

Final Drug Procedures Set

Testing Could Begin Next Week

by Steven L. Brawley editor

The final outline for the UMSL Drug Education and Drug Testing Program procedures will be ready by early next week and testing could begin by the end of the month, according to the athletic department.

After consulting with UM attorneys, Lowe S. MacLean, vice chancellor for student affairs, met with the athletic department to review the procedures.

MacLean said the UMSL document differs from the one used at UMC.

"Procedures are very important to university attorneys because its often the process you use that makes the difference in terms of legal action," MacLean said.

Most of the changes made in the document involved legal terminologies such as "shall" and "may" according to MacLean.

However, the document did have additions made to it.

The Student Health Service, under the direction of Coordinator Phyllis Lee, was added to the process of collecting the urine samples for the female athletes.

Also, after a second positive drug test, the athlete will be able to have a meeting with the athletic director to discuss the consequences of the situation.

After the second positive test, a player may be suspended from play and loose athletic grant-in-aid.

MacLean said athletic director Chuck Smith will be held responsible for the program, therefore he was involved in the drafting of the procedures.

"I don't mind the responsibility," Smith said.

The cost for each individual test will be $14.

The drugs that will be tested for include marijuana, cocaine, opiates, stimulants and amphetamines.

The NCAA, which requires drug testing for post season play, tests for more drugs than UMSL does.

"If we try to test for the same things as the NCAA, we couldn't afford it," Smith said.

The procedures outlined will be in effect throughout this academic year.

"The UMSL program is experimental and will be evaluated after the first year," Chancellor Barnett said.

RESPONSIBILITY: Sandy MacLean, (left), vice chancellor of student affairs, named Athletic Director Chuck Smith to be solely responsible for the new drug testing program.

UMC Lab To Test Samples

by Steven L. Brawley editor

The Enzyme Multiplied Immuno Assay (EMIT) Test will be used by the toxicology labs in Columbia Mo. to screen the urine samples being analyzed as part of the UMSL drug testing program.

The Emit technique will be used as one of two screenings performed on the urine samples submitted by UMSL athletes.

According to Paul Cary, director of the Toxicology Lab at the UMC hospital clinics, there will be a test to analyze drug classes and one to screen drug types.

"At a minimum, each sample will have two unique methods performed on it," Cary said.

He said the lab uses a series of methods to test drugs and if a sample shows positive, then it is tested by a different method for accuracy.

"We feel this type of analytical approach almost eliminates false positives results," Cary said.

The Emit Test analyzes drug classes that are chemically or structurally similar.

"One reason the Emit Test is used as an initial screening is because it is very sensitive," Cary said.

If 100 samples are tested, and three show positive, then Cary said a repeat of the same test is done to see if the right three samples were singled out.

Once a sample is confirmed positive on the Emit Test, then another test is run to locate a single drug compound.

"The reason we confirm positive specimens is because there are some drugs that fit into drug classes that are not illegal," Cary said.

Cary said if the lab did not confirm the first positive with a second test, then it would not know whether the player who submitted the urine sample was taking an over-the-counter drug or was involved in drug abuse.

"The Emit Test should never be used alone. The second test is used to more specifically identify what's there," he said.

Cary said he feels these are not black and white issues and if a test is inconclusive, then it is returned as being a negative result.

"The sample has to demonstrate irrevocably the problem before we call it a positive," he said.

Therefore, if the lab could not use an analytical method to detect drug tracings, only the lab would know a suspicion existed.

"We look at drug testing as trying to be an advocate for the individual submitting the sample," Cary said.

According to Cary, the lab is designed to look at "worst case scenarios."

"We have structured the lab to withstand a legal challenge and deliver legal opinions on the results."

