

Long-awaited shuttle bus becomes reality

Barb DePalma
news editor

For students and faculty who have to commute between UMSL and the Marillac campuses, the long wait is over. A shuttle bus has been put into service effective Sept. 7.

The bus, on a trial run this semester, will serve a dual purpose. It will transport students to and from the main campus and Marillac and also will pick up students at Hanley and Natural Bridge and bring them to campus. There is no charge.

From 7:30 to 9 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m., students will be brought to and from Hanley and Natural Bridge. Between 9:30 and 1 p.m. the bus will make stops only at UMSL and Marillac. The bus will run every day class is in session until the last day of finals.

This has been done in order to make the shuttle more efficient, said Rick L. Blanton, director of Student Life. It is also because more students ride the Cross-County bus early in the morning and late in the afternoon.

Eight stops have been designated and the present route is as follows: the corner of Natural Bridge and Hanley Roads (Stop 1); north on Hanley to Geiger Road, east on Geiger to South Florissant Road, enter by the Mark Twain Building, and stop at intersection by General Services Building (Stop 2); make stop at east end of parking structure No. 8 adjacent to the Blue Metal Office Building (Stop 3); continue on outer road to Woods Hall and J.C. Penney Building (Stop 4); leave campus for Music Building on Natural Bridge Road (Stop 5); leave Marillac campus and return to UMSL making a stop between Benton and Stadler halls (Stop 7); take the west drive around campus and make final stop in the vicinity of the Thomas Jefferson Library (Stop 8). This stop will serve students going to the library and Clark and Lucas halls.

The trip takes approximately one-half hour to complete. However, there are no set times that the shuttle will arrive at the designated stops.

"The longest wait anyone would have if they just miss the bus would be one-half hour," Blanton said. "We would love to see the bus full. This would show us that the service was being received well."

The shuttle bus is being funded from the Office of the Vice Chancellor of Administrative Services. It is being rented from the Harmon Bus Co. which submitted the lowest bid for the vehicle, driver and insurance.

At present, the bus has no distinguishing marks. It is simply a yellow school bus with a small paper sign that tells students it is the shuttle bus. Blanton said that a way is being devised to make the bus more recognizable to students. Also, new signs will be put up to mark bus stops.

"If we feel the service is warranted, we will continue it," Blanton said, "either through a leased vehicle or by purchasing our own equipment, whichever is more efficient in cost and service."

The idea of having an inter-campus shuttle has been in the planning stages since the Marillac campus was bought. A committee was formed to examine the possibility of getting a bus. During the past year the Student Association obtained prices from local bus companies.

"This has been a project that has been around for years whose time has come," Blanton said. "We welcome comments and suggestions from people after they have used the service to help make it more efficient."

Homecoming dons new theme

The 1982 homecoming dance — dubbed the "Paddlewheel Ball" — will be held Oct. 23 at Country Manor Banquet Center in West County. The dance highlights the week's homecoming activities.

Ann Lamprecht, homecoming committee chairperson, said, "We are trying to start a tradition this year with the 'Paddlewheel Ball' theme. We're trying to get more people involved in homecoming."

In an attempt to get more people involved, Lamprecht started with the makeup of the homecoming committee. Last year, the committee had six members; this year it has 19.

"I work on a philosophy that the more people you get involved, the more people are going to come," Lamprecht said. "This year we have 19 people on the committee from all aspects of the university, including alumni. The enthusiasm of the committee has been great."

Another change that has been made to draw more people is instituting door prizes. Five door prizes, valued at $40 each, will be given away during the evening. The prizes were donated by an anonymous corporation. In addition to the door prizes, trophies will be awarded to the winners of the two homecoming competitions. One trophy will be awarded to the group that designs the best lawn display and the other to the group that is credited with the most ticket sales. Lawn display applications are available at 262 U. Center.

In addition to the competitions the week's activities include King and Queen campaigning and elections, a carnival, and two soccer games Oct. 22.

All students are eligible to run for Homecoming King or Queen. The elections will be held Oct. 20 and 21 in the lobbies of University Center, the Social Sciences and Business Building and Marillac. The polls will be open from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and to 5 to 7 p.m. on both days. The polls will be run by the homecoming committee.

Applications for King and Queen can be obtained at 262 U. Center, at the Information Desk, or in the Underground. The applications contain information on campaigning and regulations to be followed. The applications must be turned in to 262 U. Center by 5 p.m., Oct. 1.

The carnival is scheduled for Oct. 22 and is another new addition to the week's activities. The carnival is being sponsored by the University Program Board. Arrangements for the carnival are incomplete at this time.

Both the soccer Riverwomen and Rivermen will face teams from University of Missouri-Rolla during the homecoming matches. The women will play at 5:30 p.m. and the men will play at 7:30 p.m. The King and Queen candidates will be presented sometime during the evening.

Bauer receives local cable TV Emmy

Rex Bauer, Student Staff program director at KWMU, has been named a co-recipient of a local television Emmy Award presented at a ceremony held Saturday, Sept. 9, at the Chase Park Plaza Hotel in St. Louis.

Bauer, along with Bret Kepner and Mike Heflin, won the award for "The Bald Spot Factor," a series of eight to 10 short comedy subjects. Their show was among 14 nominees from the St. Louis area.

"I was shocked when I first heard that I won," Bauer said, "as were the others. It was a matter of being in the right place at the right time."

