Sexy Legs walk free: apology expected from fraternity

by Jeremy Rutherford
news editor

The Student Court voted not to suspend the Sigma Pi fraternity's recognition for one semester, perhaps the largest of the three requests made by Tonya Hutchinson during a hearing Monday.

Hutchinson and Sigma Pi spokesperson Tom O'Keefe gave 15 minutes of testimony before four Student Court justices Monday afternoon, despite O'Keefe's claim that he did not receive a court order until 11 a.m. that morning. The Court adjourned after two hours without reaching a decision.

Thursday, Chief Justice Steve Bartok said the Court does not have the authority to punish individuals or organizations in its cases, but he said the Court has made the following recommendations to the Senate Student Affairs Committee:

- That Sigma Pi shall not lose recognition as a student organization.
  - That Sigma Pi shall not be placed on probation of any kind.
- The statement continued, "We have determined that the allegations of sexism and the promotion of violence against women are Codes of Conduct laws. Student Court does not have the authorization to deal with these matters and if necessary, they will be handled by the Senate Student Affairs Committee."

Bartok said Thursday that maybe the 15-minute forum wasn't the best idea, but he said, "it was time to get down to business."

DOCUMENTED EVIDENCE: Tonya Hutchinson (right) argues that the Sigma Pi fraternity used misjudgment, as Janie Archey, an adjunct faculty member, looks on.

Hutchinson asked the Court Monday to remove Sigma Pi's recognition for one semester, and to mandate a letter of apology in The Current and on a sign as large as the "Sexy Legs II" sign. Despite not one of Hutchinson's requests being honored, O'Keefe said he is not satisfied with the court's ruling.

"No way," O'Keefe said. "Basically, their response is one of passing the buck, and I think both Sigma Pi and Tonya Hutchinson have every right to be very upset with the way (Bartok) has handled the matter because he could have said this back in September: 'Sorry, not our job. Take it to Student Senate Affairs.'

"I wasn't pleased that they didn't make a decision," he said. "They say that they don't have the power to determine guilt or innocence. My argument would be they did, if they're advising Student Affairs to take up the matter. Apparently from their position, we're guilty, or at least there's enough evidence to think we are guilty, in which case they made a decision, albeit an indirect one, they made one."

The Court also made these recommendations to the Sigma Pi fraternity:

- That Sigma Pi write a formal apology to Tonya Hutchinson, as they did to the Women's Center.

- In the future, Sigma Pi should design its signs, so as not to offend anyone on campus.

- Also, in the future, Sigma Pi should be more aware and more under-

Student fee increase approved, set to rise in summer session '95

by Matthew J. Forsythe
editor-in-chief

The proposed fee increases in UM-St. Louis Facility and Activity are set to take effect in summer session 1995.

The proposed fee increase totals 17.5 percent and will raise the present fee from $9.07 per credit hour to $10.66 per credit hour. A student taking 12 hours will see their fees go from $108.84 to $127.92.

Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Lowe "Sandy" MacLean said that fee increases reflects the direction of the five-year developmental plan. The University is presently in the third year of the plan.

MacLean said the University is shifting general operating funds away from student facilities and activities in order put more of those monies toward programs considered higher priorities in the five year plan. MacLean said because of this, student fees will go up to compensate for the shift in funding.

"[UM-system President George Russell] gave us priorities," MacLean said, "and told us to reallocate resources to meet those priorities."

MacLean said the eminence programs that would receive more general operating funding included the libraries, research, chemistry, political science, computer labs, and graduate and professional programs.

The proposed fee includes increases in the offices of Student Activities, University Center, and Athletics. There was also a proposed increase in the Recreation/Facility Fee.

Student Government Association (SGA) has requested an increase of 8 percent that would be used to cover inflation and give more money to student groups to expand programs. President Chris Jones said the Student Activities Budget Committee (SABC) would receive part of the funding to give more money to student groups.

Bob Schmalfeld, director of University Center, said the monies generated by their increased fee would be used to replace monies lost from the general operating funds, to pay off the

Female student falls victim to robbery

Suspect at large in second violent robbery on campus

by Jeremy Rutherford
news editor

A female student was struck and thrown to the ground during a robbery outside the Thomas Jefferson Library Thursday night. The suspect stole $20, and is still at large.

About 7:10 p.m., a woman was walking on West Drive, when she was approached by the suspect and struck in the mouth, authorities say. "She had a contusion to her lip, and that was the extent of the injuries," said Robert Roeseler, director of safety operations. "She refused medical attention."

The suspect is a white male, age 25-30 years, 5 feet 6 inches tall and 180 pounds with a medium build. The victim told police the suspect had brown hair, brown eyes, and he was wearing a blue baseball cap and black sweat shirt. Roeseler said the UM-St. Louis Police Department has interviewed the victim several times since the incident. The department has also sent fingerprints to St. Louis County Police.

This is the second violent robbery on campus this year. The first was July 25, when a man was robbed of $52 dollars at gunpoint in Benton Hall.

Roeseler denies that there is a growing trend of more serious crimes on campus.

"To say that this could have only happened on the UM-St. Louis campus, there's no way to justify that," Roeseler said. "It was someone taking the opportunity to take $20 from someone else."

Holidayfest '94 lights campus community

UM-St. Louis contributes 96 food baskets, $400 to Northside Team Ministries

by Beth Robinson
associate news editor

If you walked through University Center last week, you couldn't have missed the huge Holiday Fest tree that lit up the entire lobby of the building.

The tree was decorated for the celebration of Holiday Fest '94. This year is the tenth year it has been celebrated.

Activities for Holiday Fest '94 were scheduled Nov. 28 to Dec. 2. This event is a community building activity sponsored by the University Center office.

The event was held to celebrate the holiday season and to collect money and food for donation to Northside Team Ministries who distributes it to needy families in the St. Louis area.

Departments on campus, student organizations and individual people donated money and canned goods. Last year $294.62 and 116 food baskets were collected for donation.

Food baskets were collected from departments and student organizations and put under the holiday tree in the University Center Building. The tree was decorated on Wednesday with ornaments from different departments and student organizations.

