Curators Remove Tuition Cap

by Deon Wortham reporter

University officials agree with a recent decision made by the Board of Curators that will generate $29 million and remove a cap on tuition.

The curators adopted University of Missouri President C. Peter Magrath's plan in December of last year.

"We must face the possibility of significant increases in our educational fees for those students who can afford to contribute more to their education," Magrath said in an article in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch last December. Magrath plans to ask the chancellors of the four UM campuses to make suggestions concerning which programs they will cut.

The proposal has sparked a heated discussion between two curators, Sam B. Cook of Jefferson City and Peter H. Raven of St. Louis.

Cook said he had "some doubts" if the chancellors would actually find programs on their campuses to cut or reduce and that curators might need "outside assistance in this endeavor."

Raven said curators should try to "move away from the cartoon-like characterization of positions on this board" specifically that one side "wants to spend all the money in the world" while the other wants to "cut to the quick" from "hordes" of "wasteful programs."

The issue has put Cook and Raven on opposite sides of the board over money problems.

Cook wants the university to make do with the money it has and do fewer things better. Raven wants the university to reduce all the expenses it can and that a "tax increase is the only way to make headway."

Raven said he considered Magrath's plan a "reasonable plan of action."

He added that the board did not have the "capacity" to decide which programs are most important to the university campuses.

UM—St. Louis officials said that it is too early to say what might happen as a result of the plan adopted by the curators.

Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs, Sandy MacLean, said "the decision simply states that university campuses don't have the authority to set their own fees."

"The board said that we are no longer restricted to the Higher Education Price Index (HEPI). We could only raise fees a little higher than inflation costs," MacLean said. "The curators adopted plan, which will remove the cap off tuition or educational fees, is acting according to the National Price Index (NPI) which allows fees to be raised greater than inflation."

MacLean also added that the board's decision is the "only way we can cover the cost in order to upgrade educational facilities, computer costs, salaries and the cost of the maintenance of the various educational equipment." He also said that if "the decision is put into effect, it may affect both full-time and part-time students."

"I want the fees to stay as low as possible, but we need money to get the job done," said MacLean. "The governor said that this has been a lean year for revenue in the state of Missouri. As a citizen of this state I would be willing to pay higher taxes to increase revenues, particularly for higher education,"

MacLean adds that the decision will not affect the student activity fee, only educational fees, but this decision may affect student enrollment at the campuses.

"If students don't have the access to funds to help pay for their education, we may see a decrease in enrollment," MacLean said.

If the decision is put into effect it will be for the school year 1991-92.

Mark Nugent, Director of Financial Aid, said that if the plan goes into effect "there is going to be a need to increase financial aid."

"About 30 percent of UM—St. Louis students receive some form of federal aid," Nugent said. In the future "a large number of students who didn't normally apply for federal aid will."

Magrath said the university could generate $29 million each year by:

- Making changes in the faculty-staff benefit program that would be worth $10 million more than the existing plan.
- Counting on a $9 million increase in state support from a revision in the Coordinating Board for Higher Education funding formula.
- Seeking an additional $3 million in private gifts.
- Reallocating $5 million.
- Implementing an instructional fee for computer users to yield $2 million a year.

Some information was compiled from the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Program Honors King Holiday

By Deon Wortham reporter

On Monday Jan.15, UM—St. Louis will celebrate the birthday of the late, slain civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

King, Nobel Peace Prize winner in 1964, President of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference (SCLC), and architect of the non-violent civil rights movement was assassinated April 4, 1968 in Memphis, Tenn.

Despite the controversial decision made last fall by the Board of Curators concerning the King holiday issue, UM—St. Louis and the other three UM campuses will have their own individual commemoration ceremonies.

The commemorative ceremony here will begin at 11 a.m. at the J.C. Penney Building located on the north campus.

The day-long program includes an exhibit, a video and a formal presentation which will be presented by the St. Louis Black Repertory Company and the UM—St. Louis African American Ensemble.

The King ceremony will focus on the past and recent civil rights decisions by the U.S. Supreme Court. The event will be held in room 229 of the J.C. Penney Building.

