostakovich, violinist David Oistrakh, cellist-conductor Mstislav Rostropovich (now director of the National Symphony Orchestra in Washington, D.C.), and the late British composer Benjamin Britten, among others.

This is the second year Gosman has held an evening of musical remembrances. He welcomes informal conversation with the audience following his presentation.

In addition to his duties at UMSL—which include being musical director of the Kammergild, UMSL's orchestra-in-residence—Gosman is associate concertmaster of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

Health center offers services to students

Shawn Foppe

The purpose of the student health service, according to Phyllis Lee, an RN and coordinator of the service, "is to promote positive physical health." It is a free service to UMSL students.

The center is located in room 127 in Woods Hall and is open from 8:00am-9:30pm, Monday through Thursday, and 8am-5pm on Friday. The service is one of the few offices on campus that remains open through lunch to facilitate the needs of those who must use their lunch time to visit the office.

In September, the center saw 175 students and 35 faculty and staff members, including work-study students. The center administered 22 allergy shots to students in September. In October it treated many students with virus-related illnesses and some who had possibly been exposed to mononucleosis or hepatitis.

The center offers vision and hearing tests. It also tests students for mono, VD, pregnancy and hernias. It administers pap tests, tetanus boosters and removes sutures. Health service personnel also counsel students about contraception and abortion, and refers them to the proper physicians, clinics, or health agencies if necessary.

The center is staffed by a consulting doctor, an LPN, and two RNs.

Among the many things the center does is promote positive health and preventive medicine. The center sponsored a hypertension screening earlier this year. As a result of the screening, students who show signs of high blood pressure are working with Lee, watching their diets and having weekly blood pressure check-ups.

In addition to the hypertension screenings, the center holds health fairs in the spring in Mark Twain. The fair offers many varied testings for the students.

The center also offers special services to many classes. At the beginning of each semester, Lee gives TB skin tests to education students working in the child development center and she administers tetanus boosters to archeology students before they go on field trips.

The center is alerted to all emergency cases on campus. If there is an accident, someone from the service is available to assist. If necessary, they can also arrange emergency transportation to a nearby hospital.

Student health insurance is handled through their office also. Students can have their claims filled out there. In addition, policy holders, or any student, can take a physical in their office.

The office also handles all handicapped parking requests.

So the next time you have an ache or pain, stop by the student health service before you pay to see the doctor.

Baxter on stage Nov. 21

Renowned Academy-award winning actress Anne Baxter will give a one-person show, "Fairy Tales Are Not Just For Children," at UMSL, Nov. 21.

The veteran actress will review her life and work during the performance, which starts at 8:15pm in the J.C. Penney Auditorium. Baxter wrote the dialogue for this show. As she reminisces about her career, excerpts from her film will be seen in the background.

The performance will conclude with a question and answer session with the audience.

PLACEMENT OFFICE TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 17

Ars Nova Trio to perform

The Ars Nova Trio will present a concert of music ranging from Aaron Copland to Scott Joplin on Nov. 16 at UMSL. The concert will begin at 8pm in the Education Auditorium on the Marillac campus, and is open to the public without charge.

The Ars Nova Trio, whose members are Warren Bellis, assistant professor of music at UMSL, on saxophone, Robert Souza, of CASA and St. Louis University, on trumpet, and Susan Wells-Souza, of CASA, on piano, was formed in the Fall of 1979. They have previously performed at the St. Louis Conservatory, St. Louis University, Jefferson Community College and with the Young Audience Series.

For their Nov. 16 concert, the Trio will play "Quiet City" by Copland, "Concerto by Hertzl," "Solitudes for Music" by Washburn, "Paragon Rag" by Scott Joplin, and "A Dingy Slowdown Rag" by Hoffman.

For more information, call UMSL Music Department at 553-5980.

Bellis conducts concert pleasing to large crowd

Daniel C. Flanakin

There was a warm round of applause for Warren Bellis as he walked on stage. And he deserved it. This was an unusually large crowd for a music department concert and the audience knew that when Bellis walked on stage, there was good music in store.

Bellis led the University Concert Band through the paces of an exciting concert last Sunday in the Marillac Education Auditorium. As always, Bellis chose a good program with a lot of variety.