"This year $400 and 96 food baskets were donated to Northside Team Ministries," said Marsha Miller, administrative secretary at University Center.

Sigma Pi fraternity was in charge of collecting the food baskets from the various departments and student organizations.

NTA has a service area that surrounds the water tower on Grand Avenue.

Jan Huneke said the clients have used the NTA food pantry for several years.

"The donations from UM-St. Louis help out incredibly," Huneke said. "At least one hundred or more families will receive food. Any assistance we can provide during this time of the year, helps out."

Honor society awards two students golden key

by Beth Robinson

The Golden Key National Honor Society awarded $300 scholarships to two UM-St. Louis students.

This year's junior recipient is Catherine Sieveking, a resident of St. Louis. Sieveking was excited about receiving the scholarship.

"I was really surprised," Sieveking said. "I thought they would choose from people in the Honors College."

She carries a 4.0 grade point average and is majoring in special education. Sieveking was nominated to the national dean's list by Phi Theta Kappa and was the recipient of the Tau Kappa Epsilon scholarship.

Kimberly Burke, also a resident of St. Louis, is the senior recipient.

"I was totally surprised," Burke said. "It feels good to be recognized for working hard. I really appreciate it."

She carries a 4.0 grade point average and is majoring in secondary education. Burke was the recipient of the Thomas K. Knapp Memorial Scholarship and has been on the dean's list since coming to UM-St. Louis last year.

"The criteria for membership is the top 15 percent of people on campus,"

Don't peg this one

by Matthew J. Forsythe
editor-in-chief

Just when you thought you had Generation X pegged the perceptions change once again.

Being part of Generation X, I like to keep track of the way the main stream media and the local talk on the grapevine portrays our 20-something generation.

If you are still wondering about the sixties/Generation X connection, you don't have to go far to find some similarities in this week's events. There has been a lot of negative talk from social critics about our generation admiring the freedom of the '60s but lacking a hard activist edge.

The past two weeks should put to death any doubts they might have had about members of our generation being too quiet, at least on the UM-St. Louis campus.

The recent protest on campus in response to a sign put up by a fraternity is an example of some of the recent activism that was generated on campus.

The "Sexy Legs 11" controversy, and subsequent student court hearing, made a lot of noise on this campus, and I for one am glad the two different groups had their say in a forum made very public by the media.

The court hearing was written about in the St. Louis Post Dispatch talked about on KMOX radio and shown on KMOV Channel 4. In fact, I have probably left out a few media sources on which the event was discussed. Both sides had their say, and not a stone was left unturned in the whole controversy.

I think people speaking out was good for the whole campus. People were forced to use their brains and figure out where right and wrong was for them personally on this issue. Sometimes our society is caught up in the apathy of the social doldrums. Why take the time to challenge anything? There isn't any problems with our society anyway, right?

Wrong. Time to wake up. That is why I think it is revolutionary when people take the time to protest what they find offensive. Then it is even more fascinating when another group takes the time to protest the protest. Now that is diversity- Generation X style.

The whole situation helps to challenge the stereotype that Generation X is a bunch of freeloading, drug using, non-activist hippies caught in the negative backlash of the 1960s. "Sixties light" as one social critic put it, all of the booze and chemical substances with none of the bad after taste of social consciousness to bring them down.

Well think again. One member of the administration even had the audacity to say to me that with this controversy it seemed like UM-St. Louis was a real campus.

By this he meant he was glad people were standing up for what they believed in and showing their true colors in the demonstrations on campus. He was excited at seeing the University campus becoming a political hotbed of activity again. It seems that Generation X can generate some action of its own. So the people that try to peg us as lazy hippies, please take the time to redefine us again.

Or better yet, drop your definitions altogether. I can give you a hint here- Generation X is so diverse, defining who and what we are is a useless project. In fact diverse is not the word. Our generation needs a broader term than diverse. There exists an idea and opinion for every individual. No idea or opinion is untried in this day and age and instead of there being two ways of viewing things there are a million ways, all of them crisscrossing and conflicting and constantly changing. Subjects that were once fair sailing are now dangerous waters and the old ways of thinking will not get you through to the old safe answers. They simply don't exist any more.

So the lesson this week on Generation X is: don't try to put us into a definition. By the time you are finished defining us we will have already changed.

THE COURT THAT COULDN'T MAKE A DECISION.

Student Court decision straddles issue, misses hand of justice

by Clint Zweifel
managing editor

The Student Court has missed the mark in their decision on the "Sexy Legs" controversy.

The Court has escaped its responsibility of setting a strong precedent by effectively not making a decision. Because the Court's decision straddled the issue, Tonya Hutchinson and Sigma Pi fraternity should walk away feeling slighted that the Court has neglected to uphold its responsibility.

One of the Court's recommenda-

They also recommend that Sigma Pi write a letter of apology to Hutchinson.

By recommending the fraternity write a letter of apology to Tonya Hutchinson, it would seem the Court believes Hutchinson was wronged. If this is not the case, then the Court's decision should force Sigma Pi to look at what the sign implies.

The Court's decision does not accomplish that, though. Their decision did not force Sigma Pi to take a more educated look at the implications of their lawn sign. If Sigma Pi was wrong, then a punishment should be in order. Recommending they should be more "aware and understanding" is flimsy and lacks specifics.

The Court should have taken a look at what happened to WKBQ-FM (104.1) disc jockeys' Steve Shannon and D.C. Chymes after they made on-the-air racial comments. Both Shannon and Chymes were forced to take sensitivity courses before returning to work.

That decision was a solid one. The station's management admitted the disc jockeys' made a mistake and provided a way for the entertainers to take a serious look at what they said.

If Sigma Pi really is in the wrong, as the recommended apology would indicate, then the Court needs to make a real stand on their belief and realize there is no justice in straddling an issue.

portance of a paper trail. If a case arose five years from now that is similar to Hutchinson vs. Sigma Pi, and there were no records of the case, the Court would have no basis to make a decision consistent with the precedent.