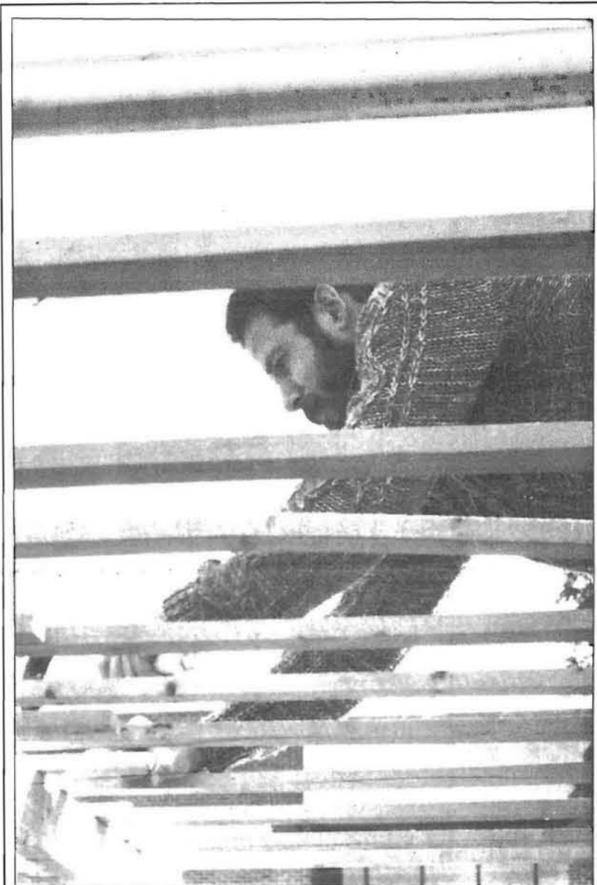

The lab is currently doing drug testing for a wide variety of clients, including university athletic programs.

Last year, approximately five percent of student athletic drug tests performed at the lab were returned with positive results, Cary said.

CONSTRUCTION: Jonas Moses, vice president of the Jewish Student Union, nails a support beam on the roof of the group's Sukkah on the University Center Commons. A Sukkah is a temporary dwelling erected in remembrance of the temporary dwellings built in the desert by Jews after their exodus from Egypt. The shelter is built in conjunction with Sukkot, a Jewish holiday celebrating the harvest, which ends Oct. 24th.

SABC Members Approved For This Year

by Jason A. Kinsley associate news editor

Last Sunday's Student Association meeting was highlighted by the approval of the nominations to the SA Budget committee.

The new members of the committee are Clinetta Albers, Rob Dawes, Connie Foster, Cassandra L. Gay, Terrie Gillespie Kevin Hupp, Edward Kennedy, Ken Meyer and Scott Wedig.

Adrian Cornelius and Andrea Stewart will be serving as alternates.

According to Ken Meyer, Student Association president and new member of the SABC the nominees for the committee were selected by a new set of guidelines designed to represent the various minority groups on campus while still being staffed by the best students available.

"We didn't feel we needed to rely strictly on demographic quotas," said Meyer. "As a result some of the minorities are over-represented."

The applicants for the committee were judged on their answers to the same questions to avoid discrimination and bias.

Meyer said, "The only restriction we had was to only allow two members of the SA assembly to sit on this committee." This was to be a means to decentralize power away from the SA president.

In other business, Robert Dawes of the Grievance Committee proposed the assembly look into the possibility of cleaning up the campus.

His proposal cited the Summit lounge, Lucas Hall and Clarke Hall in particular. Also mentioned were a number of eyesores about the campus grounds.

Meyer proposed the assembly look into the possibility of hiring a law firm to provide legal advice service to the students of the campus.

"The law firm would only be here on an advisory capacity and would not represent students in court," Meyer said.

Continuing, Meyer said "There is a possibility that students would receive a discount on representation by the firm."

Doug McGuire of the School of Optometry in the insuing discussion added, "One of the local law schools representing us would be better for the university."

The next Student Association Assembly meeting is scheduled for November 9 in Room 229 at 2:00.

Student Located In West Virginia

by Patricia M. Carr news editor

Mahrugh Kahn, the UMSL student who had been missing since last month, was located on Wednesday, October 8.

Kahn was found in Mountain View West Virginia, with a Hare Krishna group, according to UMSL Police Chief William Karabas.

Flyers concerning her disappearance were sent to West Virginia, California, Illinois and throughout Missouri by Child Find Missouri. These areas were chosen for various reasons; Illinois because of the proximity to Missouri, West Virginia because Kahn had lived there before and because of the Hare Krishna group, and California because it too has a Hare Krishna farm.