The band opened its program with Giuseppe Verdi's "Overture to Nabucco," which was transcribed for band by Lucien Cailliet. There was some nice melodic work by the woodwind section (especially the oboe player, Linda Westerfield) and the brass section (led by trumpeters Steve Driskell and Kurt Schmid) showed a lot of control on the long notes of the opening pianissimo section.

The program also included James Hook's "Suite for Band"

(which was originally written for guitar and was transcribed for band by William A. Schaefer), Frank Erickson's "Richard Rodgers: A Symphonic Portrait," Russell Alexander's "March from Tropic to Tropic," and Jim Curnow's "Collage for Band" (a collection of five different miniatures). The band also played David Shire's "With You I'm Born Again" (the first of five contemporary tunes that Charles Hicks, assistant professor of Music, is arranging for wind groups); and Robert Russell Bennett's "Suite of Old American Dances."

The best of these were the Erickson and the Bennett. Erickson is a composer/arranger and, according to Bellis, "He has taken a collection of music from a selection of Richard Rodgers musicals and scored them into a very nice arrangement."

And a very good arrangement it is, indeed. The band itself was powerful when need be, but unequivocally graceful even more often. The band's performance was equal to the combined genius of Rodgers and Erickson. Bennett's "Suite of Old American Dances," which concluded the program, was his first, and probably his best, published work. Bellis said, "Robert Russell Bennett is a name that is not very well-known name, but it is terribly well-heard. He has scored over 300 Broadway shows."

A Bellis band is always a well-rehearsed group, and this group is no exception. This fact really stood out in the Bennett piece, especially the "Cake Walk" movement. The intricate rhythms, the delicate phrasings, and the extreme dynamics were superb.

Throughout the evening, the band's intonation was good and the balance was fairly good, although the large number of trumpets and trombones had an occasional tendency to overpower the rest of the band.

It was an enjoyable evening. But one would not have expected anything less than an enjoyable concert on this evening. Bellis is not the kind of director who will walk on stage and not lead a good concert.

LIVE PERFORMANCE? Pianist Robert Guralnik will bring Chopin to life in the upcoming performance of "Chopin Lives" Nov. 18 in the J.C. Penney Auditorium [photo courtesy of Bill Fegan Attractions].

Chopin brought to life by Guralnik's interpretation

Pianist Robert Guralnik will present his interpretation of the life and work of composer Frederic Chopin at UMSL, Nov. 18.

"Chopin Lives," a program tentatively including 16 of the Polish composer's works for solo piano, will be presented in the J.C. Penney Auditorium at 8pm. Advance tickets are $4.50 for the general public, $3.50 for UMSL faculty and staff, and $2 for UMSL students. Tickets are 50 cents higher for each category at the door.

Guralnik performed in the conventional concert manner for more than a decade until he approached Harold Guskin, a New York theater director, with the idea of augmenting performances of Chopin's music with a dramatic portrayal of the composer. Since 1974, Guralnik has toured the United States with his one-man show.

Dressed as Chopin might have been during his heyday in Paris (1810-1848), Guralnik gives the impression of being the guest of honor at a Parisian baron's mansion. While playing mazurkas, waltzes, etudes, nocturnes, and preludes composed by Chopin, Guralnik speaks as Chopin might have about his music and why he composes, his formative years in Poland, his rivalry with Franz Liszt, and women.

Guralnik believes that musicians have to find new ways to present themselves and their music. He also has developed "Tonight: Franz Liszt."

Rivermen lose to St. Louis U.; finish at 12-4

Ronn Tipton

The UMSL Mens' Soccer team finished their regular season with a 3-1 loss to their arch rival, the St. Louis University Billikens, in the annual St. Louis cup game. The loss was the sixth in a row to SLU, who has beaten the Rivermen more times than any other team in UMSL history except Quincy College. SLU raised their series record with UMSL to 10-2-2.

The game was fairly well dominated by SLU, especially early in the first half. Head Coach Don Dallas stated, "They dominated the game for the first 25 minutes of the first half, but for the last 20 we played them pretty even."

SLU scored first, on a goal by their leading scorer John Hayes. The goal came at 25:26 in the first half and was assisted by Dan Fernandez.

The Billikens next scored at 53:43 when Jim Kavanaugh passed to John Hayes who scored his second goal of the night. The play resulted after a Billiken shot hit the crossbar of the Rivermen goal. Hayes has now scored two or more goals in a game six times this season.