The television programs were judged for their content, creativity and execution. The show was produced on location and at the studios of Warner Amex Cable Communications of St. Louis Inc. "The Bald Spot Factor" was competing for the Locally Produced Cable Program Award against a documentary, a sports program and another comedy show.

"We are a diverse group, but we agree on the basic elements of what we want to do with them," Bauer said. "A great deal of credit goes to John Marschalk and the production crew. They were excellent."

"We would brainstorm and the ideas got manipulated into other ideas. We went through some difficult phases, but it still worked out well," said Bauer. The group presently is working on another show, but has slowed down the production effort in order to be completely sure of itself and to keep its ideas original.

The show has been aired on Channel 7 at Warner Amex in order to fill vacant time slots.

Bauer was pleased that his first efforts in television have received such acclaim. "My input was one-third of the whole show. I am at ease in front of cameras and mikes, but not in front of a math book, so this seems to be the right direction for me."

'Stock Market Game' at UMSL

UMSL will offer a short course this fall on the mechanics of buying and selling stock. Based on the nationally known "Stock Market Game," the course offers participants an opportunity to "play the market" through a computerized simulation game. The class will meet Wednesday evenings from 7 to 9 p.m., Sept. 22 through Oct. 13, with additional sessions scheduled on Nov. 3 and Jan. 5.

Each participant, using an imaginary $100,000 as an initial investment, simulates buying and selling stocks on the New York Stock Exchange for 10 weeks, based on the previous day's closing prices. Through the "Stock Market Game" participants learn various investment strategies, including how to buy, sell, buy on margin and short sell.

Transactions can be done at home and are mailed daily to the UMSL Center for Economic Education where they are matched against actual closing prices on the NYSE. Participants will receive weekly computer printouts showing their previous portfolios, transactions for the week and current holdings.

Instructors for the course are Sarapage McCorkle and Joseph McKenna. McKenna, a professor of economics at UMSL, is acting director of the Center for Economic Education. McCorkle is an instructor and associate director of the center.

Registration fee for "How to Invest in the Stock Market" is $30 per person, or $40 per couple. To register, call UMSL Continuing Education-Extension, 553-5961.

New student elections to be held

New UMSL students will get a chance to run for representatives to the Student Assembly Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 27 and 28.

Applications for the positions will be located at the University Center Information Desk and in the Student Association office, 253 A University Center. Deadline for the applications is Monday, Sept. 20.

The Student Association is the student governing body on campus. Its legislative body is called the Student Assembly and consists of the association president and vice president, and one representative from each association-recognized student organization. One representative is also chosen for every 500 students enrolled in the Graduate School, School of Optometry and Evening College, and for day undergraduate students majoring in business administration, education, nursing and arts and sciences. New and transfer students will be vying for approximately six positions in this election.

"Students do not have to have any particular qualifications to apply," said Larry Wines, Student Association president. "The Student Association acts in all areas of campus governance and are representatives of the students. We have members on almost every committee on campus. We are also a good information-gathering organization." Wines also said that only new and transfer students are permitted to vote for the new student representatives.

Concurrent with the new student elections, a special election will be held to replace Valerie Lawrence, who resigned last spring. Deadline for applications is also Sept. 20.

Plattner to speak here Monday

"Fifteen Years of Economic Development in Chiapas, Mexico," will be the topic of the first Monday Colloquium in Social Science Research Sept. 20. The lecture will be given by Stuart Plattner, UMSL professor of anthropology.

The lecture will be given in the McDonnell Conference Room, 331 SSB, from 1:45 to 2:45 p.m. The series is sponsored by the Center for International Studies, the department of anthropology and the College of Arts and Sciences.

Rhodes Scholarship

Despite the language of the official announcement a candidate need not be superhuman to qualify.

The Selection Committee looks for high scholarship [probably at least a 3.7 GPA in the preceding year], outstanding performance in some type of independent academic or professional work, some extra-curricular interests [which in some cases might be the student's employment], and a humanitarian concern for others. The candidate need not be an athlete, although he or she should be physically fit and enjoy exercise.

In the past, two University of Missouri-St. Louis students were selected to represent Missouri and barely missed final selection in the regional competition. Now that the competition is open to UMSL women as well as men, our chances of success are greater.

A candidate must be between the ages of 18 and 24 on October 1, 1982. While he or she must be unmarried until the end of the first year at Oxford, marriage in the second year is possible without forfeiting the scholarship.

Elections will be held in all states in December, 1982. Scholars-elect will enter Oxford University in October, 1983.

The stipend of a Rhodes Scholarship consists of a direct payment to the Scholar's College of all approved fees [such as matriculation, tuition, laboratory fees, and certain other set charges], plus a maintenance allowance of 3,480 pounds [approximately $7,000]. The Scholarship also pays for travel costs to and from Oxford. Appointment is made for two years with a third year probable if the Scholar's record merits it. The Scholar may either study for an Honours B.A., or for a graduate degree in virtually any field or profession.

Interested students should first consult the packet of informational literature on reserve in the Library and, if they are interested, should then pick up the application form from the Office of Academic Affairs, 401 Woods Hall, as soon as possible. The completed application should be returned by noon, Friday, October 1, 1982.