According to a representative of the Hazelwood police department, a police officer in West Virginia saw Kahn going door to door handing out leaflets for the Hare Krishnas. The officer went to the

Mahrugh Kahn

Parabupada Palace of Gold, and spoke with a representative of the Hare Krishna group.

When Kahn was positively identified, the police were able to take her into custody because she was under eighteen years of age. According to West Virginia law she was still a juvenile.

Tulsi, a representative of the Hare Krishna Society in Moundsville West Virginia said, "She (Mahrugh) told us her parents lived in Bombay (India) and she couldn't get in touch with them."

He added, "Its normally my policy to have anyone who is young (under 18) contact their parents by calling or writing and let them know where their children are."

"She had (identification) that said she was 18. And if her parents were really in Bombay, it would have taken weeks to get in contact with them. The mail takes weeks to go all the way over there," Tulsi said.

Kahn told police she went to West Virginia voluntarily. She took a Bi-State bus to the depot and then took a Greyhound bus to West Virginia.

Kahn's parents went to West Virginia on Wednesday to talk with her. According to Tulsi and the Hazelwood police department, she came back to St. Louis with her parents on Wednesday night.

The police still are waiting for a full statement from Kahn.

Drug Testing A Reality

All the waiting is almost over. Drug testing, the national bandwagon of the 1980's, has come to UMSL.

After weeks of meetings and roundtable discussions, the athletic department will subject itself to the whims of the UM Curators and the NCAA.

The athletic department does sincerely care about its players. But can the same be said of the UM system and the NCAA?

The question over whether this policy is right or wrong has passed. Each individual must decide this for themselves.

However, there must be apprehension among the players, who are faced with the reality of the situation.

If the American Civil Liberties Union could find a player on this campus to take the policy to court, it is almost certain they would take the case.

But, the players only have one objective, that is to participate in the athletic program in which they excel.

If an academic department on this campus was being subjected to this sort of treatment, there would both students and faculty waiting outside the ACLU doors.

That's a shame. The athletes just want to play the game, even at the cost of drug testing. But, the academic community, who is usually involved with issues of social concern, are just letting this one go by.

SA Should Set Agenda

It's time to get down to business in the Student Association.

Don't get us wrong, we've seen what you've done with the SA constitution and the SABC, but frankly, those things have been neglected for a long time, and everyone knew they needed to be done. We're glad you did them, but it's time to move on.

During the campaign, the main focus of the Meyer-Lacostelo ticket was UMSL's problems. But what have we done?

Perhaps the Student Association should physically make a list of projects to complete, then complete one before devoting a lot of time and energy to the next.

Making an agenda available to the student body of what you are working on would be beneficial.

At the moment, there are no set of clear-cut priorities that appear to be at the front of the SA agenda.

We can't help but think that taking things one at a time would be more effective than having too many irons in the fire.

What about parking? What about the condition of the lots themselves? What about handicapped accessibility to our buildings?

Now, we know the SA is aware of these problems, but exactly what is being done to make progress on any of these issues?

True, Bugg Lake has taken a lot of time lately, but compared to parking, is that a real priority for most students?

Maybe the Student Association is working on these problems and we just haven't heard. Then again, maybe not.

FACULTY EDITORIALS

Faculty members who are interested in writing guest editorials are invited to contribute to the editorial page on a weekly basis.

Editorials, on specific current events and issues, can be drawn from specific fields of study in all academic areas.

Please contact Current editor Steven L. Brawley if interested. Editorials may be edited or excluded due to space limitations. Editorials should be submitted in writing no later than 12:00 NOON Monday prior to the date of publication. Editorials must be signed, and no editorial will be run without giving due credit to the author.

LETTERS POLICY

The Current welcomes all letters to the editor. The writer's student number and phone number must be included. Non-students also must sign their letters, but only need to add their phone number. Letters should be not more than two typed pages in length.

No unsigned letters will be published. Names for published letters will be withheld upon request, but letters with which the writer's name is published will receive first preference.

Responsibility for letters to the editor belongs to the individual writer. The Current is not responsible for controversial material in the letters, but maintains the right to refuse publication of letters judged by the editorial staff to be in poor taste. No letters with libelous material will be published. Letters may be edited for space limitations.