Without solid record-keeping, the ideals of the Court could change drastically year to year. Right now, the Court does not know their own history, and until the Court builds a collection of documented precedents, it will be free falling through the ruling process.

Without solid record-keeping, the ideals of the Court could change drastically year to year. Right now, the Court does not know their own history, and until the Court builds a collection of documented precedents, it will be free falling through the ruling process.

Student Court badly in need of paper trail for judicial precedents

by Clint Zweifel
managing editor

Organizations and businesses are forced to keep detailed accounting records to ensure efficiency and success.

The Student Court should not be any different. If the Court does not keep records of precedents they have set, lethargy and apathy take over, leaving the body ignorant of the past and unable to make informed decisions—a problem this year's Court and future ones could face.

Steven Bartock, chief justice of the Court, said he is not aware of any records of past precedents on file. Kel Ward, Student Government Association (SGA) vice president, said he is only aware of the records he kept last year during his tenure as chief justice.

Ward's record-keeping is at least a start. The Court needs to continue this documentation, though, or last year's record-keeping will become a waste of time.

Rick Blanton, assistant director of the Student Activities Office, said blame cannot be placed on any particular administration. He said record-keeping has been deficient in SGA offices throughout the 25 years he has been with the University.

Blanton said at least 90 percent of all student court cases concern traffic tickets. Documentation of the remaining 10 percent of the cases is integral to the workings of the Court. The most recent non-traffic case proves the importance of a paper trail. If a case arose five years from now that is similar to Hutchinson vs. Sigma Pi, and there were no records of the case, the Court would have no basis to make a decision consistent with the precedent.

Without solid record-keeping, the ideals of the Court could change drastically year to year. Right now, the Court does not know their own history, and until the Court builds a collection of documented precedents, it will be free falling through the ruling process.

Voice of the people...

Group members need to take objective look at themselves, reader says

Dear Editor,

I thought it very ironic that a member of the Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Students for Change group complained about getting space in The Current when the group monopolized the entire "Voice of the people" section in issue 807. I'm sure the article in question that the Lesbian, Gay and Bisexual Students for Change group wanted publicized was going to be objective and not flame any other organization on campus like Sigma Pi in any fashion.

In response to the over-used, ever popular, gay person's favorite buzz word, homophobia, I would encourage the group members to take an objective look at themselves to recognize that maybe they are just a little "heterophobic," "sexismphobic" and "racismphobic." If anybody witnessed the young lady in front of the student center on the 14th, you'll know what I'm talking about.

I am a heterosexual, white male, and I am really tired of hearing how bad I am. Do you really think for a second that life has been any cake walk for me? I'm not sexist, racist, homophobic, or any label of the like. I've put in my four years at UM-St. Louis. I'm graduating in May and I'm proud.

Correction

In issue 809, two errors were made in the story titled "Election analysis proves positive for 42":

•The College Republicans were identified as the main organization involved in a meeting at Director of Public Policy Center Lance LeLoup's home titled "Demise of the Democrats: An Autopsy." The Political Science Academy organized the meeting.

•In the same story, Eric Barnhart was identified as the president of the College Republicans. Student Government Association Comptroller Beth Titlow is the president of the College Republicans.

standing of women's issues. O'Keefe said the fraternity is not planning to apologize to Hutchinson. "As far as writing an apology, as they said they can't make us," O'Keefe said. "At this time, we have no intentions of writing an apology. Our opinion is one of, we didn't do anything offensive."

"We've already written an apology to the Women's Center on behalf of women on this campus," he said. "We really don't feel like we have to write a personal apology to every woman on this campus and do bulk mailing in order to make sure they get it. Until they make us, we have no intention of writing an apology."

Hutchinson, who waited three months for the Court to hear her case, said she was a victim of Student Court procedure.

"I am terribly disappointed, but I expected as much," Hutchinson said. "This issue is like a hot potato. No one wants to touch it. The administration threw it to the Student Court and it was too hot for them. Now, the Student Court is throwing it back to the administration, who I feel is ultimately responsible."

Justice's Jerry Conwell, Shannon Pack and Jackie Miller voted unanimously on the recommendations after two days of deliberations. Bartok ob-we made after the deliberations we had.

"I don't think it was something deliberate," said Conwell, referring to Sigma Pi's judgement to display the "Sexy Legs II" on campus. "It wasn't something they tried to do or anything."

The Court made a third recommendation to the Office of Student Activities.

That all board signs must be approved before any student organization places them on campus. We suggest that a picture or a drawing of the board be attached to the Campus Wide Posting Request Form.

Conwell said the last request made to Student Activities is perhaps the most important.

"The Activities office should have seen the sign before okaying it," he said.

Bartok said Sigma Pi vs. Tonya Hutchinson is over, but the "Sexy Legs II" issue may be far from over.

"If another charge is brought up, we will as per required by (Student Government Association) constitution and bylaws, deal with it. That's our job."

"As far as this particular argument, with these particular circumstances," he said. "It's closed; it's over."

Hutchinson quoted Fredrick Douglass, an African American man partly responsible for the abolition of slavery.

"Power concedes nothing without demand," Hutchinson said. "I think it's time for the students and faculty that have privately supported me to come forward publicly and say in a unified voice, that this type of overt sexism will not be tolerated."

"I feel the administration was being super slick in holding this off until the end of the school semester, but they were wrong in assuming that we would go away," she said. "(The administration) can look forward to hearing from us for the rest of this semester and then again next semester."

1.5 percent of maintenance and repair costs that the central administration mandates on all buildings and to cover the cost of inflation.

The 1.5 percent for maintenance and repair is a recent mandate by UM-system. The University must pay 1.5 percent of total value of each building on campus which then goes into a UM-system general fund. This fund is then set aside for future costs relating to maintenance and repair of all buildings on all four UM campuses.

In other SGA news... the executive board decided to take another look at SABC applications. The executive board needed to pick two more voting members, and solved its problem by taking the two alternates and changing them to voting members. On Friday the committee reviewed the applications in order to appoint two new alternates. This would bring SABC up to the correct number of voting members (9) and the correct number of alternates (2). SGA plans to submit the revised list to the SGA Assembly for approval on Tuesday, Dec. 6.

said Dennis Bohnenkamp, senior lecturer at Pierre Laclède Honors College. "Then the national organization picks the scholarship recipients based on records that were sent in."