Career Planning offers valuable service

There is a valuable service that offers very UMSL student assistance in Career Planning, Co-Op and Internship Programs, Student Work Assignment Programs, On Campus Interviews, and Immediate Placement Vacancies.

The Career Planning and Placement Office is located on the third floor of Woods Hall in Room 308. It is well-staffed with professional administrative personnel, each eager to serve UMSL students.

"Our main thrust is to help graduating seniors find jobs," says Rosemary Bruno, assistant director of the Career Planning and Placement Office. On-Campus Recruiting is one of the principal services offered. It allows students to speak with representatives from business, governmental, and educational corporations such as Shell Companies; Tiger, Fireside, Stone, and Carlie (CPA); Rubin, Brown and Gornstein (CPA); Xerox Corporation; Farmers Insurance; and Missouri Pacific Railroad — a student may interview with more than one employer.

A student completes the College Interview Form which acts as a resume then he copies and places in the available employers slot designated in the Placement Office Library. The interview forms are collected and submitted to the individual employers for preselection. The list of selected interviewees is then posted on a board outside the Placement Center. It is up to the selected student to sign up for a specific time to interview with the employer. The sign-up sheets are located inside the office.

A student may register for the On-Campus Interviews anytime but he must submit his interview forms one month before the employer is scheduled to visit the UMSL campus. A list of employers who will be participating in this semester's interviews is available in the Placement Office following registration. Registrants are charged a service fee of $10 which covers a period of one year.

"We don't place anyone, we try to act as a career service," says Robert Palmer, director of the Placement Center. "Last year, 1,185 students registered with us and 729 accepted full-time positions."

Another primary service the Placement Office provides is the Career Information Library, which aids in the exploration of careers and businesses. The library is located inside the office and offers literature resources on job descriptions, employment trends, job hunting techniques and career opportunities in various business, industrial, government and education fields. Company literature from recruiters and various other corporations can also be found in the library. Periodicals that contain information on resume writing, preparing for job interviews, cover letters, summer employment and job scope are available.

The Co-Op and Internship programs assist in finding students a job in their pursued career so that they may obtain firsthand experience. The internship program is usually completed over summer between the junior and senior year. A student also has the option of going part-time during the Fall or Winter semester. A bulletin board outside the office lists these available positions by code number with full information about that job inside the Placement Office. "Students should take an initiative to get involved with their major field," said Palmer.

The Co-Op Program alternates school and work. A student will work for a semester and attend school the next semester. The program usually takes five years to be completed with a degree. Upon graduation the student is usually offered a position with the business in which he performed the program. Alice Roewlsler is in charge of the Co-Op and Internship programs.

The Student Work Assignment Program, better known as SWAP, assists students who do not have a degree and are looking for part-time, full-time, or summer jobs.

"This program is not based on financial need," says Robert Powell, director of SWAP. The available jobs are posted on the bulletin board outside Room 346 in Woods Hall. Once a student finds a desirable job, the personnel in the SWAP office will call and set up appointment for an interview. The student is asked to fill out an application with the SWAP office. Employers of certain corporations also refer to the SWAP office for available students to fill immediate vacancies and, with their application on file, the office can better serve the student and employer. The student's application is also sent to about 500 businesses for employers' review. Students are being placed in professional, technical, sales and clerical

Politicians go to bat for UMSL

In times of recent strife, it's understandable why UMSL students have been so vehement in their complaints about the rising increase in the cost of education. Unfortunately, students are getting upset at the wrong people.

In the past year, many students have blamed Missouri's government for the lack of state funds, which has placed a heavy financial burden on the students of the four University of Missouri campuses. "All those rich politicians are the culprits," they say.

At the Student Day of Concern held at UMSL last March, more than 1,000 UMSL students voiced their opinions to Lt. Gov. Kenneth J. Rothman, Rep. Wayne Goode and Sens. John Bass and Al Mueller. The purpose of the event was to let the community and state governments know how upset and concerned students were about the lack of state funding for education. And the students came out in full force to do just that.

Unfortunately, the Day of Concern showed just how ignorant many UMSL students are. For more than an hour, students moaned loudly and generally were hostile toward the speakers. Shouts of "We're upset and what are you going to do about it?" filled the auditorium as the politicians attempted to inform the students of ways to improve the situation.

It was embarrassing. The four politicians came to UMSL to hear the students' gripes, and instead got a mouthful of naive, emotional flak. It was unfortunate because the politicians — who pointed out that low tax revenue in the state and poor voter participation among college students are among the primary reasons for the present situation — are really trying to help the students.

Three local politicians, in particular, have gone to bat for UMSL in recent months and most likely will continue to do so in the future. St. Louis Mayor Vincent C. Schoemehl, an UMSL graduate, and Sens. James Murphy and Edwin Dirck have helped UMSL in many ways and their efforts should be appreciated.

At a recent meeting before the State Appropriations Committee, Schoemehl and Dirck argued that UMSL was being overlooked when it came to funds for capital improvements. The result was the authorization of $19 million for a new science complex at UMSL.

It may be three or four years before UMSL sees the science complex, but Schoemehl and Dirck definitely have helped speed up the process.

Dirck also was involved in the funding of the lights on the UMSL soccer field, which were erected last summer. Along with Sen. Murphy, Dirck helped pass legislation for the funding of the lights, and the majority of UMSL's soccer games are now held at night.