The King holiday programs are part of the Monday Noon Series, a cultural enrichment series which will be presented each Monday afternoon until April 30. These activities will be open to both the campus and the outside community free of charge.

The Monday Noon Series is sponsored by Academic Affairs.

Blanche M. Touhill, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs said in a recent memorandum to the campus community "Monday Jan 15, 1990 is the official day on which our nation pauses to reflect upon the numerous contributions made by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. to improve opportunities for all human beings."

The university has no classes scheduled for that day.

University officials said that King was the spokesperson for African American leadership.

Norman Seay, Assistant to the Chancellor for Minority Affairs said "Dr. King was a religious leader from the south, an elegant speaker, who believed in first class citizenship for African-Americans, Hispanic/Latino-Americans and others. He himself, an Afro-American, witnessed the hatred of the Jim Crowism south." "King was interested in the affairs of other people, in which he fought for the rights of the poor, against race discrimination and American involvement in the Vietnam War," said Seay. "He was an inspiration, and a fighter using non-violence as a form of protest. It is important to remember where we have been in history."

Seay, a veteran in civil rights, met King in 1963 to help rally St. Louis support for the march on Washington D.C.

He says that in the past "we looked to the courts for justice, but with the recent decision by the U.S. Supreme Court, we are now leaning more towards Congress to keeping its commitment concerning human rights."

He added that Dr. King was an "African-American drum major, who believed and lived for equal opportunity for people around the world, and who, if were alive today, would probably like to see more Asian and Hispanic Americans in management positions."

Betty Lee, Director of University Communications said Dr. King was an extremely charismatic person, who had excellent command of the English language, a person who was committed to human rights in which he became a leader of that cause."

Lee said "he jerked the conscience of America, that has remained racist throughout the history of this country."

"He put a dent into this dilemma that continues to plague our nation."

Janice L. Vails, Special Assistant to the Vice Chancellor for Academic and Student Affairs said that King was "a man of vision with a dream for mankind, a courageous and charismatic person, a man of peace who was committed to the movement."

Vails said that "he was a spokesperson for African-Americans, and when he died, the dream for a lot of African-Americans also died."

Vails, who is also a veteran for civil rights, said, "for the past 16 years there have been Republicans in the White House and the general tone was not to focus on those who have not. Racism is becoming more socially acceptable."

"Covert racism exists in America today," added Vails.

Turner Advises Grads To Prepare for Change

by Kevin Kleine editor

Former Central Intelligence Agency Director Adm. Stansfield Turner delivered the wintery commencement address to 979 graduates Jan. 7.

An honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree was awarded to William E. Cornelius, chairman and chief executive officer of union electric, for his contributions to the community. Cornelius has been involved in many civic projects including chairing the Leadership Gifts Division for St. Louis Children's Hospital Building fund in 1981 and more recently the 1987 Old Newsboys Day.

Turner advised the new graduates to be prepared for change in their careers.

"Now is not too soon for each of you prospective graduates to begin setting your next set of goals," Turner said. Because the mark you will leave on our country on your community, will be determined largely by your persistence in pursuing whatever goals you set for yourself,"

Turner recalled a chat with a 93 year-old friend of his parents that asked him of his goals for the next 25 years. Turner realized that here was a 93-year old man still looking to the future.

Turner stressed that changes in ones life often affect the person's career course. Turner entered a liberal arts college with the intention of going on to law school when WW II broke out. He joined the military two months after starting college.

"After the war, I decided to stay in the military," Turner said. That was the last thing I had in mind when I set my original goal of becoming a lawyer."

Turner said that three times in his naval career he had decided to change his goals. He joked that after 31 years of deliberation he decided to make it a career.

"Then the phone call came," he said. "The phone call said, 'Be in the White House tomorrow morning, the president of the United States wants to see you,"

After his term as CIA director, Turner began yet another career as a writer, lecturer and teacher.

"all of these I have found challenging and exciting, but they are all a long way from that original goal of becoming a lawyer."