The annual membership induction for the Golden Key National Honor Society chapter at UM-St. Louis was held on Nov. 6, in the Convocation Hall. Academically superior juniors and seniors in various areas of study at UM-St. Louis were initiated into the Society.

A certificate of membership was given to each new member. Activities for the upcoming year were announced and the scholarships were awarded to the outstanding junior and senior initiate.

Several people were selected for honorary membership in the Society and were recognized at the ceremony. Honorary members included: J. Frederick Fausz, dean of Pierre Laclède Honors College, Thomas McPhail, interim associate vice chancellor, Roosevelt Wright Jr., vice chancellor of Academic Affairs, Dennis Bohnenkamp, teaching fellow, Terrence Jones, dean for the College of Arts and Sciences and Blanche Touhill, chancellor. Honorary members receive full rights and privileges of the Society. They are selected based on their contributions to the community, the University and its students. Over 5,000 honorary members have been named to the Society including President Bill Clinton, author Alex Haley and former First Lady Barbara Bush.

Golden Key National Honor Society is one of the nation's most dynamic academic honors organizations. The objective of the Society is to unite diverse individuals while nurturing and rewarding the academic efforts of top students in all disciplines.

Since its inception in 1977, the Society has chartered chapters at colleges and universities in the U.S., Puerto Rico and Australia and has initiated over 450,000 lifetime members.

Golden Key chapters are student-run, active organizations on campuses. They create and organize projects which promote academic achievement, serve the community and provide social interaction.

The UM-St. Louis Golden Key chapter will hold a meeting in January to elect new officers.

Also selected for honor were four UM-St. Louis teachers. These teachers were selected for the third edition of 'Who's Who Among America's Teachers.'

Deborah Kristine Baldini, St. Charles, is a senior lecturer in the foreign languages and literature department. Barbara Frye Burns, Maplewood, is a lecturer in the English department. John Frederick Fausz, North St. Louis, is the dean of Pierre Laclède Honors College.

James Edward Tierney, South St. Louis, is a professor of English.

"These teachers are an inspiring example of the best that the University has to offer," said Chancellor Touhill.

All of the teachers were selected for this honor by former students who are listed in the National Dean's List.

Give and Take

Well folks, this is the last issue of the fall semester. Hard to believe that it's gone by so quickly, but isn't that always the case?

I was sitting around talking to Clint Zweifel earlier tonight (I'm writing this on Dec. 2) trying to decide what I should write my last column of the year about. We were both in a change the world state of mind and the conversation, as it often does with us, drifted toward the University and changes we would like to see in it.

Before I tell you what some of my ideas were, I want to say that I think UM-St. Louis is an admirable institution of higher learning and research. Everybody knows we need some improvements though, otherwise we wouldn't be implementing the Master Plan.

Today someone asked me about something which reminded me of a question I posed to myself a month or so ago. Why doesn't UM-St. Louis have some sort of disposal/ collection system set up for recyclable materials, primarily aluminum cans?

I must admit I almost always go to the Underground and get a large Hi-C pink lemonade for a buck twenty-two when I'm on campus and find myself with a thirst that needs quenchin' fast, so I wouldn't be utilizing them. But that's me. There are a whole bunch of people out there who drink a Coke or two every time they're on campus. And even though you'll find a portion of them that don't have any home training and don't know how to use a trash can, I think you'd find a greater majority that would embrace the idea of disposing of their recyclable waste in an environmentally conscious manner.

I'm not talking about one monstrous bin planted in the TJL quad either. Have them indoors and out, well marked (Maybe even decorated?) and easy to get to.

Now the person who foots the bill for this place is saying, "Well who's going to pay for these things, and who's going to pay the salary of the person who goes around emptying them?"

To this I say I suspect the money for something as worthwhile as this could be found. As for paying someone to empty them, we're already paying someone not to unlock all of the doors. Why not add the duty to that person's job description?

In all seriousness, we wouldn't have to pay any one to empty them. If you haven't noticed, we have a couple of elderly folks who visit the campus every now and then and collect aluminum cans from the present all-purpose receptacles we have. As cynical as I can be, and for as much depravity as I have witnessed, it still kinda gets me when I see these folks, and it made me smile when I thought of them being able to get their booty without having to dig through the rest of our waste.

Another idea came to me back in early fall when I was being driven from the almost crazy, maze-like sanctuary of the botanical garden (Has anyone else ever gotten lost in that thing?) onto the TJL helo-pad. As I sat there on the ground, leaning my back against the concrete bench, I thought how nice it would be if they had some kind of patio furniture out there. Some big round tables and sliding chairs with armrests. Not a lot of them—you don't want to make it look cluttered or have it causing traffic jams. A little cafe casualness to it, maybe even have umbrellas for the brutally hot days.

This got me thinking about the glass pyramid on the west side of TJL. I'm no expert on architecture, but I kinda like it, and I've always thought it was a shame that the lawn space around it was never utilized for anything. But it probably would be if there was something to sit on other than the ground. Imagine some lounge chairs lined around the edge

J.C. Penney converted into 16th century manor for holiday feast

by Scott Lamar
associate features editor

The Holiday Madrigal Feast was conducted at UM-St. Louis in the J.C. Penney Building Dec. 2-4. The feast, which featured roasted prime rib and flaming pudding, was attended by 150 guests who were entertained by the University's Madrigal Ensemble.

Associate Music Professor and Director John Hylton said that all 10 years the department of music has put on the Madrigal Feast have been successful for both the community and the students.

"Almost every performance since we began in 1984 has sold out," Hylton said. "It's a good musical experience for the students, and it's a good means for the university to relate to the community, since most of the people who come are from the surrounding area."

Jason James, a sophomore music major who played the lord this year, described the Madrigal Feast as a reenactment of the times when the lord and lady of the manor would have a dinner party and invite everyone over for holiday merriment.