The SLU nemesis continued at 84:21 when the Billikens' Dan Weaver scored his first goal of the season to put the Billikens up 3-0. His goal was unassisted.

After the Billikens third and final goal, everything looked like SLU's goalie Pat Baker would get his sixth shut-out of the season. However, on a goal kick, Baker set the ball on the ground instead of drop kicking it.

When he went to kick the ball, he had found that UMSL's Pat McVey already had stolen it and was ready to take a shot on goal. The shot was good, breaking the shut-out and giving the Rivermen their only goal of the night, only 29 seconds after Weaver had scored for SLU.

When asked about the teams' inability to score, Dallas replied, "Man for man, they beat us. We just played a superior team, that's all. When you play a team as good as they are, you're not going to score a lot of goals against them."

SLU has proven themselves hard to beat, though. Especially at home. They are 6-0-2 at home and have outscored their opponents 17-5 at Francis Field.

They have played six games in overtime and have won four of them. They beat SIU-Edwardsville and Quincy, both teams the Rivermen lost to.

The Rivermen could have pulled off a victory, but they failed to score, just like they have been doing the past few games. "I really don't think that we are made up to be a high scoring outfit, but besides that, when you play somebody like SLU, you only get four or five chances to score so you try to scrap for the goals."

The Rivermen had their chances for the goals, but Dave Houlihan and Scott Moser had two great chances they couldn't connect on. The first was a blast towards the goal, but Baker stopped the rocket. On the second chance, Moser had an open net, but the shot was low and Baker was able to bearly grab the ball for the save.

Of course SLU also had their chances that they couldn't capitalize on. One SLU player had a breakaway about 31 minutes into the game but failed to score due to a brilliant sliding tackle by Rivermen back Gary Phelps.

Another chance was taken away by midback Tony Pusateri who cleared the ball when it was dangerously near the goal mouth while UMSL goalie Ken Bayless was recovering from a save he had just made.

In between all of the action, the main pastime of the players, referees, and press photographers was falling down. This was due to the extremely wet and muddy condition of the field. Players were falling left and right, but coach Dallas thought it didn't interfere with the game too much. "It happened to both teams, so we just had to get used to it."

The game wasn't too rough because of this either. Both teams committed fouls, but not a single yellow card was issued during the contest.

The Rivermen's record dropped to 12-4 while SLU's raised to 11-2-4. To make matters worse, the kickers dropped in the national rankings for the second week in a row. They are now fourth in the nation behind Cal. State-L.A., Tampa, and Cheyney State.

Dallas has been saying all season long that the rankings don't really count, the playoffs do.

Soccer seniors bid farewell; look forward to future goals

Jim Schnurbusch

In most sporting events, the last game of any players career is one that holds many reflections of the seasons past. Three members of the soccer Rivermen are experiencing their last moments as members of a college soccer team. Mike Bess, Pat McVey and Tim Murphy all played their last regular season soccer game in a Rivermen uniform last Tuesday night.

But rather than looking back, the threesome is looking ahead to what the future holds for each of them.

The immediate future holds NCAA playoff competition; beyond that, their careers are a mystery.

Both Bess and Murphy are finishing their fourth year as members of the Rivermen squad—a fourth year that will go down in the record books of UMSL intercollegiate athletics.

Bess, a forward, has scored more goals—21—in his career at UMSL than any other player, including All-American Dan Munsenfechter.

Murphy on the other hand, is a mid-fielder who has set UMSL's season and career assists mark with 11 and 14 respectively.

McVey came to UMSL two years ago via St. Louis Community College at Florissant Valley. Splitting his time as a mid-fielder and forward, he has contributed to the team with his leadership.

"Pat McVey has great leadership abilities and he has really blended in," said Rivermen coach Don Dallas.

Feelings among these three players were optimistic going into last Tuesday night's game against St. Louis University. Not only were they optimistic in terms of the competition, but they had a tone of achieved optimism because of the mere fact this would be the last regular season game each of these three would be playing.

"Playing SLU is a great way to end a career," explained Bess. "I wanted to beat them at least once."

McVey would like to keep playing for the Rivermen this year until they reach the final victory—the National Championship. "Last year couldn't have been better except for the National Championship. This year, I feel we have a good chance at making it although we were skeptical at the beginning of the year."