Financial Aid Cuts Part of Bush Plan

(CPS) Nearly 200,000 students could lose grants and another 1 million could get reduced grants during the 1990-91 academic year under the new federal college budget signed into law by President George Bush.

Others predicted obscure rule changes in the new budget also would provoke more banks to drop out of the Stafford Loan program.

On paper, the budget increased minimally when Bush signed it Nov. 21.

Of the $24 billion set aside for education in the law—which provides money for the U.S. Department of Education for the Oct. 1, 1989 through Sept. 20, 1990 fiscal year—$10.6 billion was for post-secondary education, a 2.2 percent increase over last year's budget.

But the small increase in funds for the department, which administers most federal school programs, was more than wiped out by the inflation rate of 4.5 percent.

"The overall numbers on the budget are not very informative," said a House Appropriations Committee aide who asked not to be named. "Although there are increases in the budget, there are more students applying for financial aid."

Almost as soon as the bill became law, automatic cuts triggered by the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law lopped another $226 million off the Education Department budget.

The ACE projects the budget will force 192,000 students to lose their Pell Grants next school year. About 1 million more will have their Pell Grants reduced, while 12,000 students will lose Supplemental Education Opportunity Grants, 16,000 Work-Study grants, 3,000 Perkins Student Loans and 3,000 students will be cut off from State Student Incentive Grants.

"We think [the cuts] are harmful in a lot of respects," Becky Timmons of the American Council on Education (ACE) said. The biggest problem is the Pell Grant shortfall. We already have less than what is needed to fund the maximum grants of $2,300."

Congress appropriated $4.48 billion for Pell Grants, up from $4.42 billion last year, Timmons said. After the Gramm-Rudman "sequester" cuts, however, the amount available for the 3 million students who get Pell Grants this year will be a little less than last year.

Last spring, ACE and other education groups warned that budget woes would soon force schools to stop giving students the maximum amount of money they could get in Pell Grants for this school year.

Now Timmons worries the same thing will happen for next school year, especially for students from middle-income families who need the grants.

The shortage "clearly has consequences for the budget submitted next year. There is the possibility that the maximum [Pell Grant] award will be reduced in the future," she said.

"There is the possibility that [the budget] could cause a small reduction in grants," Tom Skelly of the Education Department said.

Timmons blamed the higher education budget losses on the government's unwillingness to raise taxes to get the money to fund the programs.

"In part, this was an almost inevitable outcome of the president's stance on no new taxes," she said.

President Bush initially vetoed the education budget Oct. 21 because it included an amendment that would have allowed women who had become pregnant through rape or incest to use Medicaid funds to get abortions. Bush, who is against all abortion except in cases in which the mother's life is in danger, refused to sign the bill.

Congress subsequently stripped the abortion amendment from the bill, and resubmitted it to the president, who signed it Nov. 21.

The budget contains no new major college programs, and is not dramatically different from the budget Bush first proposed at the start of the appropriations process last February.

At the time, college lobbyists in Washington, D.C. were disappointed the president was advocating slight cuts in most campus programs, but they seemed almost relieved Bush had dropped President Reagan's efforts to make drastic cuts.

During his first six years in office, President Reagan had asked Congress to slash as much as 50 percent of the federal college budget. Congress did in fact accept many of the president's recommendations in the early 1980's, eliminating or drastically reducing the budgets for Student Social Security, National Direct Student Loans, campus housing and library programs, black col-

Barnett Refuses Delaware Job

by Barb Braun news editor

Chancellor Marguerite Ross Barnett has withdrawn as a candidate for the post of president of the University of Delaware in Newark.

"I have thought carefully about my own candidacy and have decided to request that my name be withdrawn from consideration," Barnett wrote in a letter to a trustee search committee at the University of Delaware dated Dec. 3.

Her letter gave no reason for her withdrawal. She expressed her respect for the University of Delaware and wished the trustee committee well in their search for a president.