In the past few months, Dirck and Murphy have been working on a bill that would permit the construction of a grandstand on the soccer field. This proposal, however, is not meeting with as much success as the previous one.

Regardless, the concern Schoemehl, Murphy and Dirck have been showing for UMSL is truly a bright spot in the dim picture that has been painted for UMSL students in the past few years. These three men, along with several others, are putting their best foot forward to help our young campus.

So, instead of lambasting our politicians, let's work with them. After all, they're on our side.

Commentary

UMSL finds good fortune in Meckfessel

When I first heard the news that Rich Meckfessel was the new head basketball coach of the men's team at UMSL, my first reaction was "Rich who?"

Admittedly, I was somewhat disappointed with the decision. Knowing that Mark Bensen, Bobby Bone and Jerry Zykan — coaches who have been associated with UMSL's basketball program and are familiar with the St. Louis area — had applied for the job, I expected one of them to get the nod. After all, it didn't seem likely that UMSL would attract an outsider for the job.

But after meeting and chatting with Meckfessel earlier this week, I realize why Meckfessel was selected. The former head basketball coach at Morris Harvey College, now the University of Charleston, has a fine track record, is articulate, has an extensive background in promotions and is held in high esteem by his peers.

Meckfessel won 250 games in 14 seasons at Morris Harvey, and the Division II school defeated many Division I schools during his tenure. In other words, the new coach is not afraid of challenges. If he was, he wouldn't have applied for the job.

Meckfessel has a few excellent ideas that should help generate a bit more interest in the UMSL basketball program. He hopes to get the alumni and community to support the team more, and he would like to make the basketball program more attractive to the student body. He plans to keep a few spots open for walk-ons each year.

Even though the graduate of Beaumont

High School and Washington University has been away from St. Louis for 17 years, he has a pretty good reputation with basketball enthusiasts in the area. It is especially noteworthy that Meckfessel has been a strong candidate for six Division I head coaching jobs in the past. He turned down three others.

UMSL should consider itself fortunate to land such an impressive and qualified coach. He may not turn the program around overnight — UMSL was 12-14 last year — but he promises to bring an exciting brand of basketball to the UMSL campus.

With a little support, Meckfessel and UMSL could turn out to be a happy marriage.

Upset with paper's views

Dear Editor:

As an UMSL alumnus and former editor of the Current, I felt I should respond to your editorial of Sept. 9.

A few years back, many people at UMSL believed that part-time students were being treated unfairly. As the Current correctly reported last week, part-timers paid about 40 percent more for their degrees than their full-time counterparts.

Over objections at Columbia, the policy was changed. Part-time students would, in a few years, actually have to pay no more for their degrees than full-time students.

Because of the large percentage of part-time students here, this was seen as a victory for UMSL. But now, as the plan is about to be completed, the Current editorialized against it.

No student would deny that school is costly. But to suggest that part-time students should continue subsidizing full-timers makes little sense and ignores the best interest of the UMSL student body. Part-time students are not avoiding fee increases; full-timers are just finally catching up.

I am glad to see the Current back for another year. But on this issue, I think you should re-evaluate who you are serving.

Sincerely,

Richard Jackoway

Wellness Program to discuss health

Barb DePalma
news editor

Individual eating habits and health styles will be examined during a Wellness Program to be held on campus.

Wellness is defined as positive actions taken by individuals to help them become physically and mentally healthy.

"It has been recorded in the last few years that in the health care world, we have looked more at illness than at being healthy," said Debbie Engelhardt Igielnik, assistant instructor in the UMSL School of Nursing and Wellness

Program coordinator. "Many illnesses in the United States come from how we live our lives. We thought 'Why not emphasize different things people can do to improve their health?'"

The goals of the program are to determine what area of health people are interested in and to see what can be changed or directed. Members of the Wellness Committee will conduct interviews with UMSL students to find their areas of interest. Other activities include students teaching wellness to the Active Adults classes, holding a screening clinic for diabetics and initiating a wellness education project at UMSL. A directory is also being planned to let people know what is available on campus to improve health.

"Everyone has their own level for wellness," Igielnik said. "Wellness is whatever is most comfortable for us. We are trying to sensitize people to the issue because you have to be aware of the problem in order to change habits."

The project was created by Shirley Martin, dean of the School of Nursing, and Lowe S. "Sandy" MacLean, dean of Student Affairs. The Wellness Committee will work in conjunction with the UMSL Health Service, physical education department, Counseling Service, School of Nursing and Student Affairs. Funding for the program is from the School of Nursing.

"This is a positive event that the UMSL faculty and staff want to do for the students," said Igielnik.

positions. Last year over $1 million were earned in combined salaries by the hired students.

"We want to be a service for the UMSL campus," said Powell. "Many students are not allowed to attend UMSL because of financial aid cuts. This service provides a student with help on locating a job."

The Career Planning and Placement Office also encourages students to use its videocassettes on how to interview. This service is provided to every student at no charge.

"We have a very professional staff here," said Palmer. "We serve alumni as well because one day after graduation they're considered alumni. We feel a strong responsibility to alumni as well as seniors and undergraduates. We are a helping field — first to the students, then to the university, then to the employers of our students or alumni, then finally to ourselves by making a contribution to society by adding to the effective work force."