Letters may be dropped off at the Current offices, 1 Blue Metal Office Building, or the University Center Information Desk. They may also be mailed to Letters to the Editor, Current, 1 Blue Metal Office Building, 8001 Natural Bridge Road, St. Louis, Mo. 63121.

Believes Media Declaring Its Own War

by Jim Schwartz

Enough is enough! If I hear one more politician declare a "war on drugs," I think I'll be sick.

Now, don't get me wrong, I realize that there's a serious problem. But, the fact is that our nation's drug problem has been pretty bad for a while; it's just that now it's getting adequate press.

But did the media stop there? Heck no, now we're subjected to television specials like "Cocaine Country," and "Crack Street." All of which do the same interviewing of ex-addicts, showing of statistics, and the offering of few real solutions to the problem.

America's drug problem isn't anything that anyone who doesn't live in a cave doesn't know about. The effects are obvious, yet the media is trying to make a new story out of an old one. And what scares me is all the people who get off on watching cocaine documentaries. People like to see how destitute people live - it probably makes them feel better about themselves. This makes me wonder about the intellect of America's television audience, and not in a good way.

And, of course, resident drug abuse expert Nancy Reagan feels it's her place to spread the good words of Ronnie's "War on Drugs." Even though Reagan won't be running for the presidency again, it sure can't hurt the George Bush future. Harriet Woods is another politician among many who has jumped on the anti-drug bandwagon. The question is, how long will such politicians stay on the band wagon after the election?

What I'm getting at is that we need less talk and more action if we are really serious about doing something.

For instance, drug education at the primary school levels. I applaud the effort of local news stations in helping parents to deal with their children's drug problems, but we need more of the same. We should also raid more cocaine plantations outside of the U.S., and even more important, develop better parent-child relationships.

The first two suggestions are up to our local and federal governments, the last is up to us.

Never Too Old To Believe In Monsters

NEWS TO ME

by Craig A. Martin
managing editor

Most people will say that by the time you reach 21 or 22, you are too old to believe in monsters.

Wrong. I'm 22 and I have a monster alive and well in my house. As a matter of fact, I'd be willing to bet that you have one of the same kinds of monsters at your house.

His name is "Monstrous Hosiery," more commonly known as the sock monster, and he lives behind the clothes dryer.

His main function in life is to wait until you leave and then take one sock out of every fourth or fifth load of laundry, just to bum you out. He usually returns them one way or another, but he has a great deal of fun watching you look for them.

The sock monster lives on a diet of small spiders and lint. His mating habits are still a mystery, but there are some who believe that he is asexual and multiplies with spores or pollen or something. (This explains why he is usually in a bad mood.)

Some people actually try to beat the sock monster at his own game.

My fiancée, for example, safety pins her socks together in little pairs before washing them, in an attempt to thwart the sock monster.

Her sock monster must be stupid, because mine would surely find a way to get the socks off the pin. Either that, or he would start removing whole pairs, and I would begin losing socks at an alarming rate.

She also lives in an apartment, which would make her sock monster a laundromat sock monster. They are very busy guys and are easier to fool.

The sock monster, however does not confine his fun to the laundry room or basement.

He is the one who gets up fifteen minutes before you do every morning in the winter, and rubs ice all over the bathroom floor.

He is the one who puts the empty ice trays back into the freezer. (That one really ticks me off.)

When something happens in your house and all of the kids deny doing it, and you know you didn't do it, it was him.

The sock monster breaks your shoestrings, hides one of your gloves and has always eaten the last of whatever it is you wanted to eat.

But perhaps what annoys me the most is the game we play every time I leave the house. The sock monster sees that I am ready to leave, and he hides my keys.

The game is, if I find them and still make it to where I am going on time, I win. If I don't find them soon enough to keep me from being late, then he wins.

So far the score is sock monster: 1468; Craig: 7. So, if I am ever supposed to meet you somewhere, and I'm late, don't get mad at me. It's his fault.

Jazz Not On The Levee: Show Will Go On At Kiener Plaza

Zella Jackson Price, a St. Louis gospel singer, leads off the "Jazz on the Levee" with a noon concert.

"Tracer," a St. Louis jazz-fusion trio, is scheduled for a 3 p.m. show during the Jazz Fest October 19. Pth Williams (front) is the group's pianist. Darrell Mixon (left) plays drums; Gary Sykes is the group's bassist.

by Phyllis Allen
features editor

"Jazz on the Levee" may not have been the correct choice in naming this year's Jazz Fest, presented as part of the St. Louis Arts Festival.