Murphy looks back and puts the last game against SLU into perspective. "It went by so fast. I remember my first game at UMSL was against SLU and now my last game was against SLU. I wish we would beat them."

Soccer has been a way of life with Bess, Murphy and McVey. Bess began playing in grade school as did McVey. Murphy began playing before grade school when he was only four years old.

"My dad started a team and I started playing," said Murphy. "I continued into kindergarten and then just kept playing."

The obvious jump from grade school to high school was easy enough for both McVey and Bess, but for Murphy, his soccer career was sidelined for a year.

"When I was a freshman at DuBourg, I didn't make the freshmen team—I got cut."

According to Murphy, the reason he got cut from the team is because of one mistake he made in practice, a mistake that he said has made him work harder at soccer.

Bess was a teammate of Murphy's at DuBourg. There, they were members of the Co-State Champion high school soccer team.

According to Dallas, both Bess and Murphy are players that everyone would like to have on their team.

"They are good friends both on and off the field," explained Dallas. "They both played on the Kutis Collegiate team every winter which meant a lot to their game. You just won't find two better boys."

Besides the love for the game, it takes something special to keep playing soccer competitively for nearly 20 years.

McVey and Murphy echoed the same sentiments about their longevity in soccer.

"People: Everyone I've played with has been great," said McVey.

Murphy too feels thankful for the bonds he has tied through soccer. "The friends and people are the most important part. It's not whether you win or lose."

UMSL gains No. 2 seed in regionals

The UMSL men's soccer team has received the No. 2 seed in the Midwest-Mideast regional playoffs and will meet an opponent yet to be determined in the regional championship game.

The Rivermen will face the No. 1 seeded team, either Lock Haven or Cheyney St., next weekend to determine which team will represent the Midwest-Mideast region in the final four national tournament.

Lock Haven and Cheyney St. squared off yesterday for the Pennsylvania State championship and the No. 1 seed in the playoffs.

UMSL will have to play on the road only if Lock Haven wins, because Cheyney St. has decided it will not play at home. If Cheyney St. wins, the game will probably be played here next Saturday, Nov. 21.

"They're both good teams," said UMSL coach Don Dallas. "It really doesn't matter who we play because we have to beat the best teams in the nation anyway."

UMSL played Lock Haven in the regional championship game last year and lost 2-1. The Bald Eagles went on to capture the Division II national championship.

This marks the 10th consecutive year UMSL has advanced to post-season play and the fourth straight year the Rivermen have been in the regional championship game. The last time UMSL went to the final four national tournament was in 1976, when it finished fourth.

"We're happy to be in the playoffs again," said Dallas. "It doesn't matter that we didn't get the No. 1 seed, either. We're in the playoffs and that's all that matters."

Women spikers conclude season

Jim Schnurbusch

The women's volleyball season came to a close last weekend as they lost three hard fought matches in the post-season tournament at Central Missouri State University in Warrensburg, MO.

The spikers opened play against the two teams in their pool, Northwest Missouri State, a team who brought an astounding 43-10 record into the tourney, and Central Missouri State University, the ultimate winners of the tourney.

Coach Cindy Rech felt that being placed in the same pool with these two powerhouse teams could have worked to her team's advantage if things went right. Things didn't go right.

The women put their .500 record up against NEMO in their first game last Friday night. Although the women played well, they couldn't overcome the team from Maryville and lost in two games, 14-16 and 11-15.

The team's next opponent was CMS, a team that UMSL had beaten earlier in the season. CMS, powered by a strong serving game, beat the Riverwomen in straight games, 3-15 and 12-15.

Up to this point in the tournament, the spikers were still somewhat optimistic about the rest of the tourney.

"By losing those two matches, it put us third in our pool," said Rech.

But in the other pool, where Southeast Missouri State, Northeast Missouri State and Harris-Stowe were playing, things turned for the worse for the Riverwomen.

The favored NEMO team lost to SEMO, a team that UMSL had handled earlier in the season and hopefully would get a chance to handle in the post-season tourney.

Unfortunately for the women, SEMO upset NEMO and won the pool, forcing the Riverwomen to play NEMO, a team that had a mysterious mastery over the UMSL spikers all year. In fact, five of the 15 regular season losses came at the hands of the team from Kirksville.

"We knew what we had to do against them," explained Rech, referring to their match against NEMO. The squad played tough throughout the match, winning the first game 15-4, losing the second game 6-15 and finally, losing the third 11-15. Rech points out that the third game was a neck and neck affair.