Senior citizens present vaudeville follies

asst features editor

No, the "Senior Follies" was not a show given by performing senior college students, nor was it a show given by senior high school students. Rather, the "Senior Follies" was a talent show in which the entire cast, with one exception, was over the age of 60.

The "Senior Follies," held Sunday, Sept. 12 in the J.C. Penney Auditorium at UMSL, was sponsored by the County Older Resident Programs of the St. Louis County Department of Human Resources. The production showcased the talents of 37 senior citizens in a vaudeville type talent show. Many of the performers had played in the professional circuit, in vaudeville or with the big bands. Other performers had developed their talents locally, performing in little theaters or in amateur productions.

Valerie White, supervisor of CORP and producer of the "Senior Follies," explained, "One of the main purposes for the "Senior Follies" was to present a positive, vibrant image of older citizens. Aging is a positive thing; it doesn't mean that we can't do active things in our older years."

The idea for the "Senior Follies" came about after two senior adult dance events and a "Senior Celebration," which focused on older adults. "There is a lot of talent among the seniors that should be pulled together," said White.

Three countywide talent auditions ensued. From many, 19 acts were chosen to perform in the first, hopefully annual, "Senior Follies."

Among the many and varied acts was a harmonica solo by Joe Knocki, age 79. Knocki has been a featured performer with the Russ David Orchestra and today frequently plays with senior adult dance orchestras. Glenn and Ann Sherrod, with 50 years of dancing experience behind them, executed a beautiful waltz, cha cha and jitterbug. 85-year-old Fred Wood gave a dramatic recitation of "The Shooting of Dan McGrew." Fred began his career performing in talent shows during service with the U.S. Navy. He gave his first performance of "Dan McGrew" in World War I.

The UMSL Active Adults performed two lively tap dance numbers, "Dance Boogie" and "Military Tap." This group is part of a Continuing Education Program at UMSL with a focus on physical activities for the 55-and-older age group. With an average age of 66, the group performs for the community, takes part in gerontological research, and learns, among other activities, square dancing, aerobics, racquetball and most recently, tap dancing.

Noticing that some young girls were watching the UMSL Active Adults' performance with amusement, 65-year-old Winnie Murphy, of Murphy's Music Makers, joked, "You young people didn't think that we older people could do that kind of stuff, did you?"

Murphy's Music Makers is composed of pianist Winnie Murphy, drummer Francis Vandell and Joe Buerger playing the violin. The trio opened the show with "All Aboard for a Good Ole' Time," for which Murphy had written the lyrics. The threesome accompanied most of the acts throughout the show, and opened the second act with a lively rendition of "All Aboard" that had the audience clapping along. Murphy took advantage of the mostly older generation audience to ask, "We've had more fun as we've gotten older, haven't we?" The audience shouted the answer, "Yes, indeed!"

The program also included several singing numbers, a banjo solo, a comedy monologue and a ventriloquist.

Gauging the standing-room-only size audience's reaction to this unique talent show was easy. Some were humming along to the songs, some were tapping their feet in time to the music and everyone was smiling.

Wayne Jackson, from the UM Cooperative Extension Division and the "Senior Follies" master of ceremonies, said, "It is an exhilarating experience to work with people who so often are thought to be over the hill but aren't. These people have so much energy."

Thirteen-year-old Dorri O'Conner, from the Cross Keys area, managed to sum up the general feeling: "I think that the show was great. Older people should get out and show what they've got. There should definitely be more shows of this kind."

Although this was the first show of this type, these talented performers aren't just going to go home and wait out the possible second "Senior Follies." Most of the performers have entered into "contracts" with CORP and are now in CORP's talent bank. They may be reached through CORP by those clubs, groups or organizations which desire entertainment at their functions.

After the Grand Finale, which included the entire cast, the master of ceremonies and producer White, the audience gave the performance a standing ovation. Even if it did take some time for some of the more elderly to get to their canes in order to stand, stand they did.

Virginia's friendliness makes Mark Twain Building shine

reporter

You could call her Mrs. Clean, but her real name is Virginia Usery.

This smiling, dark-haired woman dressed in a blue uniform keeps the women's locker rooms and restrooms in sparkling condition.

How clean and sparkling? According to Francis Sullivan, the security guard who greets everyone entering the building, she keeps them immaculate. He knows this because of the comments and questions he hears from the women who use facilities.

Sullivan said, "Many times the women ask me how many people clean the women's locker rooms. I tell them just one. They say our locker rooms are wonderfully clean — the cleanest public locker rooms they've ever seen. Virginia takes exceptional pride in what she does."

And what she does is a lot. The women have four different locker rooms. One for the varsity teams, the faculty and staff, the swimming pool, and one general large locker room. About 75 women play soccer, volleyball and basketball each day. In addition, there are women using the pool for recreation, or taking physical education classes. The Active Adults group meets twice a week for exercise classes and swimming. They number around 100 to 125.

Each locker room has several shower stalls, commodes and wash basins. Usery also cleans the large women's restroom upstairs, empties ashtrays and trash cans, and keeps the water fountains and mirrors shiny.

Ann Rocco, the locker room attendant, said, "At the end of each semester Virginia hand-washes each locker. There must be close to 300 of them. She takes down all the shower curtains twice a year and sends them to the laundry man here in our building."

"The varsity and faculty/staff locker rooms have carpeting. The soccer players bring in clods of dirt on their spikes. Sometimes Virginia has to bend over and pick them up by hand because they are too big for the sweeper."