In spite of the recent flooding of Wharf Street (Leonor K. Sullivan Boulevard), the jazz festival will go on. But it won't be on the levee.

The festival will take place at Kiener Plaza October 19, said Jo Ann Collins, festival chairperson.

The program will follow stages of jazz development, beginning with gospel singer Zella Jackson Price, and continuing with jazz/blues singer Mae Wheeler.

The jazz program will continue with saxophonist Freddie Washington leading a mainstream ensemble, and "Tracer," one of St. Louis' premier jazz-fusion groups. The program will culminate in a John Hicks grand piano performance at 4 p.m.

Emcee for the program will be Richard Gaugert of the St. Louis Art Museum and host of "Reading Aloud" on radio station KWMU.

Price, the first performer on Sunday's bill, is a St. Louis native who has her own daily show on KIRL. She was featured in the film "Say Amen Everybody" and leads off the festivities with a noon performance.

Price, who has five children, says she was inspired to sing gospel after hearing her mother and Mother Willie Mae Ford Smith sing.

Another local artist, Mae Wheeler, known as "Lady Jazz," will appear at 1 p.m. Wheeler's beginnings were in gospel music, but she branched out as a professional singer to do blues and early ragtime as well as jazz.

Although the location has been changed, Wheeler said, "My three wishes for the day of the Fest are for the river to go down, the sun to shine all day, and everyone to come out and see us."

At 2 p.m. Freddie Washington will appear. Washington, also a psychologist for the East St. Louis School System, began playing professionally at age 16.

Washington, who has performed in jazz groups throughout the St. Louis area, has also played in Carnegie Hall and the Apollo Theatre with the group Mongo Santamaria.

"Tracer" is a trio composed of bassist Darrell Mixon, drummer-percussionist-composer Gary Sykes, a veteran performer, has also participated in Oliver Nelson Jazz Workshops at Washington University. He can be heard on recordings with several musical groups.

Williams, a graduate of Webster University, has played the piano since age nine. He has won numerous competitions in classical music as well as being adept at jazz.

A St. Louis native, John Hicks, the afternoon's featured performer, has been playing piano professionally since age 16.

Besides composing his own works, the pianist, now based in Brooklyn, often accompanies such vocalists as Dionne Warwick and Betty Carter.

Hicks is not limited to one specific type of music; he draws from jazz and classical to make his own personal style.

Hicks will begin his performance with a solo on the grand piano; then, in a reunion with his St. Louis players, invite Willie Aikens, Sonny Hamp and John Mixon to the stage.

Collins is proud of the musicians lined up for Sunday's program.

And, she says, "I was happy to work with the St. Louis Arts Festival on an event that would recognize the world-class jazz musicians we have right here in St. Louis."

She was also excited to bring in Hicks as the featured performer. "It's nice to feature a performer that, in some instances, may be better known nationally and internationally than in his own back yard."

The Jazz Fest is free and open to the public. The program runs from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday.

The Jazz Fest is welcomed by KWMU radio station and presented by Michelob and the St. Louis Arts Festival. The Festival continues through October 26.

KWMU has tentatively scheduled interviews with several of the artists for Saturday, October 18.

Sykes and pianist-composer Pth Williams.

Mixon, who studied music theory at UMSL, composes music and has recorded several albums.

TRUST ME

My father always used to tell me that my favorite kind of humor was bathroom humor. I can see why he said that; after all, I once wrote a column about the "Mad Whizzer."

One of my favorite childhood memories concerns my pet turtle Buster. My dad was yelling about my turtle making a mess of the basement, and he told me to hand Buster over. Buster and I were pretty upset, and Buster was so upset that he peed all over my dear old dad.

I can't go to the zoo anymore, without thinking of the time I went, to the Elephant House and a rhinoceros drained his vein on a curious passing visitor. I bet that guy didn't gawk the animals too closely after that.

So seeing how I'm really kinda busy this week, I thought that I would share an example of one my favorite bathroom humor stories with you.