"We played tough the whole match. But in the third game, the score bounced from 9-9, 10-10 until they finally won the last points for the match."

One bright spot in the women's trip to Warrensburg is that two players from the UMSL squad were selected to the tournament's All-Star team. The two UMSL spikers named were Sue Drurrer and Janet Taylor.

"I am extremely pleased about them getting picked for the team," explained Rech. "They both played well."

Now that the season is over, Rech must look forward to next year. With only one senior on this year's team, the women should strengthen their squad by another year of experience playing together and the addition of new members from both the junior college and high school level.

There isn't an UMSL chicken, but there is an Angus Smoke

In the past few years, the professional sports scene has been stricken by an epidemic of chickens, birds and fanatics who are paid by certain organizations to stir up enthusiasm amidst the home crowd. As ridiculous as it sounds, it often works.

But in college athletics, a team mascot as outrageous as those seen in the pros is almost non-existent. And with the exception of a visit this fall by "BudBird" during the UMSL Budweiser soccer tournaments, UMSL has never had a wild "mascot" or "superfan" to speak of.

Unknown to most people, though, UMSL really does have a superfan. His name is Angus Smoke, a 43-year old custodian at UMSL. And watching sports, not mopping floors, is his main interest.

"I love sports," he said as he watched a recent UMSL women's soccer game. "I've been a fan of UMSL sports, especially soccer, ever since I've been here."

Smoke, who has worked at UMSL for 10 years, is an American Indian of the Mohawk tribe, and has always been an active participant in athletic activities.

"Sports has always been the most interesting thing in my life," he said. "When I was younger, athletics was important to me because it kept me part of a group. It also helped me to get recognized and accepted by others."

Smoke was a pretty fair athlete at one time. He attended Haskell Indian Institute in Lawrence, Kan. from 1953 to 1957 and was an all-conference football player. A sprinter in high school, Smoke was once timed at 10.2 seconds in the 100-yard dash.

Another sport Smoke participated in during his high school days was basketball. But ironically, the one sport he never got a chance to play is soccer.

"I didn't see soccer until I came to St. Louis," he said. "When I first saw a soccer game, I saw some of the things that applied to basketball. It really caught my fancy, especially since St. Louis is a soccer city."

Since then, Smoke's infatuation with soccer has become stronger. He has season tickets at Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville and seldom missed a major soccer game in the St. Louis area.

Although he supports other teams and schools, Smoke still has a warm spot in his heart for UMSL. In the last decade, he has only missed about two home UMSL soccer games.

"I'm almost always here," he said. "I'm not the rah-rah type of fan, but I do get involved in the games."

kuchno's korner

"I love all sports," said Smoke. "When I come to an UMSL game with my radio, I've got my mind on both games. I still enjoy both of them, though."

To say Smoke is a diehard UMSL fan would be like saying Jim Hanifan is a frustrated football coach. Once, when the UMSL soccer team travelled to Colorado last year for a couple of games, Smoke showed up to cheer the Rivermen on to victory.

"My mother was in Colorado Springs at the time and I wanted to visit her," explained Smoke. "So, I drove up there to see her and watch UMSL play."

Smoke took a special interest in last year's team. He felt it was as good a team as UMSL has put on the field in its history, including the 1973 team that captured the NCAA Division II national championship.

"I thought for sure they would go all the way," said Smoke. "I had made plans at the beginning of the season to go to Miami and watch them play in the national tournament. Unfortunately, they didn't make it."

UMSL lost in the championship game of the Midwest-Mideast regional tournament in 1980 to Lock Haven 2-1. The Rivermen will be in the regional title game again this year and Smoke thinks they have a chance to go pretty far.

"They have a good team," he said. "The Eastern Illinois game (a 1-0 loss against the nation's fifth-rated team), convinced me that they're pretty good."

The only negative aspect of coming to watch UMSL sports for Smoke is the lack of student support.

"I realize UMSL is a non-residential campus," he said. "But I'm still sorry to see so few people attend the games."

Perhaps if UMSL had a few more fans like Angus Smoke, apathy would not be a problem.

Dominic Barczewski: Riverman turned Cosmo

Jeff Kuchno

The status of American players in the North American Soccer League has been a major controversy in sports the past few years. Former UMSL stand-out centerback Dominic Barczewski had a chance to gather some first-hand knowledge about the problem over the summer.