Barnett responded to UM—St. Louis faculty concerns that she was interested in a new job by saying that she loved St. Louis and had no immediate plans to leave. Barnett, who is paid $104,700 a year, was passed over in November 1989 for the presidency of the University of Florida at Gainesville. She was one of two finalists for the job.

Marguerite R. Barnett

No Guts, No Glory

With the start of a new decade, it's good to see someone finally attack the problem of how to raise taxes with some degree of courage and intelligence. Missouri Speaker of the House, Bob Griffin, is one of the people on shaky political ground by proposing a tax hike. Griffin has found a way to remove himself from directly affecting taxes by proposing that a committee made up of special interest groups should propose where taxes should be raised, i.e., corporate, sales, etc.

Television reports has labled this session of the general assembly one that won't do anything to change the status quo on any controversial issues. Why are we paying these people to sit on their butts and waste our tax dollars. Everyone in the state legislature should be trying to sell the idea of a tax increase to their constituency because without an increase, services will slowly disappear, education will suffer and then the people who screamed at the idea of new taxes will be wondering why Johnny can't read. With Missouri being a low-tax state, it gives us room to raise taxes without losing the income of big business.

Governor John Ashcroft has said that he will make his own decisions on taxes. The only thing Ashcroft has decided to do is avoid the issue entirely. Sen. Roger Wilson D-Columbia probably summed up the situation best when he said, "Hating taxes may be very popular, but it's also helped diminish the quality of services in the state." It seems that every candidate for public office makes "tax hike" a four-letter-word, then has to sneak around Jefferson City trying to find ways to raise taxes without his constituents finding out.

College administrators across the state will be pushing for more funds from the state this year. Hopefully, legislators will take heed to their cries for help. Missouri already ranks abysmally low in funding for higher education (47th out of 50), so now is the time to do something about this national embarrassment.

UM System President C. Peter Magrath said that he hopes that the university will come out of this session of the legislature with enough appropriations so as not to lose any ground and maybe make some modest improvements. That is very optimistic thinking on Magrath's part since we have legislators like Jean Dixon who think legislating morality is more important than a good education. Locally, Jean Mathews is on Dixon's level. Serving on committees to study pornography is nothing more than a political farce when there are much more significant issues. How many X-rated movies do these people have to watch to realize that what we really need is a better education system.

Gifted Stars Brought Joy And Laughter To All

Oblivion

by Shawn M. Foppe
managing editor

When a great movie star passes away, it grabs headlines. But in a society where Andy Warhol's prediction that everyone will be famous for fifteen minutes nears actuality, someone of notoriety dies in that same time span.

Once in a while, however, a star of such great magnitude passes that we are forced to pause and take stock. This year the lights dimmed on Bette Davis, Lucille Ball, Laurence Olivier, and Irving Berlin forever.

Why, you may ask, are their deaths more important than all the others. Because with their passing, a generation of great entertainers and superstars dwindles.

Bette Davis was the bitch to end all bitches. This "legendary terror" gave new meaning to the term ill-mannered. But Davis also gave her entire being to her audience. Her tear-jerking performance in Dark Victory and Camille will never be touched. Her insufferability in All About Eve and neurosis in What Ever Happened To Baby Jane? give a new generation of actors a true goal to strive for.

Davis stayed active and disagreeable to the end. She passed away shortly after receiving an award in France. She may be the only person alive to make David Letterman behave on his show.

But what we will remember about Davis are her eyes, those large, soulful eyes that could just as easily strike terror in your heart as grant the love that she longed to give.

The red-headed comedienne that will forever be known to the world simply as "Lucy" caused most of five generations to cry—not because of her passing, although we mourned her death indeed, but because she made us laugh so hard, all we could do was cry.

Ball broke ground in television for women long before feminism was born. After her divorce from Desi Arnaz, she took his half of their studio, Desi-Lu, and with hers, went on to create a mega-conglomerate that turned out hit television shows one after the other. But what Lucy will be remembered for were her antics.

No other person, living or dead, could manage to get themselves into as many jams as Lucy did. Whether it was working in a candy factory or stomping grapes in Italy, Lucy could get herself into trouble faster than you can say "Ethel."