This story is taken from a pre-Johnny Carson Tonight Show. Jack Paar was the host at this time, and it has been rumored that the airing of this story led to his firing from the show (remember this was when television could still be watched in the presence of the kiddies). The following is the story that Paar told.

An English lady, while visiting Switzerland was looking for a room and she asked the schoolmaster if he could recommend any to her. He took her to see several rooms and when everything was settled the lady returned to her home to make the final preparations to move.

When she arrived home, she thought suddenly occurred to her that she had not seen a W.C. or watercloset, more commonly known to us in the United States as a bathroom. She immediately wrote a note to the schoolmaster asking him, if there was a W.C. around. The schoolmaster was a very poor student of English, so he asked the parish priest if he could help in the matter.

Together they tried to discover the meaning of the letters W.C. The

Current Feature Winner Berardino: The TKE That Cheers

On September 8 and 9, at the UMSL Expo, the Current held a contest where students, staff and faculty could place their name in a drawing — the winner of which would be the subject of a feature article.

Steve Berardino, a sophomore cheerleader from the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity, won the contest.

When this bureau first tried to contact Steve to set up an interview, it got an obnoxious answering machine message that sounded like a blue-blood from London doing his best to impersonate an American college student.

"Fantastic," was the thought. "He's a wisecracker who likes to play with tape recorders."

First impressions aren't always correct. Steve is a sober individual, even though he describes himself as "hyper."

He graduated from CBC High school with the class of '85, and is now in his third semester at UMSL. He joined the TKE fraternity almost immediately after enrolling here.

"I looked at all the other fraternities," he said, "and the TKEs were the only ones who would accept me as I was. They didn't try to mold me into someone else."

Steve is also on the cheerleading squad. He joined because one of his frat brothers knew Carol McGraw, the cheerleading coach, and suggested that since he was so hyper, he should join the squad to vent his energies.

He says he takes a lot of jeering for being on the squad.

"It almost kept me from joining," he said. "People think it's just a lot of yelling and cheering, but it really is physically demanding."

Steve is carrying 12 hours of

"Right now, I'm looking at where I want to go with my education."

classes. "I'm here from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. most days," he said. "Cheerleading, the fraternity and studying take up most of my time."

Consequently, Steve says that he doesn't have any hobbies other than occasional scuba diving.

As one might expect, there aren't a great many places in Missouri to indulge in this past-time, so he can't do it as much as he would like.

"About the only thing that makes me different from any other UMSL student is the fact that my mother goes to school here," he confessed.

She is studying toward a bachelor's degree in nursing.

Steve's mom is currently in her first semester, so at the moment, he outranks her. It makes the arrangement more than just a little bizarre.

He wouldn't specify who gets the better grades; one can appreciate the risk that would involve.

Steve has not declared a major and is uncertain of his future plans. "Right now, I'm looking at where I want to go with my education," he said.

"I think I'm going to have to make a few career decisions this semester."

"I haven't decided on a major yet, but I am working toward a minor in business."

Steve said he would like to work in a business-related field, but in a profession where he is dealing with people rather than just facts and figures.

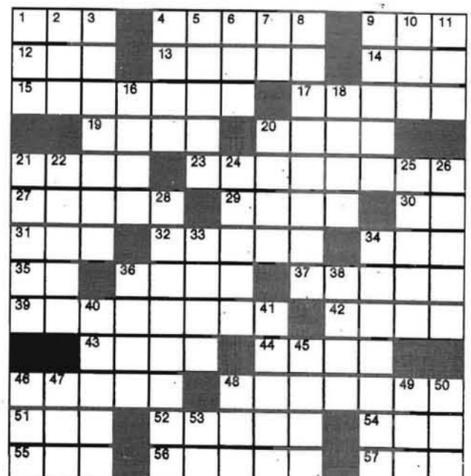

Steve Berardino, UMSL sophomore, is a member of the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity and a cheerleader whose mother also attends UMSL. Berardino won the feature contest sponsored by the Current.

A girl who appeared to be Steve's girlfriend sat in on the interview. She said that Steve has a sensitivity that would ruin his playboy image if it became public knowledge.

Even if his reputation is at stake, Steve appears to be more than first impressions would indicate—he's not just a wise guy who puts funny messages on his answering machine.