Usery herself is quite modest about what she does. She said, "It's work, but it's not hard. Everyone in the building is so nice to work with. We all get along. The students help make my job easier. They put the trash where it belongs."

Usery said without hesitation that the part she liked best about her job was "meeting the students." Evidently the students feel the same way about her. Whenever former students return to visit the campus, they make a point of looking her up.

The hardest part of her job "is saying goodbye." Mary Chappell, the assistant intramural director, left this summer and Usery hated to see her go. She said, "Mary and I were close. I was sort of like a mother to her since she didn't have any family here. By the time she left she was having her little girl refer to me as 'Grandma.'"

Usery said that in the Mark Twain Building "everybody's friends." The office staff, coaches and custodial people get together for Christmas and going-away parties.

Usery is not the only one in her family who works at UMSL. Her daughter, Vickie Edmoston, works in the office at the physical plant. Vickie's husband, Mike, is a carpenter here. They live next to Usery, so she rides to work with them. All three work from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Her son Kevin works at UMSL part-time as a groundskeeper. Next month he will marry Carol Waller who is a full-time groundskeeper here. Usery's eldest son used to work here on a vending machine route.

Not only has Usery helped things run smoothly for the women who use the locker rooms, she has also made Judy Berres' job easier. Berres, the assistant athletic director, said, "Virginia is a super lady. I never have to tell her to do anything. I don't have to check the facilities. We never have a problem with bugs. She takes pride in her work. She's spoiled us."

Virginia Usery has been spoiling the women athletes at UMSL for 10 years. It is to be hoped that she will be around to spoil them for a long, long time to come.

Gallery shows rural art; to show silk paintings

Frank Russell
ass't arts editor

Gallery 210 will present the exhibit "Missouri Folk — Their Creative Images" through Sept. 23, said gallery director Sylvia Solochek Walters.

"These are some of the very best examples of what you might call folk art," said Solochek Walters, describing the exhibit, "some with very individual outlooks and styles." The exhibit, organized by James Froese and other staff members of the Art Extension Department at the University of Missouri's Columbia campus, includes works by mostly self-taught rural artists residing in Missouri.

The exhibit, she said, includes a few antique pieces, 80- to 90-year-old quilts and rustic sculpture, as well as works by more recent artists. Solochek Walters cited, in particular, three paintings by artist Robert Smith.

Nature themes are dominant in his work, which uses vivid, primary color and strong black lines, creating a sense of activity, she said. "His style has a great deal of nervous energy." She also cited woodcarvings by rural artist Thomas Krull. "He is a highly skilled carver," Solochek Walters said, adding that Krull is self-trained.

Paintings on silk by New York-based artist Linda Bastian will be exhibited Sept. 29 through Oct. 27 at the gallery.

"She handworks floral or organic images, very colorful, [which are] shown either as paintings, scarves or banners," Solochek Walters said. She added that many of Bastian's works may be worn as capes or other garments. "Many of them will be for sale," she said. "It should be a very different kind of show."

"[The gallery] is on campus in order to bring the best quality of visual arts that we can to the campus community," Solochek Walters said. "We try very hard to bring work otherwise not available to the area."

Gallery 210 receives its basic budget from the university as a function of the UMSL art department, although additional support from the Missouri Arts Council, private groups and individuals, alumni and on campus groups such as the Concerts and Lecture Committee, often supplements the gallery's budget.

Costs for individual exhibits include installation, shipping, insurance, security, and printing and postage for the gallery's mailing list.

The gallery's schedule for the rest of the 1982-83 year includes "100 Artist's Books from Franklin's Furnace" in November, "Photography Plus" in February and "Wall Wood Works" by New York artist Steve Long in April.

"The exhibits are free and open to the public," Solochek Walters said. "They are there for our pleasure and education."

The gallery, located at 210 Lucas Hall, is open Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday.

Meckfessel to bring new ideas to cage program

Jeff Kuchno
editor

Don't be surprised if you see a few obscure names on the UMSL men's basketball roster the next few years. After all, the new head coach has made it known that he is in the market for players who are commonly referred to as sleepers.

"I want the student body to know that the basketball program is open to them," said Rich Meckfessel, who was introduced to the media and UMSL basketball to a press conference at the Mark Twain Building Monday. He replaces Tom Bartow, who resigned over the summer.

"I plan to keep a few spots open each year for walk-ons," said Meckfessel, who added that a meeting will be held Monday, Sept. 20, at 3 p.m. in Room 218 of the Mark Twain Building for all those students interested in trying out for this year's team.

The fact that Meckfessel has a penchant for utilizing unknown talent is not surprising, especially when one considers his background. The former head basketball coach at the University of Charleston in West Virginia (known as Morris Harvey College until 1979) never played high school basketball. But he did play his last two years in college.

The native St. Louisan graduated from Beaumont High School when he was 16. He tried out for the team his senior year, but was cut primarily because he graduated in mid-year, and the coach (Tom Stanton) knew he wouldn't have Meckfessel for the entire season.

"But he told me that I was good enough to play, and that I should try to play in college," Meckfessel recalled.

Rich Meckfessel

In his first two years at Washington University, Meckfessel played a lot of intramural basketball, but he didn't try out for the varsity team. "Finally," he said, "I got enough nerve to ask the coach if I could try out."