"They would gather in the castle hall after dinner and sing about their feelings," James said. "That is what we are doing."

An example of this is the song "Fair Phyllis," about a woman who has lost her love.

Along with the musical experience of the Renaissance, Gabe Amsden, a junior music major, said the decor and atmosphere of this type of feast are most appealing.

"The Elizabethan period is the most decorative and festive," Amsden said. "We've tried to make everything from the costumes to the food as accurate with the Elizabethan period as possible."

The 12-member group, donned in 16th Century costumes, mingled with the guests as the "Lord" and "Lady" of the manor gave incoming guests a-

Rat's Reviews

by Michael J. Urness of The Current staff

Kenny Klein is a man who's worn many hats in his lifetime. For years the 39-year-old New York native has traveled the country following the Renaissance festival circuit and playing Old English and Irish folk tunes on his violin.

On his latest Blackthorn Records release, "Gold of the Autumn," Klein, accompanied by a stellar group of studio musicians, plays both traditional folk and that of a more progressive style.

The new CD begins with "The Wales," a Klein original that is sung from the perspective of an old seafarer remembering bygone days of the whales which had become extinct because of oil spills in the late 1990s that killed off the plankton that mighty beasts fed on.

In "Drifter" Klein spins the woeful tale of one who, having lost his job, wife and children, follows the road enduring hardships at every turn.

My personal favorite on "Gold of the Autumn" is an interesting little ditty titled "Keep Your Legs Together Jenny." This one speaks volumes for the damaging effects of sexual repres-

The Current gets whipped in charity basketball game to benefit diabetes

by Eric Thomas
reporter

On Nov. 29 the staff of The Current decided to leave the sanctity of their house on Natural Bridge and meet a team from the athletic department on the court in Mark Twain for a charity basketball game to benefit the Diabetes Foundation. Almost $70 was collected from the event.

Pete Dicrispino, sports editor for The Current, was the instrumental figure in making the arrangements.

"I was really pleased with the way things turned out," Dicrispino said.

"It's a shame we only had three weeks to pull it together."

The roster for The Current consisted of Dicrispino, Jack Dudek, Jeremy Rutherford, Scott Lamar, Rob Goedeker, Ken Dunkin, Leon Devance and Eric Thomas. The team for the athletic department consisted of Leigha

Gibbs, Ryan Reeves, Tod Schmidt, Darin Scott and Ken Hudson.

Despite their good intentions, most of the team from The Current didn't have the stamina to keep up with the physically fit members of the athletic department team, though new sports editor Rob Goedeker showed everybody that he doesn't only write about sports.

The game was back and forth for about the first five minutes. Then, around 10 minutes into the game, members of The Current team started signalling for substitutions. The team from the athletic department basically dominated from that point on.

The final score of the game remains a mystery because the scoreboard was shut off five minutes before the end of the second period. But the athletic department team has a commanding lead with a score of 76 to 37 at that time.

After the game Clint Zweifel, managing editor of The Current, said, "There was great cooperation on everyone's part. I appreciated the spirit shown by those who showed up."

Zweifel also said that he would like to see the event become a regular thing.

"I'm planning on making this an annual event," he said. "It was great to see these student groups working together to benefit the outside community."

by the wall; a few picnic tables scattered around the pyramid—no concrete benches thank you. People are there in the sun studying and sleeping and tanning and whatever else might come to mind. I think it would be cool. You could even host quiet events there, like arts shows, acoustic performances and open mikes.

Something like this would also be nice around Bugg Lake. For those of you who weren't at UM-St. Louis before the 90s, the lake by Stadler and Benton Halls is called Bugg Lake, and it used to be a marshy, untamed stretch of land. I don't have classes over there anymore, but I noticed a few semesters ago that they had cleaned it up; put a fountain in and a little boardwalk; improved the floral quality.

Well why not go a few steps further. Extend the boardwalk and offer some seating. Wooden benches would work for some of us here because there would be the rails to lean on. Maybe build a little snack shack. And could you think of a better place to situate a small bandstand? I would love to catch an afternoon concert by one of our Music department's string quartets or jazz combos in that atmosphere.

To be fair I must remember that the University is working to improve and repair (mostly the latter) the physical landscape of the campus. And that's cool with me. I mean, you don't build a new swimming pool when you have a leaky roof.

I've been talking about aesthetic improvements that I would like to see, that I think would add some life to this campus. But there is something that is lacking on this campus that detracts from student life more than a comfortable place to sit down.

Student involvement, folks. I've never attended any university other than UM-St. Louis, so I can only gauge it by what I hear from those of you who relate your experiences at other universities to me. There is no denying that, partly because UM-St. Louis is a commuter campus, student participation in activities and organizations suffers. They do, however, exist. I know because I assign people to cover the stuff. Major authors, artists and politicians, leaders in the fields of science and business, speaking and meeting with people and conducting symposiums. There were 86 student organizations last year. I don't know how many there are this year. And the only thing that keeps these events and organizations from being as engaging and active as those you find at other universities is the lack of student involvement.

My point is, student attendance at events and involvement in organizations on campus creates administrative awareness. I'm tired of hearing people whine about this University when all they do is park, go to class, and leave. If you as students want UM-St. Louis to become the university you desire it to be you have to make those desires known to those who's job it is to make this place as student oriented as possible. Don't leave it up to a middle-aged administrator to read your minds or an eavesdropping columnist to repeat what you think is wrong around here.

It's give and take people, so stop giving the University shit if you're not going to take advantage of what it does offer or take a couple of hours a week to make the situation better.

It's just a thought. Have a nice holiday.

sion. Jenny is a young girl whose mother's harsh words concerning boys and sex haunt her every time she becomes aroused.

Of the 10 songs on this new project, eight are Klein originals. The other two are traditional medleys—"Paddy on the Turnpike/Mason's Apron" and "3 Morris Dance Tunes-Constant Billy, Shooting and Jockey to the Fair."

In addition to being a masterful songwriter and storyteller, Klein is also an accomplished musician who plays violin, guitar and bass in addition to singing.