Rivermen Win Bud Classic, 7th Straight Game

The University of Missouri-St. Louis soccer Rivermen again were the kings of the UMSL Budweiser Classic last weekend, defeating Arkansas-Little Rock 2-0 in the championship game Saturday night at UMSL.

It was the sixth time in eight years UMSL has won the tournament. The Rivermen fell 1-0 in the final game to Barry University a year ago.

The victory extended UMSL's winning streak to seven games and gives them an 8-2-0 record. Arkansas-Little Rock, a first year team, fell to 7-2-1.

UMSL dropped games to St. Louis University and McKendree early in the season. SLU was nationally ranked, but Coach Don Dallas said the McKendree game is the only true eyesore on the UMSL record.

Winning the Bud Classic championship not only extended the Rivermen's winning streak, but it also ended more than two weeks of inactivity because inclement weather.

"They were a much better team than I anticipated," Dallas said of Little Rock. "For a first-year team they were very good. They definitely were the next best team in the tournament."

Terry Brown, who has been hobbled with a bad ankle much of the season, still managed to extend his scoring streak to six games when he netted the game's first goal at 30 minutes, 50 seconds.

Brown scored on a penalty kick after Mark Reiter was pulled down in the penalty area by Little Rock's Eduardo Quinones.

"He's a very good player," Dallas said of Brown. "He was hurt at the beginning of the year, but he can do it all for you."

For his efforts Brown was named MIAA co-player of the week along with Quinn Ross of Northeast Missouri State University.

The Rivermen picked up their second goal in the second half when Boyd Buchek scored his seventh goal of the season at 57:19. Buchek picked up a loose ball in the crease to score after Little Rock's goalkeeper mishandled a shot by Tom Wilson.

UMSL goalkeeper Jeff Robben recorded the shutout.

Tulsa defeated Southwest Missouri State 1-0 in the third-place game.

A milestone was reached Friday night as Tom Wilson played in his 65th game as a Rivermen. The old record was set in 1978 by Nick Traina. Mike Malone trails Wilson by only three games and will move into second place on the list this week. "I think the big layoff between games gave some of our players with nagging injuries a chance to recoup," Dallas said. "We're hoping all our injuries are behind us now."

Dallas said Brown, who was nursing a sore ankle before the layoff, and Wilson, who was suffering from shin splints, were healthy entering the tournament.

With all healthy, all's well, according to Dallas.

"We really limited them to very few good scoring opportunities," he said. "I thought this was the most consistent we played in regards to the full 90 minutes. This was our best effort."

Despite playing with nagging injuries prior to this weekend, the Rivermen were able to secure the No. 18 national ranking among NCAA Division II teams and the No. 5 slot in the Midwest Region.

Those rankings aren't in jeopardy with the Bud Classic championship, and the way Dallas talks, things are just getting started.

Dallas said he finally has a set lineup after juggling players through much of the early season.

"I think that will help," he said.

The Rivermen will host Benedictine College Saturday night.

RECORD BREAKER: Tom Wilson takes a shot in Saturday's game against Arkansas-Little Rock. Wilson broke the all-time UMSL games played record Friday night by playing in his 65th game as a Rivermen. The UMSL team won the Budweiser Classic with victories over Tulsa and Arkansas-Little Rock.

A REAL KILLER: Sharon Morlock spikes during the UMSL Classic. Morlock had 73 kills last week and was named MIAA co-player of the week.

The UMSL volleyball team picked up their second tournament trophy of the season as they won the UMSL Classic Saturday, raising its record to 18-9.

The Riverwomen defeated CBC of Memphis, Harris-Stowe, and Chicago State. Chicago State was tabbed as the pre-tournament favorite by head coach Denise Silvester.

UMSL faced CBC again in the championship match and defeated them 12-15, 15-2 and 15-12.

Sharon Morlock has continued to play outstanding for the Riverwomen and was named Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association co-player of the week. She led the squad with 73 kills last week.

The mental attitude of the team has been a key factor.

"I think our confidence level is back up there," Silvester said. "We had a great week."

The team has made things tough on themselves by getting off to a slow start in a number of matches.

"I'm hoping that some of these tough matches are making us mature on the court," Silvester said. "Even if we lost the first game, we're keeping our composure."