Lucy passed away with the best wishes and love of an entire nation with her. She discovered what we knew all along, we all loved Lucy.

Irving Berlin is responsible for the creation of the American popular song. No other songwriter in the world has influenced the culture and music of a nation more than Berlin did.

What made Berlin's songs special was that they were written for John Q. Public. They did not smack of elitism or pretense. No, they were written to strike a common cord in the heart of an entire nation.

Whether Kate Smith was singing God Bless America or Bing Crosby was crooning White Christmas, Berlin's songs reached the soul of America.

Sir Laurence Olivier was not American but his acting enriched the U.S. nonetheless. Olivier was the actor's actor. There was no role Shakespeare had written that Olivier could not carry off well.

His marriage to starlet Vivien Leigh was not exactly the stuff of fairytales were made of, but they endeared themselves to a star-hungry America.

The problem today is that there are no more truly great stars. There was a time when movie stars fulfilled our need for royalty but with the likes of Pee Wee Herman and Ernest, it appears there has been a bit too much inner-breeding in Hollywood.

What separates stars of yesteryear with those of today is glamour. As each of these greats pass on, part of our collective memory dwindles. We loose that part of our heritage that once made the world turn with awe to Hollywood. It causes us to remember that true stardom is fleeting.

Rivermen Win Two To End 1989

by Mike Van Roo sports editor

The UM—St. Louis men's basketball team closed out the 1989 year with two impressive wins before the start of Christmas vacation.

On Dec. 9, the Rivermen played host to Fontbonne College and came away with an easy 87-61 win.

They jumped off to a 4-0 lead and never trailed in the first-ever meeting between the two schools.

James Williams started things for the Rivermen with a jump shot and Chris Pilz followed with a layup before Dino McKinney put Fontbonne on the scoreboard with a 3-point shot. The Rivermen then ran off five straight points to increase the lead to 9-3.

Fontbonne could get no closer than two points (13-11) the rest of the game as the Rivermen started to pull away midway through the first half. They went into the locker room with a 41-29 half time lead.

Chris Pilz lead UM—St. Louis with nine first half points, while Barry Graskewicz had seven and Von Scales six.

The second half provided head coach Rich Meckfessel a chance to play everybody as the Rivermen's lead at various times hit 30 points (72-42 and 87-57).

"It was good to win a game especially after the disappointing trip to Alaska," Meckfessel said. "This game gave everybody an opportunity to play."

Graskewicz lead the Rivermen in scoring for the game with 15 points. Chris

Pilz had 14, Von Scales 12, and James Williams added 11. "James got some open shots and made them," Meckfessel said. "Rebounding and defense are his primary roles, if he can score, that's a bonus."

Meckfessel also mentioned the play of Tom Smith who came off the bench and contributed eight points and five rebounds for the Rivermen. McKinney lead all scorers in the game with 24 points.

The Rivermen traveled across town to face the Bears of Washington University on Dec. 16 and came away with an 84-71 victory.

UM—St. Louis' speed and quickness turned out to be one of the deciding factors in the game as the Rivermen outscored Washington U. 39-24 including 18 offensive rebounds.

"We rebounded well and played hard defensively," Meckfessel said. "This was probably our best game of the season. For one of every two shots we took and missed, we got the offensive rebound back."

The Rivermen were pretty much in command all night even though the Bears stayed within striking distance until early in the second half.

Mark Stanley came off the bench to hit a 3-point shot early in the game to give UM—St. Louis a 15-9 lead. Graskewicz followed up with a 3-point shot moments later to help improve the lead to 25-17.

"Mark came in early to hit a couple of big 3-point shots for us," Meckfessel said. He was the first player off the bench for the Rivermen that night.

"The first one off the bench for us depends on who gets into foul trouble early, and that's who we substitute for," Meckfessel said.

The Rivermen appeared headed for a blowout as Kevin Hill hit consecutive baskets to give UM—St. Louis a 35-22 lead. But Washington U. outscored the Rivermen 10-3 at the end of the first half to cut the Rivermen lead at half time to 38-32.