I had the good fortune to catch Klein's one-man show Friday, Nov. 4 in the cafeteria at St. Louis Community College at Meramec. Klein was invited to resurrect the old "Meramec Coffee House" which was a popular attraction at that school in the 1970s. (Is anybody on the Student Programming Board getting any ideas?) Klein was playing an old country-blues tune and was doing it quite well when I arrived.

"I don't get the chance to play the blues when I'm at the renaissance festivals," he said, "so I like to play them when I can."

Klein played tunes by blues greats like Robert Johnson, Blind Lemon Jefferson and Leadbelly accompanied by his own slide guitar. In addition he played several old folk songs, and he even managed a cover of Richard Thompson's "1952 Vincent Black Lightning."

You can catch Klein playing his blend of old English and Irish folk on the violin as well as his slide guitar and country-blues prowess when he returns to St. Louis for a show at the Off Broadway bar Dec. 10.

Tapes and CDs of "Gold of the Autumn" are available at Streetside Records.

Blackthorn Records, the label Klein is recording on, is a subsidiary of Missin' Records of Raytown, Mo.

Even if this man wasn't a Missouri artist on a Missouri label, the Rat would still give "Gold of Autumn" five chunks of cheese.

gal greeting. Upon entering, each guest was given an ornament to put on the Christmas tree in the J.C. Penney lobby and directed to the brimming bowl of wassail, a drink consisting of hot cinnamon cider and orange slices.

Around 7 p.m. the ensemble sang two songs of the season before everyone adjourned to The Great Hall (the Summit Lounge). After the guests were seated, James addressed the room on the rules of etiquette, which amused many people.

"Guests must never leave bones on the table, always hide them under the chair," he said. "Guests should never wipe their greasy fingers upon their beard. Guests must not lean on the table with their elbows nor dip their thumbs in their drinks."

This was followed by the Boar's Head Processional, in which the members of the ensemble carried in a boar's head and displayed it in the middle of the room.

A 7-course dinner was then served. During dinner a harpsichord played for the guests, and a jester bounced from table to table entertaining people.

After dinner, the Madrigal Ensemble treated the guests to a concert of renaissance music from England with songs like "When Laura Smiles," "Tobacco Fumes Away" and "Toss the Pot."

For Pete's Sake

by Pete Dicrispino
sports editor

*The time is drawing near Show strength and have no fear
Three years have gone by fast
The memories will always last
Don't be sad, this is no mistake
This is the final For Pete's Sake*

Since this is my final week at The Current I thought I would leave the members of the UM-St. Louis Athletic Department with some Christmas gifts.

To baseball coach Jim Brady, I give a college World Series Title. No one in the athletic department works harder to put a winner on the field than Jim. He deserves the credit.

To softball coach Harold Brumbaugh, I give a new softball field on campus. Maybe with a new field Harold will be a happier guy around campus.

To women's basketball coach Jim Coen, I give a magic wand. Jim is going to need it this year. He will have to act like a magician to pull off a winning season with only six players.

To men's basketball coach Rich Meckfessel, I give you some good luck. It's about time some bounces started going your way. Maybe then you can have a winning season for the first time since 1991.

To men's assistant basketball coach Bill Walker, I give you a head coaching job at a Division I school of your choice. So it might be a little stretch, but just work with me Bill.

To women's soccer coach Ken Hudson, I give you another 20 goal scorer to play along side Jenni Burton. Plus, I'll throw in a few more players, so your not down to 12 at the end of the year.

To men's soccer coach Tom Redmond, I give you some glue. You will need it next year to bring together a very talented team, which should Improving their record to 3-2, the UM-St. Louis Rivermen basketball team defeated the Lindenwood Lions in their first home game of the season 85-70.

Riverman guard Marcus Albert hit several key 3-pointers in the second half to help propel them to victory.

The Rivermen had the touch from outside—a key reason they defeated Lindenwood so easily. They shot 53 percent from the 3-point line. Albert led the team with 18 points, with many of those coming during clutch situations in the second half.

Early in the second half, Lindenwood threatened to overtake the slim five point lead the Rivermen were maintaining. Albert made sure that they wouldn't get any closer than that.

With much confidence, he lined up and drained a 3-pointer. After Lindenwood guard Scott Kotovsky matched Albert with a 3-pointer of his own, Albert then took his next shot for three. It fell in with a pop as it hit the bottom of the net. The game was over from that point.

"Anytime we are at home I feel very comfortable shooting," said Albert, who hit five of seven from the 3-point line. "I hardly ever miss at home. I just felt the shots and took them."

The team had a good day although there were some flaws in their playing. Lindenwood had 14 offensive rebounds. Riverman head coach Rich Meckfessel said that total needs to go down.

"I'm satisfied with the win, but I'm not satisfied with the way we played," Meckfessel said. "We gave up far too many offensive rebounds. We could have played better. We shot the threes pretty well but we had a lot of turnovers.

The Rivermen finished with 38 total rebounds as opposed to Lindenwood's 39. Rodney Hawthorne led both teams with eleven boards. He also chipped in with 10 points.

"Rodney is coming around," Meckfessel said. "This is only his third week of practice since his appendectomy."

Eric Bickel finished with nine points, eight rebounds and two blocked shots. Kevin Tuckson added six rebounds, 13 points and four blocked shots.

So why wasn't anybody happy? A possible reason could be that the team realizes how much potential they possess. The Lions came into the game with a 1-6 record.

"We have the chance to be really good, but we have to do some things better," Meckfessel said.

Jim Robinson finished the game with 14 points. He also shot three of five from the 3-point line. Lawndale Thomas led the team by dishing out six assists, and Mark Lash came off of the bench to score 12 points.

The Rivermen improved their record to 4-2 with a convincing victory over Fontbonne College 86-60.

Surprisingly, the score stayed close throughout most of the game. With 13 minutes to play, the Rivermen were only leading 44-43, but eventually came together and outscored the Griffins by 25 points.

Late in the game, the Rivermen started to hit their shots. Their confidence kept increasing and it was just too much for the Griffins to handle. Guard Marcus Albert lead the Rivermen in scoring with 17 points. Forward Rodney Hawthorne added 13 points.