Barczewski, a two-time All-American and four-time All-Midwest selection at UMSL, was drafted by the New York Cosmos last winter and invited to their tryout camp in the Bahamas. He made the team, but saw action in only one game during the regular season.

"It was frustrating not getting a chance to play, but I can understand it," he said. "The Cosmos have a lot of talent, maybe too much talent."

Barczewski cited the cases of Dave Brcic, a former All-American goalkeeper at St. Louis U., and Larry Hulcer, another St. Louis U. alumnus. Both players rode the bench all season.

"Brcic is one of the best young American goalkeepers in the game and Larry [Hulcer] is one of the best American players in the league," said Barczewski. "Their talent is being wasted."

"The Cosmos have a lot of talent, maybe too much talent."

— Dominic Barczewski

Hennes Weisweiler, the Cosmos coach, has been criticized for his refusal to play certain American players, but Barczewski believes Weisweiler would give the Americans a chance if he could.

"He's not anti-American," said Barczewski. "He just likes to go with a set lineup every game. He doesn't think much about substituting."

Barczewski played an entire exhibition game in Vancouver and then saw about 15 to 20 minutes of playing time during a regular season match against Tulsa when the starting center-back, Jeff Durgan, was injured and had to leave. With those two exceptions, Barczewski spent most of his time on game day in the press box, where he was joined by Hulcer and several other teammates.

And then, a few days later,

HEADS UP: Dominic Barczewski shows the form that made him an All-American at UMSL.

Barczewski was introduced to world-renowned players like Gorgio Chinaglia and Johan Neeskens. He'll never forget the feeling he got after meeting soccer's superstars.

"We had 25 guys on the team and you can only dress 15," explained Barczewski. "It's hard to learn when you don't get in the games."

But despite the frustration of watching instead of playing, Barczewski admitted many of his experiences last year are worth remembering.

For instance, Barczewski recalls the three weeks of grueling conditioning in the Bahamas and then being told he made the team.

"We worked out three times a day and I was so tired that at night I wanted to go to bed," he said. "I didn't have time to think about being in the Bahamas. I was just concerned about making the Cosmos."

"I couldn't believe I was on the same team with these guys," he said. "They are simply phenomenal players and I was in awe of them for a couple days.

"But after a while I realized they are regular people just like everybody else," he added.

"I didn't have time to think about being in the Bahamas. I was just concerned about making the Cosmos."

— Dominic Barczewski

"Gorgio isn't stuck up like some people think he is. He's a really nice guy."

Barczewski said one of the hardest things to do was getting up mentally to go against a Chinaglia or Neeskens in practice—and hold his own.

"I have to try to do my best against them in practice," he said. "If I think about how great the guy is, I'm in trouble. I just have to concentrate on what I have to do."

Barczewski, who has one year remaining on his contract, plans to see how things go next year before making a decision about his future. He would like to stay with the Cosmos, but...

"If I see I have no chance of getting some playing time, I'll try to go somewhere else," said Barczewski. "No matter what you do in practice, you need game situations to learn and improve."

"Pilot. The pens you have to hold onto with two hands."

— Rodney Dangerfield

"I don't get no respect! I make a deposit. This guy's making a withdrawal — including my Pilot pen."

"It's almost criminal how people go for my Pilot Fineline. Why? It's fine point writes through carbons. And Pilot charges only 79¢ for it. People get their hands on it and forget it's my pen. I got no pen. And no respect!

People go nuts over my Pilot Razor Point too. It writes with an extra fine line. Its metal collar helps keep the point from going squish. For only 89¢ they should buy their own pen—and show some respect for my property!"

Pikes continue mastery

Intramurals currently are providing UMSL students with a variety of sports activities.

Nine-man soccer, hoc-soc and the recent conclusion of the volleyball season has brought many and to participate in the second phase of intramurals. The first phase included football and the three-mile run.

This past week's action included the start of three on three basketball and hoc soc.

The winners of the three on three basketball action included the Baseball Rivermen beating the PS team, Papal Bulls over the Pikes, Sig Pi defeating the Bucketeers, the Flyers over the Chaunks and finally, Smotherson & Co. beating the Nobody's.

