Community Connection

UMSL
University of Missouri–St. Louis

Dear friends, neighbors and community partners,

Another academic year has flown by! We are so excited to celebrate all our new graduates, most of whom will continue to live, work and make a positive impact right here in our St. Louis region. That said, be prepared for a little extra traffic on commencement weekend, May 16 & 17, as we will have many visitors on campus.

The spring has been full of activity as usual. We are always excited to expand our partnerships, and to see new businesses open and opportunities made available to area residents. We have highlighted a few in this newsletter. We are also looking forward to warmer weather and the chance to be outdoors for walks around campus and attending events in the community. I hope to see you out and about!

Gratefully forward,

Kristin Sobolik
Chancellor
University of Missouri–St.
Louis

UMSL providing educational opportunities, scholarships to students in Ferguson-Florissant International Baccalaureate Program

The University of Missouri–St. Louis and the Ferguson-Florissant School District have launched a new collaboration to expand access to higher education for some of the district's most talented students. As part of the three-year agreement, UMSL will offer direct admission to Ferguson-Florissant students who have been accepted into the district's International Baccalaureate Program. It will also provide a minimum $5,250 Gold Scholarship for any who enroll at the university full-time. The scholarships will be renewable each year provided the students complete 30 credit hours per year and remain in good academic standings.

"At UMSL, we believe in empowering talented students with opportunities that help them realize their full potential," said Reggie Hill, the vice chancellor for strategic enrollment and career advancement.... "This partnership reflects our deep commitment to student success, academic excellence and creating pathways that uplift our region." Read more. mistrust in government, and how can we rebuild that trust?" and "What tools have you used or seen used to promote accountability?" Participants explored barriers to holding the government accountable and shared ideas for encouraging greater civic involvement. The event focused on fostering community dialogue and empowering citizens to make a difference.

With changing topics, the UMSL Forum for Community Dialogue is held twice each year with the next planned for the fall. Enhancing the capacity of individuals and groups to consider multiple viewpoints on issues impacting communities is the objective of this forum. Associated Bank Opens First Branch in Missouri in Dellwood, Tapping into New Market

Associated Bank news, Monday, April 21, 2025

On April 21, Associated Banc-Corp announced the opening of its new St. Louis branch at Dellwood Crossing Shopping Center located at 10044 W Florissant Ave., leasing about 6,000 square feet of space to serve the community. "The Dellwood area represents an important market for Associated Bank, marking our first Missouri branch location," said Shawn McCutcheon, market president for St. Louis. "It's not only a bank location, it's a location to gather and uplift our community and utilize financial expertise, and that's why we also have our Community Advocacy Center adjoining our branch."

The Dellwood branch will be home to a community accountability officer, an affordable lending officer, as well as shared space for other important lines of business partners. It will also house a meeting space for more than 30 people. The local community will be supported through:

- first time home buyer education
- financial literacy and wellness education
- fraud prevention classes
- space for community advocates and nonprofits to gather and host events and learning sessions
- a full-service teller lobby with a 24-hour, deposit-enabled ATM for after-hours banking

A Red Circle brings ‘Good Food Friday’ to North County

Namratha Prasad, The St. Louis American, April 17, 2025

A Red Circle, a non-profit organization based in north county, opened its doors to a third space in Pine Lawn on April 10, 2025. The space includes a community garden as well as a kitchen that hosts chefs who teach the community how to bake bread, store food, and other useful kitchen tips. “It’s not just a skill that people learn,” founder and executive director Erica Williams said. “They learn that they belong in the healthy food system. They learn that it doesn’t matter body size or race.” The organization will run its “Good Food Friday” event out of this space, allowing families and residents from all over the region to get vegetables for free.

“Oftentimes, when families are low income, food is put in a box and they’re given it, and they don’t have any choice, any agency,” Williams said. “They might not even know what it is or like what’s in there. But here, you know, it’s set up as a farmer’s market vibe, but also a space where people can just really belong. And then people learn here, too.” The building, a small red house, sits on a hill overlooking the garden.... Community Garden Director Erin Tyus said the amount of work that was put in for the building to be open for business was well worth it to provide the community with a space unlike any other in the town. “It’s not just food, we serve as a third space for the community,” Tyus said.