Next, the Rivermen will travel to Quincy Dec. 7 and Washington U. Dec 10. Both games begin at 7:30.

Riverwomen spear Spartans

by Rob Goedecker
associate sports editor

Going into the game against the 1-6 Missouri Baptist Lady Spartans, the Riverwomen felt a little sore from a couple of tenacious practices just days before the game.

But they went into the game with confidence and held on for the 85-72 victory last Thursday at the Mark Twain Building.

"It was a nice win," said head coach Jim Coen, "but I really never thought the game was in jeopardy."

With the help of some sharp three-point shooting by guard Laura Satterfield and forward Melissa Yates, the Riverwomen took control of the game early. Midway through the first half, Yates hit a couple 3-pointers, 21 seconds apart, to give the Riverwomen a 26-15. She finished with a season high 22 points and was six for eight from the 3-point line.

"I just wasn't thinking about it," Yates said. "Usually I worry about not hitting my three's, but I didn't tonight." Satterfield finished with 19 points, but had an off-night from the 3-point line. She was four for 13.

"I started out feeling pretty good," Satterfield said, "and I was open a lot." Then came the second half.

"They started to pick me up on defense. Number 11 (Spartans guard Tammi Conley) was practically in my drawers."

"They took Laura out of the game," said head coach Jim Coen. "They just weren't going to leave her open."

Satterfield didn't get her first three-point opportunity until five minutes left in the game.

With Satterfield feeling a little tied up, Yates stepped in and did a tremendous job picking up the slack.

"She played a great game," said assistant coach Nancy Hessemann. "We're always looking for Laura to shoot the three's, but when she's not shooting the ball well someone has to step up, and Melissa did a great job."

The Riverwomen ended the first half with a 50-28 lead. Then in the second half, the Riverwomen started to feel fatigued.

The Lady Spartans started the half with a 14-6 run to cut the Riverwomen's lead to 56-42, during which UM-St. Louis shot two for six from the field.

Just when the things started to go south, Yates got the Riverwomen back into the game with her fifth 3-pointer of the game. That sparked a 5-0 run for the Riverwomen, and they never looked back.

With the Riverwomen up 69-48 and about eight minutes left in the game, Coen's heart skipped a beat. Guard D.J. Martin had to leave the game after falling on her elbow when she got tangled up with a Spartan player.

Laura Satterfield is carrying Riverwomen on her shoulders

by Pete Dicrispino

The game plan for the UM-St. Louis women's basketball team is simple. Get the ball to Laura Satterfield as much as possible. And after the first four games, the Riverwomen's game plan is working like a charm. They are 3-1 this season and are off to a good start.

"She's shooting the ball and playing really well right now," said head coach Jim Coen.

Satterfield's main weapon is her ability to shoot the 3-point shot. Throughout the first four games, Satterfield attempted 76 3-point shots and made 28 of them.

In the Tampa Tournament earlier this year, Satterfield was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player. During the tournament, Satterfield established school records for 3-point field goals made (11) in one game and attempted (25) in another game. Both marks are just one below the national record for Division II schools. Satterfield is averaging exactly seven 3-point field goals made per game.

"I was happier about the percentage of the shots I made, instead of the record," Satterfield said. "I was happy with the 11 of 21 in one of the games."

Satterfield attributes most of her success to the way the team has come together.

"No one expected us to do well because we only had six players," Satterfield said. "But we have come together, and we are really good friends. We are going to surprise some teams."

In the two-game tournament, Satterfield scored 58 points and made 16 of 38 shots from 3-point range. She scored a career-high 39 points against the University of Tampa, the game in which she broke her own record with 11 3-point baskets.

"She's one of the best 3-point shooters I have ever seen," Coen said. "She has such a quick release and that is what makes her so effective."

Satterfield is the main weapon on the team, and the Riverwomen try to use her in a variety of ways.

"We have a couple of plays designed to get her open for a shot, and we also use her as a decoy," Coen said. "She usually brings a crowd with her and that means someone else is open for a shot."

Satterfield appreciates Coen designing plays for her, but wants to be known for more than just a shooter.

"I want to contribute in other ways," Satterfield said. "I want to be a better all-around basketball player."

The other players on the team don't have a problem with getting Satterfield the ball, because she is also one of the most unselfish players on the team.

Riverwomen lose to Lions

by Rob Goedecker
associate sports editor

For the Lindenwood Lions, the game plan was plain and simple. Shut down Laura Satterfield and the Riverwomen's perimeter shooting.

The Lions played out their plan to perfection and beat the Riverwomen 72-65 Sunday at the Mark Twain Building.

"We gave our maximum effort, but we just didn't play very well," said head coach Jim Coen. "We turned the ball over a lot, only hit two threes, and we didn't take advantage of their mistakes."

The Riverwomen fell behind early. Halfway through the first half, the Riverwomen found themselves down by 15 points.

"They [Lions] did a great job not letting us shoot around the perimeter," Coen said. "We didn't do a good job with taking the advantage of driving the basketball, other than D.J. [Martin]."

With the perimeter shooting at a standstill, the Riverwomen needed to start using their inside game. But with 6-foot-4 center Jade Turner ineligible for the first se-

Coaches Corner

Featuring
Dan Bostelmann

Assistant Swimming Coach

One thing I can't stand is: People who try to act like someone they're not. I like people who act like themselves and try not to live up to anyone else's expectations, but their own.

People who knew me in college will say: That was the time I changed from a high school kid to an adult. Those who knew me throughout high school and college saw a large change. I became more responsible.

Fantasy: I would like to continue swimming and go back to the NCAA Tournament again and win.

What I like best about coaching: The opportunity to work with athletes from about 9 years old to about 22. What I like to see is the combination of the learning from swimming and the learning from life they get along the way. The changes are so drastic from the time they're nine to 22. It's really neat to see them as they grow and progress, not only in the sport, but in life as well.

If I could change one thing about myself: I would quit saying yes to everything. I make myself too busy.

Favorite sport (other than swimming): Water polo.