In nine-man soccer, the Deans continued to blaze the field with a 3-0 victory over Cook'en. The Deans are now boasting a perfect 3-0 record. They have scored seven goals and haven't allowed one.

In other nine-man action, Studservice defeated the Pikes, 1-0.

In Hoc Soc action, which began last Wednesday, it was Sig Tau over TKE 2-1 and Sig Pi over the Pikes, 2-0. ROTC defeated the Clash through a forfeit and Phi Zappa Krappa beat PEK 2-0.

In Hoc Soc action on Monday, the Flippers beat the Headliners in a very tough match with a late goal in the second half of play. The Headliners played nearly the entire game with only four people. The Hoosiers beat the Oates and Oatlettes 4-0, Beta Alpha Psi defeated the Racquetball Club by a forfeit and the Papal Bulls blitzed the Crazy Kickers, 4-0.

intramural report

Intramural Hoc Soc is broken up into four divisions—red, gold, blue and green.

Making up the Red division are the TKE's, Sig Tau, Pikes and Sig Pi. The Blue division has the Headliners, Flippers, Hoosiers and Oates and Oatettes.

In the Gold division the four teams are the Racquetball Club, Beta Alpha Psi, Crazy Kickers, and Papal Bulls. Finally, the Green division consists of the ROTC team, PEK, The Clash and Phi Zappa Krappa.

Last week, the volleyball final was played in the Mark Twain Sports Complex, the match saw the Pikes #1 team facing the LeSabre team.

The Pikes #1 team swept by the LeSabre team with scores of 15-2, 15-6.

Pikes player Bruce Short describes his team's road to the championship: "Our toughest matches were in the playoffs. In the quarterfinal, we had to play the Tennis Team which was a very tough match. Then, in the semi-final game, we played The Alliance. They, too, were a tough team."

They may have been tough, but the Pikes were apparently tougher. They got by the Tennis Team 8-15, 15-11 and 15-8. They defeated The Alliance with scores of 8-15, 15-13 and 15-6.

LeSabre got to the finals by beating Oates and Oatettes 15-7, 4-15 and 15-9. They then advanced to the semi-final game against the Racquetball Club. They beat them convincingly with scores of 15-4 and 15-10.

The Pikes, who also won the football championship, are not faring as well in hoc soc and soccer. But, it is of no concern to Short who said, "Our championships for this semester might be over, we'll give some of the other teams a chance to win."

The UMSL assist leader said that his father was instrumental in helping him establish his attitudes about soccer. "He never stressed winning."

This year's squad has an unusual sense of closeness according to Dallas and his players. "Everyone is very close and everyone wants to have a good time playing soccer," said Dallas.

Bess feels that this year's team is made up of a "Great bunch of guys and coaches."

For the past two years, UMSL soccer fans have been blessed with the presence of Pat McVey. For the past four years, UMSL soccer fans have watched Mike Bess and Tim Murphy mature.

Would there have been another school reaping the benefits of these fine players if it hadn't been UMSL? Probably not, according to the players.

"Harry Keough (head coach at SLU) is my neighbor," explained Murphy. "But when I was in high school, Dallas approached me right away. I knew some of the players so I went to UMSL."

McVey has no regrets at all in coming to UMSL. "I know that I would have to work hard."

As for Bess, he feels that all the budget cutbacks in athletics at schools such as SLU has made UMSL that much more worth his while. "They are cutting back on sports at SLU and SIU-E. Here, the budget is low but it is put to good use." Bess indicated that the erecting of the lights on the soccer field was one example of making the budget effective.

"The budget doesn't matter though when you're on the field. UMSL is as strong as everyone."

Bess, Murphy and McVey have to begin to think about their futures.

Murphy was drafted in the third round of the Major Indoor Soccer League's draft a few weeks ago by the St. Louis Steamers. He knows what his immediate future holds for him.

Bess and McVey however, will have to go knock on doors if they don't get picked up in the upcoming North American Soccer League draft.

"I'm not worried about outdoor soccer," explained Bess. "I like indoor better. I am planning on walking on somewhere, maybe Kansas City or Memphis."

McVey said he may give soccer a shot. "I didn't expect to get drafted. If I walk on anywhere, it will be with the Steamers."

As for now, these players are looking forward to walking on the field to play for the NCAA Division II championship.

Bess, Murphy and McVey have all fought hard to get to this point in their careers—a fitting end would be a national championship.