The Riverwomen have come from behind to win nine matches in which they lost the first game, including two in the UMSL Classic. A year ago the squad won only three matches in which they lost the first game.

The UMSL squad travels to Jefferson City to face Lincoln University on Friday and then to Bolivar, Mo., to play Southwest Baptist.

Kickers Pick Up Pace

by Dave Brown sports editor

The lack of scoring that was so prominent early in the season was forgotten last week, as the soccer Riverwomen scored 11 goals while winning two games and tying a third.

UMSL had its best offensive performance of the season beating Northeast Missouri State 5-0 in a makeup game.

They then travelled to Texas and beat Houston Baptist 5-0 and tied Texas A&M 1-1 on a wet field.

"We hit the bar three times against A&M," said coach Ken Hudson. "If we hadn't played in such a downpour we might have gone on to win."

Kim Clark now has five shutouts for the season.

Cathy Roche, who had seven goals a year ago and was expected to be an offensive force this season, came alive and scored two goals last week and picked up an assist.

Rita Allmeyer, a junior back, picked up the first two goals of her college career.

Stephanie Gabbert, a sophomore transfer from the University of Central Florida, also scored two goals last week and is tied with Terri Schroeder for the team lead in goals with four.

Cathy Roche

"Roche really had a good week," Hudson said. "Rita also really picked up. Gabbert played her usual steady game. Kathy Casso also did a good job."

Hudson sees a number of reasons for the turnaround.

"The competition was not as tough," he said. Most of the Riverwomen losses have been to nationally ranked teams.

"We're playing together now. We're not letting things get in our way," he said. "We didn't let things (the rain) bother us."

"We've improved 100 percent over the past few weeks," Hudson said.

While it would take a miracle for the Riverwomen to receive a playoff berth, they still have some reasons to play hard according to Hudson.

"We're looking to build on to next year," he said. "They're also playing for their own pride."

"No one we have left to play has ever beaten us. We still have a challenging schedule left," Hudson said.

Challenging could be an understatement. This week they face Maryville College which is ranked No. 18 in NCAA Division III and also play a tough SIU-Edwardsville squad which was ranked earlier in the season.

Both games come on the road which may work to their advantage. The Riverwomen are 4-2-1 on the road, but only 2-3-1 at home.

1973 Glory Days Revisited

by Steve Cassell reporter

There are a number of trophies lining the walls of the Mark Twain building, UMSL's sports complex. They not only are valued by the school and the winning athletes and coaches, but all of them signify achievement and hard work.

A certain trophy near the center of one of the cases isn't the biggest or the best looking, but it's meaning flows over the others.

The inscription on the trophy reads "Men's Soccer National Champions 1973." It was the first national championship for men's soccer and it has been the only.

The '73 Rivermen went 11-0-3 under the guidance of Don Dallas, who was in his sixth season as head coach.

"It has been the highlight of my career," said Dallas. "Many of the teams to follow came close, but only he has won it all."

In the final game, UMSL took on the University of California. The game was played in Springfield, Massachusetts.

The '73 Rivermen defeated California 3-0. Kevin Missey scored two goals and Mark LeGrand got the other. Frank Tulinski was the goalkeeper for the '73 Rivermen. Both Missey and Tulinski were voted to the first team All-America squad that year.

Throughout the '73 season the Rivermen were ranked fifth even when they were the only undefeated team in the nation. The polls didn't bother the team according to Dallas, the Rivermen just went out and played their game.

These guys played because they loved the game. They won for themselves and their coach. This group of athletes were true champions.

Many of them are still living in St. Louis. Missey has recently opened his own business in the area. Tulinski is the head soccer coach at an area high school. Ken Hudson is the head coach of the women's soccer team here at UMSL. Ed Fleming is a trainer for the St. Louis Cardinals football team.

They may not see that trophy anymore, but they will always share the meaning behind it. They were the best in college soccer in 1973.

Since that championship season the Rivermen have come close, but have not been able to win it all. If the Rivermen of this year continue their winning ways, they may have a legitimate shot at the title.

CHAMPS: Ken Hudson, now head UMSL women's soccer coach, and Tim Smith hold up the 1973 NCAA Division II Championship trophy. The championship set a winning tradition which has been sustained over the years.