Favorite water polo player: My swimmers. I'm just getting into water polo this year, and I haven't seen very much of it before. In the games I've had the chance to see, the kids who were playing are the ones who swim for me.

My impressions on the way sports have become a business: I think it's highly unprofessional. In swimming we're trying to become more professional so more people can make more money from the sport, but as for the rest of the sports, I think they've gotten carried away. I mean, how much money is a sport really worth.

Favorite TV show: Simpsons, I watch it every day.

Favorite restaurant: S & P Oyster Company.

Favorite fast food: Fazoli's
Favorite childhood memory: The first time I qualified for the YMCA nationals when I was about 15 years old. I was the first swimmer on my team to make the qualifying time.

What I would want people to remember about me: Whenever someone needed me to be there for them, I would try my best to be there.

by Rob Goedecker

Birthplace: St. Louis, Mo.

College: Graduated from UM-St. Louis in 1993 and has returned to UM-St. Louis to get a teacher's certificate in physical education so he can teach at the high school level.

Favorite college memory: In 1992, when I swam at UM-St. Louis, we went to the NCAA Tournament. I was a part of two different relays that made All-American status. I placed sixth at the tournament.

Personal hero: Tom Jager. He's the world record holder in the 50-yard freestyle. He's 30-years-old, and he's still swimming. He's still planning on going to the Olympics again. He just has an endless determination. He just keeps going, and no one can seem to stop him.

*Deferred Apple Computer Loan offer expires February 17, 1995. No payment of interest or principal will be required for 90 days. (Some resellers may require a deposit to hold merchandise while loan is being approved.) Interest accruing during this 90-day period will be added to principal, and the principal amount, as so increased, will thereafter bear interest which will be included in the repayment schedule. Monthly payment is an estimate based on the following information: For the Power Macintosh 6100 CD system shown here, a purchase price of $2,646.96, which includes 5.98% sales tax, including loan fees, the total loan amount is $2,589.38 which results in a monthly payment obligation of $41. For the Performa 6115 CD system shown here, a purchase price of $1,804.75, which includes 5.98% sales tax, including loan fees, the total loan amount is $1,909.79 which results in a monthly payment obligation of $33. Computer system prices, loan amounts and sales taxes may vary. See your authorized Apple Campus Reseller or representative for current system prices, loan and tax amounts. Loans are for a minimum of $1,000 to a maximum of $10,000. You may take out more than one loan, but the total of all loans cannot exceed $10,000 annually. A 5.5% loan origination fee will be added to the requested loan amount. The interest rate is variable, based on the commercial paper rate plus 3.35%. For the month of November, 1994, the interest rate was 10.8% with an Annual Percentage Rate of 12.10%. 8-year loan term with no prepayment penalty. The monthly payment and the Annual Percentage Rate shown assume the 90-day deferral of principal and interest described above and no other deferral of principal or interest. Students may defer principal payments up to 4 years, or until graduation. Deferral will charge your monthly payments. The Apple Computer Loan is subject to credit approval. Satterfield from page 7

One of the reasons for Satterfield's record-breaking success has been the increase in playing time. With only six players on the roster, Satterfield plays the whole game.

"She getting more shots this year because she is getting 13 to 14 more minutes of playing time from last year," Coen said.

Coen doesn't want Satterfield to think too much about only break records.

"We don't talk about that at all," Coen said. "We get her the ball because that is what we need to do to win. The records are just a bonus."

"The records are nice, but I never think about it," Satterfield said. "I just try to help the team win."

Thanks to Satterfield, the Riverwomen are on a record pace in the 3-point shooting department. In four games the Riverwomen have made 43 of 115 shots from 3-point land. Their shooting 36.8 percent, an average of 10.8 3-pointers made per game. The Riverwomen finished third nationally in Division II last year in 3-point field goals made per game (8.1).

Satterfield believes the team can win with only six players.

"We just have to keep our attitudes up and stay positive," Satterfield said. "I just want to be an assets to the team in any way. I want to be a total team player."

RIGHT ON THE MONEY: Riverwoman guard Laura Satterfield takes a shot in practice. With the help of her deadly 3-point shooting, she has become the Riverwomen's leading scorer.

mester, the Riverwomen are left with only one true post player in Angie Stubblefield.

"If we had another post player, we would have been in good shape," Coen said. "Until we get Jade back in December, we've just got to keep our heads above water."

The Riverwomen were led by guard Nicole Christ with 17 points, eight rebounds and seven assists.

"She [Christ] had a really good game," said guard Laura Satterfield. "They were trying to get her into foul trouble and out of the game, but she handled the pressure really well."

Stubblefield added 16 points (6 for 7 from the field), and Satterfield scored 13 points (2 for 9 from the 3-point line).

She returned two minutes later, but with only six players on the roster, any type of injury would be drastic.

"I was afraid she broke her wrist or elbow," Coen said. "To us, that would be devastating. To lose a starter would just kill us."

Center Angie Stubblefield had a field day, scoring a season high 27 points along with nine rebounds.

Guard Nicole Christ had a solid performance with nine rebounds and nine assists.

The Spartans were lead by guard Sherri McFarland with 24 points.

With a 72-65 loss to the Lindenwood Lions on Sunday, the Riverwomen dropped their record to 3-2. The Riverwomen's next game is Dec. 7 when they host Harris-Stowe at 7 p.m.

Another approach to the celebration of the holiday season is to participate in Kwanzaa.

Kwanzaa is a seven day African American cultural holiday celebration that is recognized annually beginning on December 26 to January 1.

Dr. Maulana Karenga, University of California professor, developed the Kwanzaa concept based upon the activities surrounding the traditional African celebration of the harvest of the first crops. The festival of Kwanzaa combines traditional African practices and symbols with African American hopes, ideas, realities and creativity.

The seven principals upon which KWANZAA is founded are the Nguzo Saba. They serve as guides for daily living. The principles are (in this order) as follows:

- UMOJA - Unity
- KUJICHAGULIA - Self Determination
- UJIMA - Collective Work and Responsibility
- UJAMAA - Cooperative Economics
- NIA - Purpose
- KUUMBA - Creativity