He made the team as a junior and played in about 12 games. As a senior, he started on a team that was coached by Chuck Smith, UMSL's athletic director who was in his first year as a head coach at Washington U. at the time.

Meckfessel served as an assistant under Smith for five years before leaving to become the head coach at Morris Harvey in 1965. In 14 seasons as the head man, Meckfessel's teams won 250 games, captured three West Virginia Intercollegiate Athletic Conference championships and two WVIAC tournament championships.

"We had some great teams," he said.

Meckfessel also used several players who were not highly touted coming out of high school. In fact, two of his top players never even played high school basketball.

"One of them captained my last team," Meckfessel said.

Three years ago, Meckfessel left the coaching ranks to concentrate on his duties as athletic director at the University of Charleston. He knew, however, that someday he would get back into coaching.

"The second year I was away it started gnawing at me a little bit," he said. "I got the feeling that I might like to get back."

Few jobs have interested him in the past few years, but when he saw the opening for the UMSL job published in a newspaper in Charleston, he called Smith immediately.

"This job is perfect for me," he said. "I have a good feeling about the potential of this program. I hope to build on to the good things that Coach Smith and Coach Bartow have done in the past here."

Meckfessel, who was one of 43 candidates to apply for the UMSL job, likes to play what many people agree is an "exciting" brand of basketball. That is, Meckfessel prefers the fast-break basketball," Meckfessel said. "We're not going to play wild, but as small as we're going to be, we'll have to make it a 94-foot game."

Meckfessel inherits a team that was picked to win the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association championship last year, but instead wound up near the bottom of the conference standings with a 12-14 mark. In addition, Meckfessel will be working with a team that doesn't have a player taller than 6 foot 5.

"It's going to be tough," he said. "I'm going to look at last

Women kickers blast Washington U., 17-0

The opening game of the season for the UMSL women's soccer team can be described in two words.

A rout.

Now, let's get into the details. The Riverwomen totally annihilated the Washington University Bears, 17-0, setting six new school records and tying one in the process.

"I was hoping they (Washington U.) would play a little better than they did," said coach Ken Hudson. "We weren't really tested in this game."

Joan Gettemeyer got the whole thing started with a goal at the 5 minute, 34 second mark, assisted by Debbie Lewis. Lewis then put in a goal herself, with an assist from Patty Kelly, at 9:58. Gettemeyer then made it 3-0 at 13:24, with 20-foot rocket that sailed into the right corner. Karen Lombardo had the assist.

And on and on and on and on. By the time it was over Joan Gettemeyer had scored four goals, tying the UMSL record for most goals in a game by a player. But the accomplishments didn't stop there.

Karen Lombardo, Debbie Lewis and Maureen Lee all broke the record for most points in a game by one player. Each scored five points to erase the old mark, which was four.

Other new records included most assists in a game by a player (Lewis and Lee, 3 each), most goals in a game team (17),

'Tall' Riverwomen ready for season opener

reporter

With the start of the season only one day away, the UMSL women's volleyball team is riding a wave of optimism. One reason for this is the presence of two 6-footers, freshman Lisa Plamp and senior Sue Durrer.

Plamp, an All-Suburban North Conference selection her senior year at Hazelwood West High School, is the taller of the duo at 6 foot 2.

"I think I'll be playing at middle spiker," said Plamp. "My spike is my main asset, thanks to my height and jumping ability."

However, every player has at least one weak spot. Plamp mentioned setting and defense as her's. "My defense isn't all that bad, but it still needs a little work."

Plamp also said that she had to make quite a transition from high school to college volleyball. "It was like stepping into a whole new world. It wasn't easy to go from being the one person that everyone noticed to just another player."

Durrer, who stands at an even 6 feet, has had to go through a number of transitions herself. A 1979 Roosevelt High School graduate, Durrer played at UMSL as a freshman, but then transferred to Pepperdine University in California for her sophomore year. Last year, she came back to UMSL and was named to the all-state team.

Durrer, like Plamp, also plays at middle spiker. "That's where I feel more comfortable on the front," she said. "On the back, though, I'm more comfortable on the angle than in the middle."

Although the team has several strong areas this season, Durrer believes the strongest is setting. "We've got a lot of good setters like Janet [Taylor], Debbie [Shores], Darlene Bohnert and Terry Zander, and they're all coming around real well on it."

In the race for the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association title, Durrer thinks it will be close. "All the teams seem even. We're not going to really terrorize anyone, but they won't ter-rorize us either."

Many people think that height is most important in spiking. According to coach Cindy Rech, that isn't necessarily true.

"It (height) is really helpful in blocking. When someone on the other side gets ready to spike the ball, you want someone who can get their hands up there fast and knock it back over. Naturally, a tall person can do it quicker."

And with two players who fit into the "tall" category, the Riverwomen could be in store for a great season.

WALKING TALL: Lisa Plamp (left) and Sue Durrer are two of the key players on the 1982 UMSL volleyball team, which will open the regular season tomorrow at Principia College. Plamp and Durrer, both of whom stand over 6 feet tall, are the tallest players on the team.

year's films and talk to Coach (Jerry) Zykan and Coach (Chico) Jones — last year's assistants — and start making some plans. I have to find out what these guys can do."

Even if the team isn't successful his first season here, Meckfessel at least hopes to build a positive attitude.