UM—St. Louis started the second half with an 8-2 run including a nice one handed slam dunk by James Williams on a breakaway layup to give the Rivermen a 46-34 lead. The Bears could get no closer than nine after that.

Graskewicz lead the Rivermen in scoring for the second straight game with 16 points.

"Barry played well and put the ball on the floor and got off some jump shots away from his 3-point range," Meckfessel said.

Von Scales had 14 points and 6 rebounds against the Bears while Chris Pilz added 13 points. "The nine guys who played the most contributed most of our scoring," Meckfessel said. The other six included Kevin Hill (10 points and 5 rebounds), James Williams (8 points and 6 rebounds), Mark Stanley (8 points), Tom Smith (7 points) and Stan Longmeyer and Steve Roder (4 points each).

Asked to assess his teams performance for the season before the holiday break—"We haven't played as well as we're capable of," Meckfessel said. We probably should be 6-3 now (versus the current mark of 4-5). We need to win some games that weren't expected to win in 1990, maybe on the road against Southeast, Central Missouri, or SIU—Edwardsville."

The UM—St. Louis Icemen Cometh

by David Barnes reporter

The newly formed UM—St. Louis hockey team has skated to a 1-1-1 record.

"I was pleased with everybody's effort," said team president Wayne Gholson about their 8-4 loss December 27 to Meramec. "Everybody was enthusiastic and happy about playing."

The Icemen have had only one practice session together. "They don't play enough to know what to expect from each other," said faculty advisor Dr. William Long.

The team had tryouts this fall and 19 players made the team.

"I can see a lot of talent," said Gholson, "but it's going to take time to get things together."

The Icemen are applying for recognition from student government this year. "We want to make the team more than just players," said team vice president Shelle Hassenforder, "we want to get people involved."

The Icemen are hoping to receive help from SGA to pay for ice time. Skating rinks charge $100 to $120 an hour for off hours such as midnight or early morning. The referees in the games must also be paid.

Presently, the team chips in their own money for skating time.

All of the players have had experience from playing with high school or Brentwood league teams.

During the first period of the game against Meramec, the Icemen showed their unfamiliarity with each other by missing passes and failing to make set-ups.

As the game progressed though, the team began to work together more and connected on a greater number of passes. The Icemen scored two goals in the second period and two in the third.

"We played well in the offensive zone," said Icemen Roger Buenger.

"Our first line [George Katinas, Scott Nelson and Dave Dagenais] was real good," said Gholson. "They're going to be a bright spot this year."

Nelson, Jeff Esserman, Dagenais and Katinas all scored one goal.

The Icemen also started slow in their first game against Washington University. They came back from a third period 2-1 deficit and gained a 3-3 tie.

The Icemen blew out the of Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville 26-3 on January 4.

Tryouts open to all UM—St. Louis students will be held January 17 at 10:45 p.m. in the North County Recreation Complex. Those interested should call Shelle Hassenforder at 524-2881.

Riverwomen Trounce McKendree, Wash. U.

by Mike Van Roo sports editor

The UM—St. Louis women's basketball team improved their season record to 4-3 with a pair of victories over McKendree College and Washington University before the holiday break.

The Riverwomen trounced McKendree College 107-63 Dec. 9 at the Mark Twain Building.

Monica Steinhoff continued her blistering scoring ways by pouring in 40 points against McKendree including four of eight from 3-point range.

"I expect Monica to score 30 points for us every night," head coach Bobbi Morse said.

Keeping true to form, Steinhoff currently is the number one leading scorer in the nation in NCAA Division II competition with a 29.4 average. Steinhoff has already set the school record for most points in a game with 41 in the season-opener at McKendree.

The Riverwomen jumped off to an easy 46-25 half time lead against McKendree by hitting 19 of 40 field goal attempts for 47.5 percent.

Morse also liked the play of Kim Cooper who contributed 18 points and 11 rebounds. "We got a good game from her," Morse said. "She was kind of down after the SIU—Edwardsville game."

Lisa Houska (12 points and 11 assists) and Tammy Putnam (16 rebounds) were also cited by coach Morse for their good play against McKendree. Putnam has lead the Riverwomen in rebounds in four of their seven games this year.

The Riverwomen ended the year in a winning way by defeating Washington University 77-56 on the Lady Bears home court Dec. 16.

"The team played real well," Morse said. "The team jelled together that night. It was a good win for us and puts us above .500 (4 wins, 3 losses)."

The Riverwomen got probably their most balanced scoring effort of the year as Lisa Houska lead the team in scoring with 18 points. She also contributed six assists and had three steals. "She played very well for us, especially in the first half," Morse said.

Kris Earhart had a season high 15 points and five rebounds for the Riverwomen and Kim Cooper contributed 12 points and a game-high 10 rebounds for UM—St. Louis. "Kim played by far her best game of the year," Morse said.

Scoring wiz Monica Steinhoff only netted 11 points against Washington U., but Morse didn't seem too disappointed. "The win proved that we can win even if Monica has an off-night," Morse said.

Morse also was impressed with the play of Christie Silver against Washington U. She had 8 points and 9 rebounds. "It was a good game for her," Morse said.

As the year closed out Morse thought the team would be 5-2 heading into the new year. "I'm not happy with 4-3, but I'm not real upset with it either," Morse said. "I think we finally jelled in the game against Washington U."

As Morse heads into her first year of competition in the MIAA, she knows she has her work cut out for her. "We're looking forward to the start of MIAA play in 1990," Morse said. "Central Missouri (8-0) and Southeast Missouri (6-2) will be the teams to beat. Pittsburg State will also be up there."

As to the play of her team to date—"Monica has been playing pretty well," Morse said. "Lisa Houska's leadership has stood out for us and Christie Silver has been our most improved player."

Kim Cooper

Three Receive Accolades

Three UM—St. Louis athletes received post-season honors at the end of last year. Seniors John Galkowski and Dave Gauvain were named Division II soccer All-Americans by the National Soccer Coaches Association of America, and senior Karen Ellingson was named to the All-South Central Region team by the American Volleyball Coaches Association.

Galkowski, who lead the Rivermen in scoring in 1989 was named first team All-American, and Gauvain, who played midfield and at stopper was picked as a second team defender.

"Both individuals are very deserving," head coach Don Dallas said. "They continue the fine tradition of great All-Americans we've had here down through the years. To be selected among the top 22 players in the country is quite an honor."

Ellingson, a middle hitter, helped the Riverwomen to a 42-11 record in 1989. She was a first team selection on the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association all-conference team.

A two-time MIAA "Hitter of the Week," Ellingson wound up fourth in the MIAA in attack percentage (0.35) and was 10th in the nation in blocking average (1.53 blocks per game).

She was the MVP of the Red & Gold Invitational and also earned a spot on the UM—St. Louis Invitational all-tournament team.

Ellingson is only the second all-region pick in UM—St. Louis volleyball history. Sharon Morlock was the first in 1987.

Swimmers Lose Two

The UM—St. Louis men's swimming team suffered a pair of losses to close out the year before the Christmas break and a trip out to California on Dec. 27 for two weeks of training to prepare for the California-Irvine Invitational on Jan. 6.

The Rivermen fell to UM—Rolla 66-47 and to host school Washington University 57-56 on Dec. 8 in the tri-meet.

"It's too bad we lost, because we had our best swims of the season," head coach Mary Liston said. "We swam great."

Jeff Heveroh smashed the school record in the 200-yard breaststroke with a time of 2:09.12. He took more than six seconds off of his previous best of 2:15.92. "That was an amazing drop from one meet to the next," Liston said.

Heveroh's time puts him within one second of the national-qualifying time of 2:08.31.

Other top performances were turned in by Mike Brickey who swam the 50-yard freestyle in 21.57 seconds (Which is within reach of the national-qualifying time of 21.24). Brett Woods in the 100-yard freestyle, Steve Applebaum in the 200-yard freestyle, Gene Edmiston in the 1,000-yard freestyle, Devlin McDonough in the 200-yard butterfly, and Mark Rush in the 200-yard individual medley.