"I'm not going to say we're going to win all 27 games," he said. "But we'll go out on the floor expecting to win every time."

most assists in a game, team (15), most points in a game, team (32), and largest margin of victory (17 goals).

Although the next two games will be against two superior teams (MacMurray College and the University of Cincinnati), Hudson is confident the Riverwomen can pull through.

"We have so much depth that it's unbelievable," Hudson said. "Forward and midfield are especially loaded. We have about six forwards who can put the ball in the net consistently. We might be a little shallow in the back line, but I really don't see any weaknesses."

Can the Riverwomen really be that good? Just ask Washington U. They think so.

Rivermen run into official trouble in Tulsa

The UMSL Rivermen soccer squad traveled down south last Saturday night to take on a strong Division I school, Tulsa University — as well as some not-so-strong officiating. The result was a disappointing 1-1 tie.

"It was obviously not the best officiating I've ever seen," said UMSL coach Don Dallas, who was disappointed by what he thought were some ill-advised calls throughout the game. "Soccer is just starting out down in Tulsa, and the lack of mobility on the part of the officials really hurt us."

The game progressed in much the same fashion as did the opener against St. Louis University, with UMSL coming on stronger in the second half.

"It took us a while to get on track," Dallas said. "But we played very well in the second half and overtime period."

After one half of scoreless soccer, UMSL's first goal of the 1982 season came off the head of midfielder Scott Chase. Chase broke the tie when he caught up with a beautifully planted free kick from forward John O'Mara.

O'Mara had scored in the first half, but the goal was nullified by a disputed offside call. Chase's goal, however, was a different story.

"Scott uses his head very well," Dallas said. "We like to pull him up from the midfield on corner kicks and free kicks. It paid off."

UMSL's chances were numerous. In addition to O'Mara's called-back goal, Lance Polette scored in the second half only to be disallowed by the referee's whistle. "I just don't think the officials were in good position to make those calls," Dallas said.

If it wasn't the questionable officiating of the referees that defied UMSL of the winning goal, it was the bad breaks and near misses that haunted the Rivermen all evening. O'Mara, Polette and John Pallett tested the construction of the goalposts, bouncing shots off the crossbar all night.

"We outshot them and deserved to win," explained Dallas. "We realize we should have gotten away with the victory."

Shutting out Tulsa for nearly 80 minutes was junior goalkeeper Scott Graham, seeing action for the first time this season. Graham kept Tulsa off the board until just minutes remained, allowing the tying goal and sending the game into overtime.

"Scott played very well," Dallas said. "He was very sure of himself and was equal to everything Tulsa threw at him."

"I was kind of nervous before the game," admitted Graham. "But once you touch the ball, you tend to relax."

The net duties will be alternated between Graham and senior standout Ed Weis.

Although the Rivermen enter their third week of the season without a victory, Dallas is still very optimistic about his team coming up with another banner season and repeating as conference champions.

"I know we've got the talent," he said. "When we go four or five games without a win, that's when I'll start to worry."

Dallas still is looking for a player to take charge and make the breaks fall for UMSL instead of against the Rivermen. Perhaps his worries are over, since forward-midfielder Bill Rosner is back after a year-long absence. Rosner has battled a knee injury as well as eligibility rules, and will play in this Friday's home opener against Northern Kentucky State University.

"I feel he's ready," Dallas said. "He's been practicing every night for a week and he looks good."

Intramural football under way

Ronn Tipton
reporter

Well, it's that time of year again — the time when UMSL students are seen running all over campus. Most are running to drop classes or to put them on pass-fail. That is exactly what this fall's 14 intramural touch football teams are doing, except most of these afternoon jocks are dropping passes instead of classes.

This year the teams are divided up into three divisions: five in divisions I and II, and four in Division III. The regular season will consist of six games each. The two teams in each division with the best records at the end of the regular season will intramural report

advance to the playoffs, along with the two teams with the best records of the eight remaining teams.

In the first division there are the Wild Dogs, the Jets, Poker Twice, the No Names, and the ROTC team. The Jets are almost a sure-fire bet to win the division and make the playoffs. Quarterback William Shanks returns to lead the team with his incredible throwing arm.

In the second division, the Pikes, who won the championship last year, will be trying hard to retain their image as the best team on campus. It will be hard to do this year because the Pikes QB from last year, Bruce Short, is not returning this season. In a division as powerful as Division II, they may not even make the playoffs. After going 8-0 last year, and 7-1 the year before, the Pikes will have to get some life into a struggling offense.

Division III is a mix of old and new teams. NCFT, runners up in last year's campaign, will be the team to beat this year. With returning QB Chris Anagnes playing in the secondary also, this team is sure to be tough. Nearly all of last year's team returns with Anagnes. The Grave Diggers will be easy this year unless they have improved a great deal. The two new teams, the Fighting Iris, made up of students from the School of Optometry, and the CNC team, may turn out to be surprises.

There were four games scheduled for Tuesday, but all of them were cancelled due to rain. It isn't known when they will be made up yet. Those games were the Wild Dogs vs. Sig Pi, the No Names vs. Tekes, CNC vs. Fighting Iris, and Grave Diggers vs. NCFT. Today's games include the following: 2 p.m., ROTC vs. Pikes; 3 p.m. Jets vs. Papal Bulls, and Poker Twice vs. Sig Tau.