Sophomore diver Lenny Miller continued to be impressive as he won both the 1 and 3-meter diving competitions.

"We did what we wanted to do," Liston said. "It was incredible competition. We just fell a little bit short. But it will help us later in the season. Certain people will know how to approach pressure situations in different ways."

Who Will Have Steve Garvey's Baby This Year?

by Mike Van Roo sports editor

As this story is written a few days before the start of the decade of the 1990s, I hope that Santa Claus was good to everyone and your favorite team made the NFL playoffs (mine didn't!). Maybe almost all of the pro football teams should make the playoffs like almost all the teams in hockey and basketball. Naah, that would be another story in itself.

Here are some more musings about what happened in sports and what might happen in sports in the new decade to come...

I wonder if Billy Martin will kick sand on the shoes of St. Peter to let him get into heaven?

What if every college player decided to turn pro before he graduated at the lure of big bucks?

Since Wayne Gretzky was named "Top Athlete of the 1980s" then Michael Jordan must have broken that mold...

Talking about baseball on a night when temperatures and wind chills were both in the negative double digits sure makes one think of spring training and opening day...

Will Mizzou ever beat Illinois in a college basketball game?

If the Phoenix Cardinals and the New York Jets played on a neutral field, who would you bet on? Would you care?

Whatever Brett Hull wants in a new salary contract, Brett Hull SHOULD get in a new salary contract from the Blues...

I'd like to see Bo Jackson try his luck at basketball...

Speaking of Bo, I wonder what's worth more, his rookie football or rookie baseball card?

Speaking of Bo-Part II, I wonder how Michigan will fare now that they lost their Bo? Is that like Little Bo Peep who lost her sheep...

He's Baacccccckkk... Is this the year that Pete Rose gets reinstated?

Who do you think is a bigger jerk—Buddy Ryan or Jerry Glanville?

Will Gene Autrey ever BUY a championship for his beloved California Angels?

I think that Jim Palmer and Joe Morgan will make the Hall of Fame

this year...

In a call-in poll during this year's NHL All-Star game from Pittsburgh, fans can choose their favorite player of all-time from a list of five who excelled in their era's. Who would you pick?—Maurice Richard (1940s), Gordie Howe (1950s), Bobby Hull (1960s), Bobby Orr (1970s), and Wayne Gretzky (1980s).

Who's going to be baseball's first six-million dollar man? Will he be able to throw better than TV's bionic man?

In horse racing, does a jockey really make that much difference?

Will Monica Steinhoff score 50 points in a game before the season ends?

Did the departure of Herschel Walker from the Cowboy's really make them that much worse?

Will anyone ever break Roger Maris' home run record?

If the Phoenix Cardinal's had the number one draft pick in the NFL this year—would that really help?

Who's your all-time favorite Sports Illustrated swimsuit beauty?

Will there ever be a greater sports movie than "Raging Bull"?

Would you believe that "Rocky V" will be coming out this summer?

Speaking of movies, what did you like better "Bull Durham" or "Major League"?

Does anyone really admit to watching golf?

In hockey, what's the difference between icing and offsides?

Can you believe that they're going to use instant-replay for hockey?

They could have used it in the 1985 World Series when Don Denkinger was asleep at first base...

What's your favorite beer when you go to a ballgame?

Will Dal Maxvill ever get the credit he deserves?

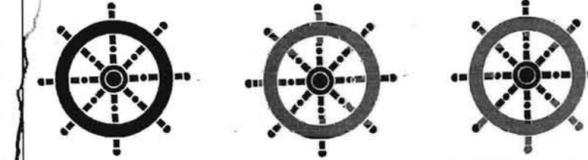

I think the Blues will miss Greg Millen. Especially in the play-offs...

Is Fredbird more popular than Neil Lomax?

Art Holiday is REALLY St. Louis' best television sportscaster. So what's he doing the news for?

Will Ron Jacober ever get a lucky break?

Did anybody have Steve Garvey's baby this week?
